

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

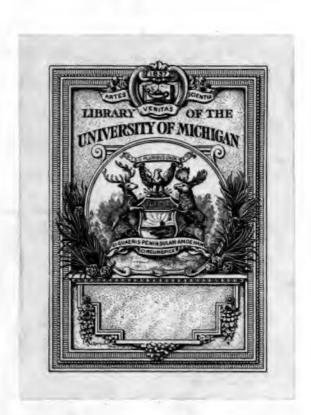

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

A TEXT-CRITICAL APPARATUS TO THE BOOK OF ESTHER

LEWIS BAYLES PATON

The Book of Eather in the numerous versions and recensions presents so many striking differences from the Massoretic form of the text that it has seemed to me worth while to gather the variant readings and present them in a complete text-critical apparatus. For this purpose I have made use of the following sources:

- R = Codex Sinaiticus, according to Swete, The O. T. in Greek, 1896.
- A = Codex Alexandrinus, according to Swete.
- Ald = The Aldine text of &, according to Holmes and Parsons, Vet. Test. Graec. cum Variis Lectionibus, III, 1823.
- B = Codex Vaticanus, according to Swete.
- Ba = Baer and Delitzsch, Quinque Volumina, 1886.
- Br = The Pentateuch, Five Megilloth and Haphtaroth, Brescia, 1492, according to Ginsburg, Massoretico-Critical O. T., 1894.
- B¹ = Bomberg Rabbinic Bible, Venice, 1516-17.
- B' = Bomberg Rabbinic Bible with Massora, Venice, IV, 1526, according to Kittel, Biblia Hebraica, 1906, and Ginsburg.
- BT = Babylonian Talmud.
- C = Complutensian Polyglot, Alcalá, 1514-17.
- 6 = The Greek Version as represented by the uncials and the cursives, except L.
- G = Ginsburg, Massoretico-Critical Edition of the Hebrew Bible, 1894.
- H = The Hesychian recension of £5, represented in general by codd. 44, 68, 71, 74, 76, 106, 107, 120, 236.
- The consonantal Hebrew text.
- 3 = The Latin version of Jerome, or Vulgate.
- Jos = Josephus, Antiquities, xi.
- JT = Jerusalem Talmud.
- K = Kennicott, Vet. Test. Heb. cum Variis Lectionibus, 1776.

4 TEXT-CRITICAL APPARATUS TO THE BOOK OF ESTHER

- L = The Lucianic recension of &, represented by codd. 19, 93a, 108b; ed. Lagarde, Lib. Vet. Test. Can. Graece, 1883. (Codd. 93 and 108 contain two recensions of Esther: 93a and 108b that of L; and 93b and 108a that of O.)
- L = The old Latin version (Itala), according to Codex Corbeiensis; ed. Sabatier, Bib. Sac. Lat. Vers. Ant., 1751.
- LP = Old Latin, Codex Pechianus, according to Sabatier.
- M = J. H. Michaelis, Biblia Hebraica, 1720.
- ## = The Massoretic Hebrew text.
- N = Codex Basiliano-Vaticanus (= XI, according to Holmes and Parsons).
- N¹ = The Hagiographa, Naples 1486-87, according to Ginsburg.
- N² = Hebrew Bible, Naples 1491-93, according to Ginsburg.
- O = The Origenic recension of \mathfrak{C} , represented in general by codd. 52, 55, 64, 93b, 108a, 243, 249, according to Holmes and Parsons, and Field, Origenis Hexaplorum quae supersunt, 1875.
- Oc = Occidental MSS or Massoretic authorities.
- Or = Oriental MSS or Massoretic authorities.
- Q = The Qërë, or marginal readings of M.
- R = De Rossi, Variae Lectiones Vet. Test., 1786.
- S = Hebrew Bible, Soncino, 1488, according to Ginsburg.
- \mathbf{S} = The Syriac version.
- 3A = The Syriac version in Codex Ambrosianus.
- 5L = The Syriac version in the London Polyglot.
- SM = The Syriac version in the Mosul edition.
- SU = The Syriac version in the Urumia edition.
- \mathbf{E}^1 = The First Targum.
- T = The Second Targum.

The readings of the cursives are all taken from Holmes and Parsons. They are as follows:

- 19 = Rome, Chigi R vi. 38 (cf. Bianchini, Vindiciae, 279 ff.; 19 = Lagarde's h).
- 44 = Zittau, A 1. 1 = Lagarde's z (cf. Gen. Gr. 7 ff.).
- 52 =Florence, Laur. Acq. 44.
- 55 = Rome, Vat. Reg. Gr. 1 (cf. Klostermann, Analecta, 12).
- 64 = Paris, Nat. Reg. Gr. 2 (cf. Field, i. 5).
- 68 = Venice, St. Mark's, Gr. 5 (cf. Scrivener-Miller, i. 219).
- 71 = Paris, Nat. Reg. Gr. 1.
- 74 = Florence, Laur. Acq. 700 (49).

76 = Paris, Nat. Reg. Gr. 4.

106 = Ferrara, Bibl. Comm. Gr. 187 (cf. Lagarde, Ankündigung, 27).

107 = Ferrara, Bibl. Comm. Gr. 188.

108 = Rome, Vat. Gr. 330 (cf. Field i. 5; 108b = Lagarde's d).

120 = Venice, St. Mark's Gr. 4.

236 = Rome, Vat. Gr. 331 (cf. Klostermann, Analecta, 78).

243 = Venice, St. Mark's Gr., 16 (cf. Field, i. 486).

248 = Rome, Vat. Gr. 346 (cf. Nestle, Marginalia, p. 58).

249 = Rome, Vat. Pius 1 (cf. Field ii. 2).

Aquila, Symmachus, Theodotion, Gothic, and Syro-Hexaplar do not exist for Esther, and the Ethiopic, Coptic, and Arabic secondary versions are not accessible in printed editions. The text of the Armenian version of \mathfrak{G} is so corrupt that it did not seem worth while to secure its variants from one familiar with Armenian.

My method has been to take the Textus Receptus of Van der Hooght (1705) as the standard of comparison, and to record deviations from it in MSS, editions, or versions. Variations of accentuation in the Hebrew, which do not affect the interpretation, and which for the most part represent only the notions of particular punctuators or schools of punctuators, such as Baer's בְּבְּמֶר for בְּבְּמֶר, תַּיְעֲבִר for וְיַעֲבִר, מָרְהְּכֵי for בְּבַּמֶּר, or Ginsburg's insertion of Raphe over all quiescent or aspirate letters, it has not seemed worth while to include. In the case of the long passages that are found in GLL, but not in H, I have taken Swete's edition of Codex Vaticanus as the standard of com-These passages I have inserted in full as additions to , and have recorded the variants in footnotes. Variants in the versions which represent the same Hebrew word I have not attempted to record; for instance, when שמתה by $\delta o \chi \eta \nu$ and L by $\pi o \tau o \nu$. To have recorded all the variants of this sort would have been useless and would have swelled this article to an enormous size.

THE APPARATUS FOR THE TEXTUAL CRITICISM OF CHRONICLES-EZRA-NEHEMIAH

CHARLES CUTLER TORREY

I did not at first intend to devote a separate article to this subject, as I did not wish to take the time and space which would be necessary. But in the process of editing and annotating the portions of the text which are to follow, it became evident that some extended justification of my critical procedure would be indispensable. The original plan of setting forth the most necessary facts in an introductory page or two, to be supplemented by subsequent footnotes, might have left room for the suspicion of arbitrary or hasty methods. Other considerations, moreover, seem to make it especially desirable that I should give here some clear account, however brief and imperfect, of those parts of the apparatus regarding which I feel able to speak with confidence. The chief of these considerations are the following: (1) No critical use has ever been made of the versions of these books, nor even of any one Greek version or recension. (2) No attempt has been made to determine or state the principles of such critical use. (3) The conclusions which I have already reached and stated in regard to some of the versions and recensions of the Ezra history are so revolutionary as to need all the added corroboration of this nature that can be given them.

I do not wish to seem to deal unfairly with those recent publications in which some attempt has been made to emend the massoretic text of the one or the other of these books: Kittel's Books of Chronicles, 1895; Guthe-Batten's Ezra and Nehemiah, 1901; these being the reconstructed Hebrew-Aramaic text of the Polychrome Bible; also Benzinger's Bucher der Chronik, 1901; Kittel's Bucher der Chronik, 1902; Siegfried's Ezra, Nehemia und Esther, 1901; Bertholet's Ezra und Nehemia, 1902; and Marti's edition of the Aramaic portions of Exra in his Grammatik der biblisch-aramdischen Sprache, 1896. But in the following pages sufficient evidence will be given to justify fully the assertion that no one of these attempts, so far as its treatment of text and versions is concerned, deserves to be called "critical." In all of these cases the procedure is without any fixed principles, or any preliminary study of either text or versions with a view to ascertaining their character. Moreover, no one of these scholars shows any approach to thoroughness in his employment of the materials which he actually attempts to use. If in any instance the criticism of the text went so far as to include the careful taking of the testimony of even codex B (ordinarily called "the Septuagint") throughout the whole extent of the book or passage treated, the evidence of this fact at least does not appear, while numerous indications seem to show the contrary.

(4) Many other facts, hitherto unobserved, regarding manuscripts and versions and their characteristics and mutual relations are so important as to deserve some treatment here, at least in outline. In particular, the proof of the very momentous fact that Theodotion was the author of our "canonical" Greek version of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. ought at last to be rendered.

I. NATURE OF THE TEXT-ORITICAL PROBLEM

In our Hebrew-Aramaic tradition of the Chronicler's history, we have a text which is neither one of the well-preserved of those which constitute the Old Testament, nor yet among the very worst. The many lists of names have been carelessly handled, and are in correspondingly bad condition. The narrative portions read smoothly on the whole—smoothly, that is, when their authorship is taken into account—but nevertheless give plain evidence of being corrupt in many places. The trouble lies not merely in single words and phrases, but also in the apparent misplacement of a few long passages, one of which consists of several chapters. There is ground for the suspicion, moreover, that one or more passages of importance have been lost from our massoretic recension. There is good evidence of a gap after Ezra 1:11; something is plainly missing between 6:5 and 6:6; while the presence of the Story of the Youths in I Esdras suggests its own important problems.

When we come to the testimony of the Greek versions, we are confronted with two somewhat widely differing forms of the history. One of them agrees quite closely with MT, and has the same extent and arrangement; the other—obviously a mere fragment—begins near the end of Chronicles and extends not quite through the story of Ezra. During the part of the history covered by the two in common, the difference between them lies in (1) the words and phrases of the narrative, the divergence here (i. e., in the Greek) being very great; (2) the position of extended passages; (3) material of very considerable amount found in the one recension but not in the other. We have in the Greek, moreover, clear testimony to two differing Semitic texts, the difference being such as to suggest either a long history of transmission along independent lines, or else an unusual amount of freedom in the handling of the texts. Of course, both of these causes might have been operative. And finally, each one of the two main forms of the narrative, the "canonical" and the "apocryphal," has come down to us in a double Greek tradition, the one embodied in Lagarde's edition, and the other contained in the most of the existing manuscripts, including the codices (A, B, N) used in Swete's Old Testament in Greek. That is, for a portion of the Chronicler's history amounting to about thirteen chapters, we have at every point to compare four Greek texts.

The following discussion of the critical apparatus is only fragmentary, leaving a good many highly important matters either half treated or not touched upon at all. It contains the things in which I have happened to be especially interested, being in the main based upon collations made and facts observed by me twelve years ago, in the course of my study of the literary and historical problems of Esra-Neh.; and the conclusions are the same, with some slight modification, as those which I then reached. But though the discussion is incomplete, I believe that it will at least lay a sure foundation for further investigation.

Of other versions, aside from the Latin of Jerome, which was made from our Hebrew-Aramaic recension, we have to take into account three renderings of the I Esdras Greek, namely, the Syriac (the work of Paul of Tellā), the Ethiopic, and the old Latin. The Syriac and Arabic versions of the canonical Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. have long been known to be late and wellnigh worthless—the Arabic absolutely so—and any attempt to make a critical use or "investigation" of them is a waste of time.

It is evident from this statement of the case that the solution of the textual problem is to be gained chiefly from an examination of the Greek recensions. We need to know the relative age—and, if possible, the actual age—of the two (or more) Greek translations; the principles according to which they were made, and the extent to which they can be trusted; their mutual relations; the character and quality of the Semitic text which lies behind the Greek I Esdras. And it is obviously very important (as it is everywhere else in the Old Testament) to inquire minutely into the history of the transmission of the text, finding out how and to what extent the original readings have been accidentally or deliberately changed, and distinguishing carefully the divergent lines of tradition which can be recognized. What is the real significance, for textual criticism, of the two recensions which are contained, respectively, in the editions of Swete and Lagarde? What manuscripts, or families of manuscripts, are especially noteworthy? We have one absolutely sure witness to the "Septuagint" text of Origen, in the Syro-Hexaplar version of I Esdras and a part of Nehemiah; which of our Greek MSS stand nearest to this version? In a word: On what principles shall one proceed who wishes to study critically the Hebrew-Aramaic text of these books with the aid of this unusually complicated and unusually interesting apparatus?

These are all questions which must be answered before any satisfactory criticism of the text of any part of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. can be undertaken. Up to the present time, the most of these questions have not even been raised, and not one of them has been answered with any approach to correctness. An unscholarly use of "the LXX" has been, more than any other one thing, the bane of modern Old Testament study; and if there is any portion of the Old Testament in which the consequences have been especially mischievous, that portion is Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. Those who have attempted to emend the Semitic text of these books by the aid of the Greek have been wont to take at random any seemingly useful "reading" of the nearest available text of the canonical Greek, or of I Esdras, choosing in each case either codex B (one of the worst possible MSS, as it happens) or "Lucian," as the need of the occasion may decide, treating all alike, and usually without making any attempt to criticize the Greek itself, or to go behind the textreading of the edition which happens to be used. Few of those who have dealt at length with Chron., Ezra-Neh., or I Esdras, have attempted to state what conclusions, if any, they have reached in regard to text and versions. A. Klostermann's article "Ezra und Nehemia," in Hauck's Realencyclopadie, has an account of the several versions of these two "books" which contains a good many acute observations as to details, but does not give much help in matters which are of primary importance. It is remarkable, moreover, that in his whole discussion he should make no mention at all of the I Esdras version. Even a brief examination of this "apocryphon" might have shown him its fundamental significance.

An introductory word in regard to the Hexapla. I have already (AJSL, pp. 65-68) touched upon the status of the Chron. Ezr. books in Origen's great work, and the apparent lack of Hexaplaric material in the MSS which are now known. As for Origen's fifth column, containing his "LXX" text, I shall show in the sequel that we have extremely good information in regard to it. Concerning the other Hexaplaric versions of these books next to nothing has hitherto been known. Field's Hexapla has the appearance of containing some material here, but really gives hardly anything more than a collation of L with the received text. Whether the plus of L is Hexaplar, or not, there is nothing to show. Of specific ascriptions there are surprisingly few, and these are confined to the books of Chronicles. Supposed readings of Aquila are noted in I Chron. 15:27; 25:1, 3; 29:25. Marked with the Σ of Symmachus are readings found in I Chron. 5:26; 9:1; 11:5; 15:27; 21:10; 25:1, 3; II Chron. 12:7; 19:11; 23:13; 26:5; 30:5; 32:5; 33:3; 34:22.

The absence of any readings from Theodotion, ordinarily a favorite among the secondary translators and a frequent source of variant Greek readings, is very noticeable. This fact, of itself, might well have suggested to students, long ago, the probability that Theodotion himself was the author of our standard version of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. As I have previously remarked (AJSL, p. 71, note), no sure trace of the work of Aquila or Symmachus in the book of Ezra-Nehemiah has heretofore been found. I believe that the hand of each of these two translators can be recognized in one or two places, at least, and have no doubt that a careful search would reveal other instances. In all probability, the "Aquila" and "Symmachus" columns of the Hexapla were both duly filled, in the canonical Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., the "Theodotion" column alone being vacant. In I Esdras, on the other hand, the "LXX" column alone was filled, all the others remaining unoccupied.

II. THEODOTION THE AUTHOR OF OUR "CANONICAL" GREEK VER-SION OF CHRONICLES-EZRA-NEHEMIAH

I have more than once stated my own conviction that the translation of the Chronicler's history which now stands in our Greek Bible was the work of Theodotion. Others who have held and expressed this view are Grotius (1644), Whiston (1722), Pohlmann (1859), and most recently, Sir Henry Howorth; see AJSL, p. 121. No one of these scholars, however, excepting the first named, has been able to bring forward any direct evidence tending to establish the theory. The manner of the argument has been simply this: 'Our Greek version of the Chronicler's history bears the marks of a late origin, especially when compared with the version preserved in "First Esdras." Theodotion's version of Daniel supplanted the older translation, in the Greek Bible; it is therefore a plausible supposition that it was Theodotion who made the later translation of the Chronicler's books.' Grotius, in his annotations to the Old Testament, pointed out an interesting bit of evidence, though in such a way as to leave some doubt as to the conclusion to be drawn from it. In a note on II Chron. 35:6, he says that our Greek version of Chronicles is that of Theodotion, while the two chapters (35 and 36) of II Chron. with which I Esdras begins are "from the Septuagint." also adds: "Theodotionis autem interpretationem in Paralipomenis et aliis quibusdam libris recepit Graeca Ecclesia." expresses himself cautiously in this passage, saying nothing either in regard to the remainder of I Esdras or to the canonical Ezr.-Neh., for the obvious reason that the bit of proof which he happens to be using here, namely the rendering of the Hebrew word would be a conspicuous failure in Ezra 6:19 ff. (= I Esdr. "Theodotion," he has just observed, very acutely, 7:10 ff.). "semper vertit φασεκ, non ut alii interpretes πάσχα." The pos-

⁵ Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, London, 1903, pp. 139 f.; AJSL, pp. 67 f.

The assertion is a little too sweeping, for some of the "other translators" rendered the Hebrew word in still other ways, though Grotius may not have been aware of the fact. And indeed, from the citations given in Field's Hexapla it might seem that the transliteration $\phi = \sigma_{\chi}$, outside the books of Chronicles, is not the property of Theodotion. It is not only lacking in Field's list (pp. xl f.) of the Theodotion transliterations, but is even attributed to Symmachus in the three passages where its occurrence is noted by him, sible value of this observation is apparent when we notice that the form $\phi a \sigma \epsilon \kappa$ (or rather $\phi a \sigma \epsilon \chi$) occurs eighteen times in the book of Chronicles, but nowhere else in our Greek Old Testament. As for the one passage in Ezr.-Neh. in which the passover is mentioned, namely Ezr. 6:19-21, it is of course easy to suppose that the long familiar word $\pi a \sigma \chi a$ was substituted at an early date; there were many such substitutions in the early history of the Greek Bible.

The problem of identifying a given translation as the work of Theodotion is in some respects a peculiar one. Whoever makes the search for this translator's own work, with the purpose of setting apart everything that could be called characteristic of him, will probably be surprised to find how little in extent the material really is. We have, it is true, "Theodotion's version" of the whole book of Daniel; but this is in reality merely a revision of the old Greek translation, whose renderings and constructions are generally retained, the alteration consisting mainly in such cutting, shaping, and supplementing as to make it fit closely the later traditional Hebrew text. In the case of the extensive fragments of Theodotion's version of Jeremiah which have been preserved (see Swete, Introduction to the Old Testament in Greek, pp. 44-46) it is not known whether the work is namely Ex. 12:11, 27; Num. 9:2. But whoever examines carefully the material collected in Field's footnotes in these three places will ascertain the following facts: (1) According to the Syr.-Hex. (by far the most trustworthy witness of those cited) the word nob, in Ex. 12:27, was rendered by "the LXX" πάσχα; by Aquila ὑπέρβασιι; by Symmachus κάσχα (not pasex, as Field gives!), the difference from LXX being in the other words of the clause; and by Theodotion "like the LXX." In 12:11 the renderings are the same, except that Symmachus is said to have had πάσχα (not "φασεχ"!) ὑπερμάχησις. (2) Theodoret, whom we should suppose to have had good means of information, says that Theodotion's rendering was $465ex. (3) According to notes found in a few codices, in Ex. 12:11 and Num. 9:2, the transliteration pagex is attributed to Symmachus, or to "Aquila and Symmachus." Such attributions as these last, coming from unknown hands, are notoriously untrustworthy. The ancient copyists, scribblers, and annotators were as careless as our modern ones, which is saying a great deal. False ascriptions abound, and each one is likely to be copied into several other MSS. Hence most of the evidence of "double versions" of Aquila (Field, pp. xxiv ff.) or Symmachus (pp. xxxvi f.). With regard to the rendering of non, the transliteration is exactly in the manner of Theodotion, and not at all in the manner of Symmachus. Indeed, the use of this barbarism by the latter translator would be altogether inexplicable. The fact is probably this: Theodotion's passax was replaced at a very early date, in most MSS, by πάσχα (cf. the many cases of this kind cited below), and in the Theod. text known to Origen the latter word only was found. The Theodotion version was very well known and much used; then, when the rejected word person survived in a few MSS, it is natural that it should have been attributed by some to the work of Symmachus, the least known and used of the later Hexaplaric versions.

merely a version, or an independent effort. At all events, there is here extremely little that could contribute to any basis of comparison with such a book as the Chronicler's history. manner of the author, or reviser, in his attempt to hold fast to the Hebrew, is indeed apparent, and it is the same in all three of the versions named: Daniel, Jeremiah, and the Chronicler; but more definite evidence than this is required. The comparison of the diction of our Greek version of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. with that of Theodotion's part in Daniel reveals a few striking coincidences, which will be noticed below, as well as the obvious general resemblance. In addition to the material already mentioned, we have, for our knowledge of Theodotion's work, only the scattered renderings of his in various parts of the Old Testament which have been preserved in Hexaplar codices. It might therefore seem to be a very difficult matter to collect material sufficiently extensive, and sufficiently characteristic, to serve as a sure basis for comparison. If we were dealing with ordinary translators, this would be true, and a trustworthy conclusion might be despaired of; but fortunately this translator has one peculiarity so pronounced and so well understood that the proof can be rendered complete.

As students of the Hexaplar versions long ago observed, Theodotion's chief characteristic is his tendency to transliterate the difficult or doubtful words of his Hebrew text. See especially Field's Hexapla, I, xxxix-xlii, and Swete's Introduction, p. 46. Because of his extreme caution, he refuses to decide in cases of uncertainty, but simply writes out the troublesome Hebrew word in Greek letters. The extent to which he has done this is very remarkable. Field gives a list (pp. xl f.) of more than ninety words of this kind, collected from the material already known to us as Theodotion's, including the most of the books of the Old Testa-Doubtless this number could be considerably increased, even from the sources which we already have, if we were better able to criticize them; moreover, it may safely be taken for granted that the ancient collectors of Hexaplaric readings generally disregarded such of Theodotion's transliterations as had resulted from an obviously corrupt and easily corrected text. Even in the MSS, indeed, the tendency to get rid of these unnecessary barbarisms is quite marked; see below. Now, this very same striking peculiarity of transliteration is found in the Greek of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., from the beginning to the end of the work, and with the examples pretty evenly distributed. has not hitherto been observed, and the number and character of the instances will probably prove a surprise to Old Testament When the comparison is made with the similar instances collected by Field, it will at once be plain that we are dealing with the same translator. I subjoin a list of the transliterations of this kind which occur in Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., not claiming that it is complete. It will be seen that it includes examples of all the classes of instances found elsewhere in Theodotion. the unusual words, such as בפור ג $\epsilon \phi \phi o u \rho$, תנהרים $\theta a v v o u \rho \epsilon \iota \mu$; words of ambiguous meaning in their context like ακχεχαρ, שרשה σερσερωθ; technical terms not capable of exact translation, such as בחיך $a\lambda\eta\mu\omega\theta$, בחיך $\beta a\theta\omega\nu$. Then there are the many cases where the text had become slightly corrupt. In a considerable number of the examples which follow, the difficulty with the word was due solely to the confusion of 1 and 5 by copyists; thus, $\gamma \omega \lambda \eta \lambda a$ for גיא לילה. In other cases, two of the letters of the Hebrew word had become accidentally transposed; thus αβεδηρειμ for הדברים, μεθαχαβειμ for תחבאים, $a\mu a\sigma \epsilon \nu \epsilon \iota \theta$ for השמנית, $\gamma a\beta \eta s$ for געב. In the most of these cases of text-corruption, the true reading was not hard to find, and almost any translator would have made the emendation for himself. It is eminently characteristic of Theodotion and his method that he refused to take any such responsibility. finally, there are the perfectly well-known words, such as air, yai, yav, µavaa, regarding whose exact meaning or use in certain passages the translator may have been in doubt.8 Concerning the occasional procedure of Theodotion in such cases, see again Field and Swete, in the places named. One must agree with Field, that there are some instances in which it is impossible for us to find any sufficient excuse for the transliteration.

⁷Of course, such instances as these and the preceding ones would generally not be recorded by the ancient collectors of Hexaplaric readings. The fact that they originated in mere blunders was apparent.

^{*}In the case of the transliteration φεα, for ΠΠΦ, "governor," it may be that Theodotion evaded the translation because he was not quite satisfied with any of the ordinary readings of the word: στρατηγός, ἐπραχον, ἀρχων, ἀγχων, ἀγχων constant to take the responsibility of choosing among them. It is perhaps worthy of remark, in this connection, that in the Greek of Hag. 1:1, 14, the word ΜΠΦ is not rendered at all.

The following is the list:

- 1. $a\beta\beta ovs$ (see no. 37).
- 2. αβεδη Εzr. 2:58. For לבדי שלמה, "servants." In the phrase νίοι αβεδη Σελμα, hence the שנה was cautiously transliterated. It was certainly not thought of as forming part of a proper name. (L has νίοι τῶν δούλων Σαλομων: two alterations.)
- 3. αβεδηρειμ αθουκιειμ Ι Chron. 4:22. MT הדברים עַחִיקים,
 "the words are ancient."
- 4. αβειρα Neh. 1:1. הֹבִירה, "the palace." So 7:2, βειρα. (L has βâρις in both places.)
- 5. מץשנו II Chron. 26:9; in the L text only. For אוֹבְיָא, "the valley." See also no. 29, and below, p. 74.
- 6. מין פּעל וו Chron. 9:10; in three cursives only; see below, p. 75. MT אַלנוּפִים (but in I Kings 10:11 f. אַלנוּפִים), "algum wood."
- αδωρηεμ Neh. 3:5. MT אַדִּירֵיהֶם, "their nobles." (L: οἰ ἰσχυροὶ αὐτῶν.)
- 8. αθερσαθα Ezr. 2:63; Neh. 7:65, 70. For κηψήτη (title).
- 9. αθουκιειμ (See no. 3.)
- 10. ailam II Chron. 3:4. MT אולם, "porch."
- 11. aiv Neh. 2:14; 12:37; in the latter passage the MSS have aiveîv. For בָּיֹלָ, "spring." (L has in both cases τῆς πηγῆς.)
- 12. αλημωθ Ι Chron. 15:20. MT לְּבֵוֹרִת . (L: περὶ τῶν κρυφίων, as in the Psalm-superscriptions.)

*The orthography varies considerably in the MSS, and I record usually only one form, without wasting time over the vain attempt to determine the original. Of course the variations between and et, et and e, etc., have no significance whatever, and are rarely of any use even in determining groups of manuscripts. Scribes were free to exchange them at pleasure, and did so. As a is used most commonly (though not consistently) for the long i sound in our best-known uncials, I have adopted it. The plural endings -em and -em (the latter apparently later and due to the influence of spoken Aramaic) are also frequently exchanged in the MSS.

- 13. αμασενειθ Ι Chron. 15:21. MT השׁבִילִית (L: περὶ τῆς ογδόης; cf. Ps. 6:1; 12:1.)
- 14. apaa I Chron. 2:52. For ΤΤΑΝΤ (MT , "the seer"). It seems impossible to determine whether Theodotion regarded this as a proper name, or not. The original rendering here seems to have been: ⁶²καὶ ἡσαν νίοὶ τῷ Σωβαλ πατρὶ Καριαθιαρειμ αραα εσει Αμμανιωθ, ⁶²νμασφεωθ Καριαθιαειρ, Αιθαλειμ, Αιφειθειμ, κ.τ.λ. See nos. 38 and 63.
- 15. מריאל I Chron. 11:22. MT אריאל, which Theodotion certainly did not regard as a proper name. (L inserts vious, from the Greek of II Sam. 23:20.)
- 16. ασαφειμ I Chron. 26:15, 17. MT ביבור, "stores."
- 17. αφφουσωθ II Chron. 26:21. MT (ketīb) ייפשרת, "separateness."
- 18. αχεχαρ Neh. 3:22. For הְּבָּבֶּר, "the circuit." (L: τοῦ πρωτοτόκου, corrected from a reading הובכר.)
- 19. מצסטע II Chron. 25:18 (twice). For החוהה, "the thistle."
- 20. βααλτααμ Ezr. 4:8, 9, 17. For בעל טעם, "reporter of news."
- 21. βαθων (Α βαδων, L βατων) Ezr. 7:22. For בַּקִּדֹן, "baths" (the liquid measure).
- 22. βακχουρίοις Neh. 13:31. For בפררם, "firstfruits." (L: πρωτογενήμασιν.)
- 23. βαμα I Chron. 16:39; 21:29; II Chron. 1:13. For הָּבֶּרה, "high place."
- 24. βειρα (See no. 4.)
- 25. Seve for \Box , "son," in compounds: I Chron. 11:34, Seve Asa μ , for \Box (see below, p. 74); see also no. 33.
- 26. βηθ- for בית, "house," in cases where it is evidently a separate word: Neh. 3:16, βηθ αγαβαρειμ בית הגברים; 3:20 f., βηθ ελιασουβ בית אליטיב (Eliashib named in this very verse as the high priest, and cf. vs. 1); 3:24, βηθ αζαρια בית עוריה; 3:31, βηθ ανναθινειμ בית , cf. vs. 26! (In all of these cases, L translates the word).

- 27. γαβης I Chron. 4:9. From a reading אבלב, rendered ώς γαβης, where MT has בעבב, "in pain." (L: ἐν διαπτώσει.)
- 28. γαζα Ezr. 5:17; 6:1; 7:20. For ΜΠ, "treasure."
- 29. γαι Neh. 2:15, in the L text and the cursive 121; 3:13, in L only. For בָּדְאָ, "valley." See also no. 5, and below, p. 74.
- 30. γαν οζα II Chron. 36:8. For κτζ, "the garden of 'Uzza." The passage containing these words is wanting in MT, and also in I Esdras, but certainly stood in the Hebrew text from which Theodotion translated; see further below. The phrase occurs also in II Kings 21:18, 26, where it is rendered (in all the Greek texts) ἐν τῷ κήπφ Οζα.
- 31. γασβαρηνός Ezr. 1:8. For אָנְבָּר, "treasurer." The termination -ηνος suggested by γαζαρηνός (for אָדָרָא), Dan. 5:7, 11, 15, etc.?
- 32. γεδδουρ I Chron. 12:21. For ΤΠΙ, "troop." (The same transliteration—origin unknown—in one of the texts of I Sam. 30:8. It may well be doubted whether the ascription, by the cursive 243, of the rendering συστρέμματος to Theodotion, in I Sam. 30:8, is correct. Notice the similar mistake—this time concerning Aquila—recorded in Field's Hexapla on II Sam. 3:22, in regard to this same word. May not the transliteration be Theodotion's in all these places?)
- 33. γη βεν εννομ II Chron. 28:3; 33:6. For אַרָּא בּן רָּאָפֹּל, "the valley of the son of Hinnom." Cf. no. 25; also nos. 5 and 29. (L has ἐν φάραγγι Βενεννομ.)
- 34. γωλαθ II Chron. 4:12, 13. MT בְּלֹּוֹת, "bowl-capitals." (L: τὰς βάσεις.)
- 35. אַמּאָמּ, ("and I went out through the gate of the) valley by night." (L has γωληλα νυκτός.)
- 36. δαβειρ II Chron. 3:16; 4:20; 5:7, 9. For 7777, the "innermost sanctuary" of Solomon's temple. This transliteration is used by others than Theodotion.

- 37. εβδαθ αββους I Chron. 4:21. For עבדת הברץ, "manufacture of fine linen."
- 38. eas. I Chron. 2:52. For "IT, "half." Immediately below, in vs. 54, the word is translated; cf. no. 63. (The passage is lacking in the L text, which omits—because of homoeoteleuton—the last three words of vs. 52 and the first three words of vs. 53. In both A and B the passage is badly miswritten; see no. 14.)
- 39. εφουδ I Chron. 15:27. For TIDN, "ephod." (L: ἐν στολŷ βυσσίνη.) The transliteration occurs outside of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh.
- 40. למצע I Chron. 28:11, 20. MT, in vs. 11, כלוכיר, "its treasuries." (L, in both verses: τῶν ἀποθηκῶν αὐτοῦ.) In MT the word and its context are missing in vs. 20, though they must have stood there originally—a fact which seems to have been generally overlooked. Neither in his Polychrome Chronicles (1895) nor in his Bucher der Chronik (1902) does Kittel discover that our Hebrew text has accidentally lost a considerable passage (more than a dozen words) at this point. Benzinger (1901) does no better. This is a good illustration of the way in which "the Septuagint" is commonly used. The passage in the Greek, in its original form, reads as follows: καὶ ίδου τὸ παράδειγμα τοῦ ναοῦ καὶ τοῦ οἴκου αὐτοῦ καὶ ζακχω αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰ ὑπερῷα καὶ τὰς ἀποθήκας τας έσωτέρας και τον οίκον του ίλασμου, και το παράδειγμα οἴκου Κυρίου. The necessity of this to its context is apparent from vs. 21 compared with vss. 11-13. The omission in the Hebrew of MT was caused by homoeoteleuton, the passage being preceded by דבודת בית יהוה and ending with תבנית בית יהודה. The translator, then, actually wrote this word ζακχω twice.
- 41. θαννουρειμ Neh. 3:11; 12:38. For מְּלֵּרִים, "furnaces." Neh. 12:38 is wanting in the codices A B N, but is present in many cursives and in the L text, and was included in Theodotion's translation. See further below.

- 42. θεραφειμ II Chron. 35:19. For DTT, "teraphim"—but the Hebrew original of this passage is now lost; see no.
 44. This transliteration is used by others than Theodotion.
- 43. θωδαθα (most MSS, including all the uncials, θωλαθα; an early blunder, Λ for Δ) Neh. 12:27. For ΠίΤΙΠ, "thanksgivings." (L: $(\ell \nu)$ ἀγαλλιάσα.)
- 44. καδησειμ (? So cod. 121; the others have καρεσειμ¹¹) II Chron. 35:19. For pupp, "temple-prostitutes." The passage, which is a highly important one for the history of our Hebrew text, is found neither in MT nor in I Esdras. See below, p. 83. Observe that Theodotion has the transliteration καδησειμ in Judg. 5:21.
- 45. κεφφουρη I Chron. 28:17; Ezr. 1:10; 8:27. For יכפורֶר, "cups."
- 46. κοθωνοί Ezr. 2:69. For nin, "robes." (L: στολάς ίερατικάς.) See also no. 69.
- 47. λαμ(μ) aave II Chron. 22:1. All our Greek texts are corrupt here. For אָבְּרְיִבָּרִי, "for a raid." Some justification for Theodotion's transliteration here may be found in the ambiguity of the expression, which I believe to have been mistranslated by every modern scholar as well as in the ancient versions. This strange word, λαμ(μ) aave, immediately following oi Αραβες, was of course supposed to be a proper name, and was accordingly made, by some copyist, to end with a s. αλαμαανες became αλαμαζονες, a form attested by several MSS. A and B have [οί Αραβες οί] αλιμαζονεις. (L: καὶ τῶν Αμαζονειμ ἐν τῆ 11 The Greek letters δ and ρ are frequently confused by scribes; some other examples will be given in the sequel. There is therefore room for doubt as to the original form of this transliteration. Kittel, Biblia Hebraica, on II Chron. 35:19, prints: "καρα(ι)σειμ = $\frac{1}{2} \frac{1}{2} \frac{1}{2}$

13 Cf. Nat', "for war," "to give battle," the use of the verb הוה, "to attack," in Ps. 53:6; I Macc. 5:49 f., etc., and of המותנה in II Chron. 18: 53 = I Kings 22:34, etc.

13 Hence in 14:14 (15) the gloss, robs 'Amasorais (!), derived solely from the passage 22:1, has come into the Greek text (all recensions). Benzinger, Commentary on Chron., would emend the Hebrew text of 14:13 f. accordingly. But there is no excuse for "emending;" the context shows, as plainly as a context can show anything, that "right as it stands. The connection between the two passages would be made by any reader; the enemies of Israel in both cases are the Philistines and the neighboring Arabs.

- παρεμβολŷ, a characteristic specimen of the crimes committed by this recension.)
- 48. μαναα II Chron. 7:7; Neh. 13:5, 9. For מְּמְלֵּהְ, "meal offering." (L substitutes in each case the word θυσία.)

 Observe that in Dan. 2:46 Theodotion has substituted this transliteration for the older translation θυσίας.
- 49. µaσavai II Chron. 34:22. For משנה, "the second (district)."
- 50. μεθαχαβειμ (the correct reading in codd. 56, 121) I Chron. 21:20. For מתובאים, "hiding themselves." (L: πορευ-ομένους, a reading which evidently originated in a corruption of the κρυβόμενοι which most MSS have here.)
- 51. μεθωεσειμ Ezr. 2:62. For בְּחַלֵּחְשֵׂים, "listed by genealogy." (L: γενεαλογοῦντες.)
- 52. μετεβααθ (?) I Chron. 18:8. For הַּחַבְּשִׁב, "from Tibhat" (name of a city). It is evident from the way in which the following word is translated that Theodotion did not regard this as a proper name. L has ἐκ τῆς ταβααθ, translating the preposition; and this translation (evidently secondary) has also found its way into the Egyptian text: A, ἐκ τῆς ματεβεθ; B, ἐκ τῆς μεταβηχας."
- 53. μεχωνωθ II Chron. 4:14, twice. For מכוֹלוֹת, "bases."

 Observe that Theodotion gives us this same transliteration in Jer. 27:19 (Greek 34:15).
- 54. צמאח I Chron. 11:32. For בחלי, "wadys" (?).
- 55. οφαλ II Chron. 27:3; 33:14; Neh. 3:26, 27; 11:21. For בָּבָּל(ה), the "hill" in Jerusalem.
- 56. σαβαχωθ II Chron. 4:12; only in the cursives 56 and 121; see below, p. 75. For שַבַּבוֹת, "nets."
- 57. σαχωλ (? A σαχων, B σαχωχ. The reading of the cod. Basiliano-Vaticanus, N [XI in H. and P.] is given as ασιβιβασαχωλ (!); the first part of this being probably the proper name Ασεβεια, from the beginning of vs. 19?) Ezr. 8:18. For ὑς, "prudence." (L has [ἀνὴρ]συνετὸς.)
- 58. σερσερωθ II Chron. 3:16. For שׁרשׁרוֹשׁ, "chains." (L: ἀλυσιδωτά.)

14 It is a mistake to suppose that the χ of this form is the transliteration of Π . It is merely one of the customary blunders of codex B. $\mu \epsilon \tau \epsilon \beta a \epsilon \theta$ was miswritten $\mu \epsilon \tau a \epsilon \beta \chi a \theta$ (χ for a, several other examples are given in the sequel), and so on.

60. σωφαρ I Chron. 15:28. For "biv", "trumpet."

61. σωφ[ε]ρειμ I Chron. 2:55; in the L text only; see below. For סופרים, "scribes."

62. דפגעפון II Chron. 9:21; in the L text only; see below. For מוּכּבּים, "peacocks."

63. υμασφεωθ I Chron. 2:53. For πήπουρή, "and the families (of)." The same word is translated in vs. 55, just below—the context there being so plain as to leave even Theodotion no room for doubt! (The L text has accidentally lost the first words of vs. 53; see Nos. 14 and 38. Both A and B are corrupt here.)

64. φασεχ II Chron. 30:1, and often. For ΠΟΕ, "passover."

The old Greek version of the Chronicler's history had πάσχα; see II Chron. 35:1, 6-13, 16-18, in I Esdras (1:1, 6 ff., 16-19). The large number of occurrences of the word in these two chapters of the Theodotion version was what kept it from being changed, even in the L recension. See also above, p. 61, note.

65. φεα (?) Neh. 5:14, 15, 18; in the Egyptian text only. For The, "governor." The word occurs four times in these three verses, and appears at first sight to have been transliterated three times and translated once. would be a truly Theodotionic proceeding; still, it is perhaps more likely that the word was originally transliterated in all four cases. At present, through accidental corruption and attempted correction, the forms originally written have been nearly obliterated; only close scrutiny can find the trace of them. The Egyptian text of the verses in question now reads: "'Απὸ τῆς ἡμέρας ἡς ἐνετείλατό μοι είναι είς ἄρχοντα αὐτῶν (פַרָּפַ) ἐγὼ καὶ οἱ ἀδελφοί μου βίαν αὐτῶν (ΤΠΞΠ ΤΕΙΣ) οὐκ ἔφαγον, ιι καὶ τας βίας (ΠΠΕΠ) τας πρώτας ας προ έμου έβάρυναν έπ' αὐτούς, κ.τ.λ. 18 καὶ σὺν τούτοις ἄρτους τῆς βίας (החם הפחה) οὐκ ἐζήτησα. The Greek yields in each of these clauses a passable sense, the word β la meaning "extortion" or "fruit of extortion." But the latter phrase would be a singularly free rendering (!) even of india, especially for Theodotion; and at the beginning of vs. 15 and the end of vs. 18 it is quite plain that βία stands simply as the equivalent of india." Beyond question, Theodotion wrote φεα in these three cases (at least); by one of the most common of scribal errors this became βεα; the rest followed naturally. The original readings were presumably: in vs. 14, ἄρτον τοῦ φεα, instead of βίαν αὐτῶν; vs. 15, φεωθ instead of βίας; vs. 18, ἄρτον τοῦ φεα instead of ἄρτον τῆς βίας. (The L text has substituted translations in each of the three cases: ἄρτον τῆς ἡγεμονίας in vss. 14 and 18, and ἄρχοντες in vs. 15.)

- 66. χαμανειμ Ezr. 8: 27. The source of this is the word מובר בצר (MT. לאדרכנים), "in drachmas," which was divided לדרך כנונים and characteristically rendered είς τὴν ὁδὸν χαμανειμ. (In cod. A this has been improved to ε. τ. ὁ. δραχμωνειν; while in the L text the correction has gone still farther, changing the last word to δραχμάς.)
- 67. χερουβειμ II Chron. 3:8 ff., and elsewhere. For כרוֹבים, "cherubim." This transliteration is not peculiar to Theodotion.
- 68. χεχχαρ (?) I Chron. 16:3; only in the L text, which reads χελχαρ, presumably because of a common scribal error in the Greek. For בָּבֶּר, "loaf." A and B have ἄρτον. Cf. No. 18, where the same word (meaning "circuit"), written with the article, is transliterated by αχεχαρ.
- 69. χοθωνωθ Neh. 7:70, 72. For τις, "robes." Very likely the κοθωνοί (?) of Ezr. 2:69 (above, No. 46) originated in this same transliteration. (L, in all three cases, στολάς ἐερατικάς.)
- 70. χωθαρεθ (-ωθ?) II Chron. 4:12 (twice), 13. For בֹחָרוֹת "capitals."

 $^{^{16}}$ How easy the corruption of $\tilde{a}\rho\tau\sigma\nu$ to $a\dot{\nu}\tau\hat{a}\nu$ would be may be seen from vs. 15, where codex A has $a\dot{\nu}\tau\hat{a}\dot{\nu}$ for $\tilde{a}\rho\tau\sigma\nu$.

The regularity with which these words are distributed through the history is worthy of notice. Leaving out of account the repetition of such frequently used words as $\phi a \sigma \epsilon \chi$ and $\chi \epsilon \rho o \nu \beta \epsilon \iota \mu$, the number of occurrences in I Chron. is 28; in II Chron. 32; in Ezra 16; and in Neh. 30.

To those who have examined Theodotion's transliterations in connection with the other extant traces of his work, this list will be conclusive. The large number of these words, and their characteristics in detail, added to the facts which have already been noticed, place the matter quite beyond the reach of doubt. remarked also that a few of the words in the list are already known from other sources to have been used by this translator; such are καδησειμ, μαναα, μεχωνωθ, φασεχ, and probably γεδδουρ. Το make the demonstration still more complete, it is further to be observed that in the few points of contact between the Theodotion element in Daniel and our Greek translation of the Chronicler's work there are some striking instances of identical usage. One of these is the case of the word mavaa, noticed above. Another is the use of אלא (a favorite word with Theodotion) as the rendering of מערב; found only in II Chron. 32:30; 33:14; Dan. 8:5; in the lastnamed passage substituted for the ἀπὸ δυσμῶν of the older version, which certainly needed no correction! Equally striking is the substitution of פישׁמוֹם, as the rendering of נ־חורן, in Ezr. 6:10 and Dan. 2:46; in both cases correcting the σπόνδαι of the older translation. Notice also the peculiar rendering ἀπὸ μέρους for מקצה, only in Dan. 1:2 and Neh. 7:70; the use of the verb סינידור. ζειν, and that of the noun εγκαίνια. Undoubtedly other examples of the kind can be found; I have made no thorough search.

In the case of gentilic names, it is Theodotion's custom to transliterate exactly, instead of using the Greek adjective endings. The latter, however, have been substituted later in a good many instances, sometimes in the Egyptian text and very often in L. Thus, in Neh. 2:19 the original rendering had δ $\Lambda \rho \omega \nu \epsilon \iota$, δ $\Lambda \mu \mu \omega \nu \epsilon \iota$, and δ $\Lambda \rho \alpha \beta \epsilon \iota$; where L offers δ ' $\Omega \rho \omega \nu \ell \tau \eta s$, δ ' $\Lambda \mu \mu \omega \nu \ell \tau \eta s$, and δ " $\Lambda \rho \alpha \psi$. An example of a passage in which nearly all the Greek texts have made the change is Ezr. 3:7, where for "Sidonians and Tyrians" cod. 121 has $\Sigma \iota \delta \alpha \nu \iota \mu$ and $\Sigma \omega \rho \iota \mu$ (probably almost exactly what Theodotion wrote); B has $\Sigma \eta \delta a \mu e \iota \nu$ and $\Sigma \omega \rho e \iota \nu$; all the other MSS have substituted the Greek adjective forms. Many other instances of the kind could be given.

In some cases where Theodotion was in doubt whether the word before him was a gentilic name or not, he cautiously reproduced the Hebrew article by the Greek \dot{a} . In such cases it was inevitable that those who cared for the Greek text should often have taken the further step of substituting the Greek article. For example, in Ezr. 2:57 Theodotion wrote viol $\Phi a\sigma(\epsilon)\rho a\theta$ (or $\Phi a\chi\epsilon\rho a\theta$?) $a\sigma\epsilon\beta\omega\epsilon\iota\mu$ ($\Box \chi \Box \chi$), as is attested by the Egyptian Greek tradition. But in the L text we find viol $\Phi a\kappa\epsilon\rho a\theta$ $\tau \hat{\omega}\nu$ $\Sigma a\beta\omega\epsilon\iota\mu$. Of course accidental corruption of these unfamiliar forms took place from time to time. Thus, in I Chron. 18:17 $\tau o\hat{v}$ $\chi \epsilon\rho\eta\theta\iota$ was Theodotion's rendering. I was miswritten for χ , as occasionally elsewhere, and in a cursive manuscript θ became ω , as in a great many other places. Hence the $\tau \hat{\omega}\nu$ $i\epsilon\rho\epsilon\omega\nu$ in both L and the ordinary Egyptian text (but not in Λ).

It remains to be said in general, regarding Theodotion's transliterations (and especially those of ordinary nouns), that in all probability some of them, and perhaps a considerable number, have been lost. Of course, in a version which came into common use as a part of the Greek Bible, these uncouth words were very soon felt to be seriously disturbing, especially in the many cases where the Hebrew word and its meaning were perfectly well known. We should therefore suppose that the process of removing these peculiar creations of Theodotion would have begun almost immediately. We can see the process going on in the texts which are known to us. In the Lagarde recension, it is the rule (not systematically carried through, to be sure) that these transliterations are replaced by translations; and we can see the same tendency actively at work even in the most conservative group of manuscripts. Observe, for example, what has taken place in I Chron. 28:17, where the unusual word (כפור כי occurs six times. The L recension (!) has preserved Theodotion's κεφ- $\phi o \nu \rho(\eta)$ in three places; cod. A has it once; cod. B has dropped it altogether. Similarly, in Ezr. 7:22 βαθων "baths" (liquid measure) has been replaced in B by $\partial \pi o \theta \eta \kappa \hat{\omega} \nu$, but not in A; in Ezr.

2:69 κοθωνοι (so B) becomes in A χιτώνας. Or to take the case of a still more common word: in I Chron. 11:34 בני השם is rendered by Theodotion $\beta \epsilon \nu(\nu) a \iota a \sigma a \mu$; this becomes in A and L (but not in ℜ B) viol a'. Many other examples might be given. 17 It is reasonable to suppose that this process had already begun before the period represented by the earliest manuscript testimony which we have. A few of the rejected words, after having been actually dropped from all the texts in common use, were preserved in stray cursives, or rescued again by the L recension (thanks to its conflating tendency). An excellent example is the rendering of the phrase שׁעד הביא "valley gate" in Neh. 2:15. Here the L text presents both καὶ ημην ἐν τŷ πύλη τῆς φάραγγος and καὶ διῆλθον διὰ τῆς πύλης γαι, the position of the latter clause showing that in this recension it was inserted Something very similar has taken place in II Chron. 26:9, where (in the L text) aγγαι and της φάραγγος form a doublet, though in this case it is the translation which seems No one but Theodotion would be likely to to be secondary. transliterate in such a case as this; and that it was actually he that did it appears to be rendered certain by Neh. 3:13, where L gives for the same phrase anly την πίλην γαι. But in all three of these passages the word yau has quite disappeared from the manuscripts of the standard text! A case in which the L text has retained a transliteration which has already been dropped by all the MSS of the "Egyptian" group, with the single exception of codex 121, is the word σωφερειμ, 10 I Chron. 2:55. In the ordinary text it has been rendered by γραμματέων. Another example is the word χεχχαρ, I Chron. 16:3. Other words of this nature which have narrowly missed oblivion are τεκχειμ, II Chron. 9:21, preserved in L; αγουγειμ, II Chron. 9:10, found in one L MS, 93, and (in the form γουγειμ) in the cursives 56 and 121; and σαβαχωθ, II Chron. 4:12, preserved only by 56 and 121. These words are given by Field in his list (loc. cit., pp. xl f.) as of "anonymous" origin; but it must now be evident, I think, that they are survivals from Theodotion's version.

In other parts of the Old Testament, moreover, traces of Theodotion's transliteration, hitherto unrecognized as his, are undoubtedly to be found. His version must have been felt to be an indispensable one, meeting a greater variety of needs than any other, and its influence upon the standard Greek text was probably much greater than we ordinarily suppose. Its readings must have supplanted the other renderings in many places,30 and as an inevitable result, the ascription of "Theodotion" readings to "LXX," and vice versa, was not infrequent. This happened even in the case of transliterations, passages containing them having been taken over into the current version at an early date, particularly in the books Sam.-Kings, in which the textual tradition made so many difficulties. One example of the kind has already been given; see above, on γεδδουρ. Precisely similar in their history, as I believe, are the four other renderings given by Field (loc. cit., p. xlii) as cases in which "LXX" transliterates while Theodotion translates. One of these, for example, is II Sam. 17:19 הרפות, rendered "LXX αραφωθ, Theod. παλάθας." Another is II Kings 16:17 בלנות, rendered "LXX μεχωνωθ, Theod. ὑποστηρίγματα." See the note on this latter word in the list above. From the evidence which we already have, it seems to me that we are fully justified in reversing these ascriptions, assuming that in these cases, at least, the later version had contaminated the earlier.

The important question, whether in preparing his version of the Chronicler's history Theodotion was revising an older translation, or not, should probably be answered in the negative. have as our guide his proceeding in the case of Daniel; and what he does there is to retain to a remarkable degree the wording of his predecessor, in spite of extensive alterations in the form of the A comparison of I Esdras with the corresponding part of Theodotion does not show any such close resemblance. The coincidences of rendering seem to be only such as would be expected in two translations of the same Hebrew text, while the differences are so many and so great as to argue strongly against any dependence upon, or even acquaintance with, the older version.²¹ know of no translation of Chr.-Ezr.-Neh. before the time of Theodotion, other than the one represented by our I Esdras, and it is not likely that there was another. Our last witness to the existence of this version in its completeness comes from Josephus. After his day, so far as I am aware, we meet with it only in the "I Esdras" fragment. Soon after the beginning of the Christian era, in all probability, the old Greek version of the Chronicler's history disappeared from the face of the earth, with the exception of the one fragment which happened to be rescued from a single codex (see AJSL, p. 141). This fragment may have escaped Theodotion's notice altogether, or he may not have thought it of importance for his purpose. At all events, when he put forth his own translation, it had a clear field; and as a matter of course, it was soon adopted as a part of "the Septuagint" and its authorship was quite forgotten. If it is indeed an independent translation of these books, as I believe, it is doubly important as the one great example of the methods of this interpreter, this time not a mere reviser, but free to work in his own way.

THE TWO MAIN TYPES OF THE TEXT

1. First Esdras

I have described briefly in one of the preceding essays (AJSL, pp. 136-41) the two differing "editions" of the Chronicler's history which are known to us, giving some account of their origin.

21 Why, to take a single instance, should Theodotion have rendered the word X73X (MT אָרַרְאָל) in Esr. 5:3 by the senseless χορηγίαν, if he had known that it had already been rendered (I Eadr. 6:4) by the obviously suitable στέγην?

Since an interval of 300 years lay between them, and the later edition was, generally speaking, independent of the former one, the comparison of them is obviously a matter of great importance for purposes of textual criticism. But before they can be thus used in any satisfactory way, it is necessary to know to a considerable extent the history of their transmission; the state of preservation of the various texts; the age, the character, and the trust-worthiness of the translations; the relative excellence and mutual relations of manuscripts. The following observations will serve as a beginning.

The old Greek translation of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. was made not long before the middle of the second century B. C. evidence of this is found in the quotation from the Greek historian Eupolemus, in a work composed about 150 B. C. (see Schürer, Geschichte⁴, III, 351 f.). The historian is telling of the building of Solomon's temple, and quotes from the letter of Hiram, king of Tyre, in the form of it which is found only in II Chron., chap. 2. The text of the passage, corresponding to II Chron. 2:12 ff., is given in Swete's Introduction, p. 370, and reads as follows: εὐλογητὸς ὁ θεὸς δς τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν ἔκτισεν, δς είλετο ἄνθρωπου χρηστου έκ χρηστου ανδρός και αρχιτέκτουα σοι απέσταλκα ἄνθρωπον Τύριον ἐκ μητρὸς Ἰουδαίας ἐκ τῆς φυλῆς Δάν. Η ere is, beyond all question, a somewhat free citation from a Greek version of Chronicles. There is every reason to believe, and no reason to doubt, that this translation was the same one of which a part has survived in the "I Esdras" fragment.22 All the evidence which we have seems to show that the I Esdras translation was made as early as the second century B. C. Some of the indications of this nature have already been mentioned; others will appear in the sequel.

The home of the translation may well have been Egypt. There is one interesting fact, at least, which seems to show that the translator lived among people to whom the geography and history of Syria were somewhat unfamiliar. The technical term (Aram. בר ווודין), "the district beyond (west of) the river (Euphrates)," is in every instance—14 times in all—rendered by Κοίλη Συρία καὶ Φοινίκη, "Coele-Syria and Phoenicia," a rendering which occurs nowhere else. The term "beyond the river" was one which had long been familiar throughout Palestine and Syria, and Theodotion's rendering, πέραν τοῦ ποταμοῦ, would have been understood anywhere between Judea and Persia. But in Egypt the phrase was not so well known.

²² It might seem useless to attempt to argue from the wording of so free a citation as this one evidently is. But the opening phrase, "Blessed be the God who made heaven and earth," seems to have been transferred verbatim, and it is at least interesting to observe that we have here one of the characteristic marks of difference between the rendering of Theodotion and that of the old Greek version. Theodotion has the phrase before him in this passage and in Neh. 9:6, and both times renders by ἐπόρουν (Heb. 1967). In I Esdr., the words are found only in 6:12, and the rendering there, as here, is by κπίζουν (a form of the Aramaic verb 125 being read).

From the materials which we have, we are well able to judge as to the character of the translation. It is a faithful rendering, of the kind to which we are accustomed in the older parts of the Greek Old Testament. The translator has a wide knowledge of Greek, uses a large vocabulary, and very often chooses Greek idioms instead of simply copying the Semitic forms of speech. In rendering two verbs connected by "and," for example, he frequently employs the participle for one of the two, where Theodotion and his kind would follow the original. On the other hand, he generally sticks desperately to a corrupt text, hesitating at no nonsense in "translating" it. His performances in really difficult places and in many that are not difficult at all—are like those of a modern schoolboy, and we may expect to find at least a few stupid blunders (so they seem to us) on every page. This is fortunate, for it enables us, here as elsewhere, to see what Semitic words and phrases the Greek was trying to render. One who is thoroughly familiar with Hebrew and Aramaic and also with the habits of

It is important to observe that this is the old and official terminology used by the Greek historians and geographers from the fourth century onward. "Coele-Syria and Phoenicia," or even "Coele-Syria "alone, included the whole Syrian province west of the Euphratus, i.e., exactly "TII" "IV. An Alexadrian translator of the second century B. C. would have been sure to use it; see II Macc. 3:5, 8; 4:4 for a striking illustration; and cf. also I Macc. 10:69, and the numerous passages in Polybius cited by Hölscher. "Palastina in der persischen und hellenistischen Zeit," in Sieglin's Quellen und Forschungen zur alten Geschichte und Geographie, Heft 5 (1903), pp. 7f. Notice also that "Coele-Syria and Phoenicia" is the term used in the petition of Onias to Ptolemy Philometor, Josephus, Antt., xiii, 3, 1. This terminology went out of general use before the beginning of the Christian era. Strabo, xvi, 2, 2, notes that according to a nomenclature which some (ivice 63) had used, "Coele-Syria" included the territory of the Jews, Edomites, and Philistines. His testimory shows that in the last century B. C. and thereafter "Coele-Syria" was ordinarily applied only to the district between Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon. Thus Hölscher, p. 12. His conclusion is the same one which I had myself reached.

these translators will generally be able to see what text lay behind this version—after he has once determined the original form of the Greek.

The Semitic text thus rendered seems to have been not particularly good, but one which had suffered considerably from careless copyists. In many cases, indeed, its readings are manifestly superior to those of our massoretic text, and there is no place in which its help can safely be dispensed with; but on the whole, the type of text which it represents is inferior to that represented by our canonical books. Aside from all the accidental corruption which it has suffered through careless transmission, it seems now and then to have been deliberately "revised," as, for example, in the opening verses of the section dealing with the official correspondence in the time of Xerxes and Artaxerxes, I Esdr. 2:15. Wherever the probabilities are otherwise evenly balanced, in the conflict of I Esdras readings with those of our canonical recension, the latter has the presumption in its favor. Some instances of the occasional wide divergence of the I Esdras text from that which later became the standard will be given below.

Several scholars have called attention to a certain resemblance between the Greek of I Esdras and that of the old ("LXX") version of Daniel. See Swete's Introduction, pp. 48 f., and Lupton's preface to his First Esdras, in the Speaker's Commentary. Most noticeable is the occurrence of the same phrase, καὶ ἀπηρείσατο αὐτὰ ἐν τῷ εἰδωλίῳ αὐτοῦ, in both I Esdr. 2:9 and Dan. 1:2, as has been observed. I add one or two other noteworthy examples." The phrase "his house shall be made a rubbish-heap ("ϽϦ)," which occurs in Ezr. 6:11; Dan. 2:5; 3:29, is interpreted by the old version in all three places to mean "his house shall be confiscated." In I Esdr. 6:31 the rendering is: καὶ τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῦ εἶναι βασιλικά, and in Dan. 2:5: καὶ ἀναληφθήσεται ὑμῶν τὰ ὑπάρχοντα εἰς τὸ βασιλικόν. In Dan. 3:96 he writes: ἡ οἰκία αὐτοῦ δημευθήσεται, which means the same."

²⁵ So far as I know, the important testimony which these translations (or mistranslations) give to the existence of a Syro-Palestinian root כול, כיול, corresponding to the Arabic (בול, יול take, obtain," has never been noticed. It is the same root whose verb (כיל, jussive) occurs in the last line of the Tabuit inscription, as I hope to show more fully elsewhere.

Again, in Dan. 3:2 we have in the old version (but not in Theodotion) the same list of officers, σατράπας, στρατηγούς, τοπάρχας καὶ ὑπάτους, which appears in the same order in I Esdr. 3:14; as also, lacking the last member, in 3:2. Since the Greek words are by no means the settled equivalents of the Aramaic terms, this coincidence can hardly be accidental. Notice also the use of the word μανιάκης, "golden chain," in I Esdr. 3:6; Dan. 5:7, 29; the frequent occurrence of μεγιστάνες, "magnates," in both I Esdras and Daniel; the phrase ἐποίησε δοχὴν μεγάλην, I Esdr. 3:1; Dan. 5:1 (not in Theodotion). In Swete's list (Introduction, pp. 310 f.) of the unusual Greek words which are found in certain books of the Old Testament, the following also are mentioned as occurring in both I Esdras and the old translation of Daniel: ἀναπλήρωσις, δογματίζειν, μεγαλειότης, πειθαρχεῖν.

These instances seem to render one of two conclusions certain: either the old Greek translation of the Chronicler's history strongly influenced that of the book of Daniel; or else both were the work of one and the same translator.* The latter is the more probable supposition; notice, for instance, how the two passages Dan. 2:5; 3:29, compared with I Esdr. 6:31, prove that the translator worked independently, and was not simply following an older version.

It is not likely that this translation ever circulated widely. The Chronicler's history in its original Semitic form seems to have been little known, and was certainly very little esteemed, in any part of the Jewish world for two or three centuries after the date of its composition." From the time when the Story of the Youths was seen to be secondary, and the abridged recension made its appearance, the older, unabridged texts and versions lost ground; and finally, when the official text was created, this old Greek version, already near to extinction, passed out of sight. There is no evidence that any secondary version was ever made from it, in its entire state, and we know it only from the fragment which survived under the name "First Esdras." The history of the transmission of this fragment, in manuscripts and versions, is unlike that of any other part of the Greek Old Testament, though the old Greek Daniel offers a close parallel in many respects. It has, of course, been far less influenced, in its transmission, by the Hebrew-Aramaic text than its canonical fellows. Their presence beside it has generally saved it from editorial "correction" since the establishment of a standard text, and it is not at all likely to have suffered from such correction before that time. Accordingly, the Hebrew-Aramaic that can be shown to lie behind our I Esdras may generally be accepted as representing a text which existed before the middle of the second century B. C. On the other hand, there is evidence that the Greek text of this translation was somewhat carelessly handled during the first centuries of its existence, and it is easy to be too confident in arguing from the Greek to the Semitic. In dealing with the plus and minus of I Esdras, especially, great caution is necessary.* Moreover, ever since "First Esdras" and "Second Esdras" were first placed side by side in manuscripts of the Greek Bible, the danger of contamination, in either direction, has been present; it is remarkable, indeed, that the better types of text should show so little evidence of such corruption. It is only in the L text (see below) that this is a serious matter; there, the contamination of I Esdras has gone so far as to render the text all but useless for critical purposes.

²⁷ Very likely its true character was well understood, at the first. If that were the case, it would not be surprising that even its one valuable part, the story of Nehemiah, should have made little impression.

The text of I Esdras, like that of Chronicles-Ezra-Nehemiah, is known to us in two principal recensions, which will be described below. The one of these may conveniently be called "Egyptian," and the other "Syro-Palestinian." Of the secondary versions made from the I Esdras Greek, the Syriac, the Ethiopic, and the

Latin are the only ones requiring mention here. The Syriac, made by Paul of Tellā, and the Ethiopic represent the Egyptian recension, and are of considerable value; the Latin, derived from a Syrian text, has also some critical importance. These will receive further mention in the sequel.

2. The Standard Text of the Second Century A. D.

The text of Chronicles-Ezra-Nehemiah which was taken as the official one seems to have been carefully selected. It was one from which the Story of the Youths had been cut out, and in which the three wandering chapters of the Ezra narrative were allowed to remain in the book of Nehemiah (AJSL, pp. 135 ff.). It was presumably one which bore evidence of being more trustworthy in details than the most of its fellows. So far as we are able to judge, it was, indeed, comparatively "sound," especially in the book of Ezra-Nehemiah; though differing considerably from what the Chronicler originally wrote. The separation of Ezra-Nehemiah from Chronicles had either taken place already, or else was accomplished at this time. When Theodotion made his translation, the division was already effected.

As witnesses to the readings of this "standard" recension we have: (1) the massoretic text; (2) the Greek of Theodotion; (3) the Latin of Jerome. We have the great good fortune to know the habits of each of these two translators, and can thus reason from version to original with an assurance which would not otherwise be possible. As Jerome made his translation near the end of the fourth century, its value for text-critical purposes is very small; it almost everywhere agrees verbatim with our massoretic text. Theodotion's Greek, on the other hand, bears interesting witness to the fact that the massoretic text is by no means identical with the "standard" text of the second century A. D. The manner in which even an official recension can become corrupted, even within a short time, is well illustrated here. The text rendered by Theodotion has suffered many accidental changes, and a few which look like deliberate revision; so also has that of the massoretes. One example of the kind has already been pointed out (above, p. 67); in I Chron. 28:20, Theodotion's Hebrew contained a passage of considerable length which has been lost, by a mere copyist's error, from our MT.

Another instance, and one of especial interest, is the long passage which in our Greek Bible is appended to II Chron. 35:19 (see above, p. 68). Examination shows that this was taken bodily from II Kings 23:24-27; but no one seems to have observed that the borrowing did not take place in the Greek version, but in the Hebrew original. Theodotion had all this before him, in the text which he rendered; moreover, the word שים, which he transliterated by καδησειμ(?), is not attested in II Kings 23:24 by MT or any version, though it appears to be the older reading as contrasted with the שקדצים which is given What adds materially to the interest of the case is the fact that the old Greek version bears witness to still another He brew text at this point. The passage in I Esdras (1:21 ff.) reads as follows: [21 καὶ ἀρθώθη τὰ ἔργα Ἰωσείου ἐνώπιον τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ ἐν καρδία πλήρει εὐσεβείας. πκαὶ τὰ κατ' αὐτὸν δὲ ἀναγέγραπτει εν τοις εμπροσθεν χρόνοις, περί των ήμαρτηκότων καί ήσεβηκότων είς του κύριον παρά παν έθνος καί βασιλείαν, καί έλύπησαν αὐτὸν ἐν αἰσθήσει· καὶ οἱ λόγοι τοῦ κυρίου ἀνέστησαν ἐπὶ 'Ισραήλ. "Καὶ μετὰ πᾶσαν τὴν πράξιν ταύτην 'Ιωσείου] συνέβη Φαραω βασιλέα κτλ., the end of the bracketed section being the point at which agreement with the other texts begins. The first glance at this Greek version makes the whole matter plain. have here what the Chronicler himself originally wrote, but in mutilated form, a passage of some length having been lost from the Hebrew by accident at the point where I have inserted the four periods. The Greek translator rendered as well as he could; but the passage was hopelessly spoiled, and indeed made even worse than useless, for as it now reads it seems to class Josiah among the most wicked of kings! Hence the bold measure of cutting out the entire passage from Hebrew texts. In the copy which lay before Theodotion this had been done, and the resulting gap had been filled from II Kings. In our massoretic text the excision has been made and the gap left unfilled; but to the fact of the lacuna, but even hint at the nature of the missing passage. When our Hebrew text proceeds (vs. 30): אררי אחרים וואר אשר הכין יאשרהו את הביתן עלה ככו מלך מצרים וגו', כל זאת אשר הכין יאשרהו את הביתן עלה ככו מלך מצרים וגו', comparison with the two Greek versions shows beyond all question what was meant by the words: "After all this work which Josiah did in setting the temple in order." The allusion is to some such passage as the one translated by Theodotion, which immediately preceded these words. And finally, it is to be observed that the "standard text" of the second century A. D. must either have been identical here with Theodotion's, or else have resembled the fragmentary one preserved in I Esdras. The phenomena can be explained on either supposition, but the latter is evidently the more probable one.

A third example of these more important variations in the tradition is found in II Chron. 36:8, another passage in which we are able to compare I Esdras. Here, after the statement that 'the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim are written in the book of Kings,' Theodotion proceeds: [καὶ ἐκοιμήθη Ἰωακεὶμ μετὰ τῶν πατέρων αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἐτάφη ἐν γαν οζα μετὰ τῶν πατέρων αὐτοῦ·] καὶ ἐβασίλευσεν κτλ. The bracketed passage is wanting in both MT and I Esdras, but was certainly in the Hebrew text of Chronicles which lay before Theodotion (see above, p. 66). Whatever we may think of its origin—and especially, of the statement regarding "the garden of Uzza"—the fact of its existence ought at least to be made known in our commentaries and "critical" editions of the Hebrew text.

Another example, of a somewhat different character. In the list of returning exiles, found in I Esdr., chap. 5, Ezr., chap. 2, Neh., chap. 7, there is one point at which the accidental omission of two or more names is made especially easy by the proximity of similar or nearly identical forms: $\Box\Box\Box\Box$ Aya\beta and $\Box\Box\Box$ Aya\beta, \dagger \text{Aya}\beta, \dagger \text{Avou}\beta, \text{Ovta}, \dagger \text{Aya}\beta. In Ezr. 2:46 the names Ovta, \dagger \text{K\$\etatata}, \dagger \text{are}\beta, \dagger \text{are}, \dagger \text{Are}\beta, \dagger \dagger wanting in all the texts known, and therefore presumably were not found at this point in the official text of the second century A. D., their loss being due to the carelessness of a copyist. In Neh. 7:48 the most of the Greek manuscripts, including codices A and *, contain all the names; in MT, and also in a few Greek codices, including B, the last four names of those mentioned above have fallen out accidentally for the obvious reason just given. The names Ovta and $K\eta\tau\alpha\beta$, therefore, which are now not represented anywhere in the Hebrew Old Testament, were present in the Hebrew rendered by Theodotion. It cannot be held that they were inserted from I Esdras, in the Greek translation, because (1) such an insertion is altogether unlikely; (2) if made, it would certainly have been in Ezra, chap. 2, not in Neh., chap. 7; (3) the only form attested by any I Esdras text is $K\eta\tau\alpha\beta$, while in the Theodotion texts we have everywhere $K\eta\tau a\rho$. It is remarkable that our commentators and critics of the Hebrew text should not notice the testimony of the Greek in Neh. 7:48. All, apparently, omit even to look at the footnote in Swete; codex B is "the Septuagint.""

These illustrations will suffice. The "official" text differed in some important particulars from that of our massoretes and also from the text of Theodotion, although both were derived from it. A satisfactory restoration of it is generally possible, however, by the use of these two, with occasional aid from other sources. Of course the numerous minor variations, due to the usual accidents of transmission and defects of translation, are taken for granted. Sometimes Theodotion, and sometimes MT, has preserved the The latter deserves the preference, on the whole. The restoration of Theodotion's Hebrew-Aramaic text is in theory a comparatively easy matter, since we know how close a rendering he was wont to make, and since, because of the late date of his work and the nearness of our oldest manuscripts to his time, we can put unusual confidence in the traditional Greek. In fact, however, a good deal of close study is often needed in order to find out what "the traditional Greek" is. And when it has once been found, the danger of blundering in constructing from it a new Semitic text is very great, even under these most favorable circumstances.

IV. NOTES ON MANUSCRIPTS AND VERSIONS

Fortunately, the history of the transmission of the three "books," Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, is one and the same history, generally speaking. They have stood side by side, from the first, sharing the same fate, whether in translation or in manuscript tradition. Especially in the Greek codices which contain these books, it can be seen that they all, including I Esdras, have come down to us through the same lines of descent. That which is seen to be true of codex A, or of codex B, or of the grouping of certain cursives, in I Chronicles, for example, will be found to hold good for I Esdras or Nehemiah. That which can be proved regarding a translation, or a recension, in one part of the history will be true, speaking broadly, in every other part.

1. The Superiority of the A Manuscripts to those of the B Group Theodotion's translation of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. was not made until (at least) the middle of the second century A. D. Our oldest Greek codices date from a time only two or three centuries later than this, and some one or more among them might easily have been copied from manuscripts belonging to the translator's own Moreover, these books were already a part of "Sacred Scripture" at the time when the version was made, and the need of a careful tradition of the Greek text was already beginning to be keenly felt. We should therefore expect to find Theodotion's Greek pretty well preserved, in general; and to be able to recognize in some manuscript, or group of manuscripts, a text closely approximating to that which came from the translator's own hands. And in fact, both of these expectations are realized. Thanks to the multitude of proper names in every part of the Chronicler's history, the grouping of manuscripts is relatively easy; and because of Theodotion's many peculiar transliterations, which subsequent editors liked to get rid of, it is often possible to distinguish at a glance the original reading from the later one.

Among the Greek manuscripts, those which contain the L text form a very conspicuous group by themselves. These are the cursives 19, 93, 108, with the occasional addition of others.*

This peculiar recension will be described below, and may be passed over here.

All the other manuscripts may be divided roughly into two main groups. The one of these has for its constant members the uncials B, N, and N," the cursive 55 (almost an exact duplicate of B), and is supported by the Syro-Hexaplar and Ethiopic ver-The other group is led by the uncial A, and may be said to include all of the remaining cursives, though it must not be inferred from this that the group is homogeneous." The characteristic of the manuscripts and versions of the B group is the remarkable fidelity with which they reproduce the archetype from which they all were derived. They carry us back—and evidently not very far back—to a single codex, whose multitudinous errors, including even the most glaring blunders of copyists, are everywhere faithfully repeated. Among these half-dozen witnesses, the best text is given by codex &, so far as it is preserved; that of codex B is the worst. As for the MSS of the "A group," they present no such uniform type, but differ among themselves after the usual manner of O. T. Greek MSS, though in relatively slight degree. That is, we find in them just the variety which we should expect to find in a group of codices derived from Theodotion's translation. The best text in this group is that of codex A.

The current (and, so far as I know, unchallenged) opinion as to the best Greek text of the books Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah is that expressed by Kittel, Bücher der Chronik, p. 24, middle: "B hat nun trotz vieler Schreibfehler doch im ganzen den besseren Text, auch bei den Namen, während A sich fast durchweg Angleichung an den MT zu Schulden kommen lässt."

³⁴ Certain subdivisions of this main group are obvious enough, but I pass them over here as unimportant for my purposes.

But this view is altogether mistaken. Codex A, in these books, has not been conformed to MT; and as for the misguided worship of codex B, it has nowhere so little justification as here. B generally yields an inferior text in the Old Testament, and in this case it is at its very worst.

First, as to codex A. It makes the impression of being surprisingly "correct," as contrasted with B. It reads smoothly, as a rule, stands generally pretty close to our massoretic Hebrew, and (what is especially noticeable) does not give in its proper names the monstrosities which are the rule in the other uncials, but rather presents what appears to be a mere transliteration of the MT forms. But this does not show, by any means, that A's is a corrected text. We are not dealing here with the Pentateuch, or the books of Samuel, or with a translation made in the third century B. C. Theodotion had before him a Hebrew text which very closely resembled our MT; he rendered it exactly, and transliterated very carefully; and we happen to have in codex A a pretty old and unusually trustworthy copy of the original version. That is all. The theory that A has been extensively corrected can be shown on every page and in every chapter to be untenable. The codex contains a great many ancient errors of which the correction is perfectly obvious, but the erroneous readings have in almost all cases been allowed to stand. Take, for example, the numerous transliterations described above (p. 63), where Theodotion dealt timidly with corrupted words which were easily emendable, and which appear in their correct form in MT. Any "edited" text would correct these formsas they are corrected in L, for example. But in A they remain unchanged. A good illustration, again, from I Esdras is the ancient corruption of the name "Megiddo," in 1:27, where the original Greek reading $Ma\gamma\epsilon\delta\delta\omega(\nu)$ was very early altered, through accidents of a familiar type, to Meyaeδδωs and Metaeδ-Sous. Everyone knew what the correct reading was, and in L (but not in A) it was of course substituted. Moreover, in the part of I Esdras which was least of all subject to correction or alteration, the Story of the Youths, the text of A shows the same superiority to that of B as elsewhere. A typical example is furnished by the proper name 'Ιδουμαΐοι, "Edomites," in 4:45, 50. In both places A gives it correctly, while B has in the first instance 'Ιουδαΐοι, and in the second Χαλδαΐοι."

In Ezr. 8:10 it is obvious that cod. A and a small group of allied MSS have preserved an ancient reading which stood in the text of Theodotion, but is wanting in MT, L, and the B group alike. MT reads מבכר שלומיה; the B and L groups have ἀπὸ νίῶν Σαλειμουθ, or its equivalent. But A and its fellows have ἀπὸ νίῶν Βα[α]ν, Σελειμουθ, which is certainly correct. The name was dropped from the L recension and from the MSS of the B group because (on comparison with MT) the βανι was taken for an unnecessary doublet of νίῶν.

It must always be remembered that A stands in no sense alone. Its text is usually that of the great majority of our MSS.

But what is much more important still is the fact, which is quite obvious in every part of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. and I Esdras, that the cause of the considerable variation in the Greek texts is not correction, but corruption; and that the corrupt forms of proper names, which are especially characteristic of the B group of MSS, were derived directly from the very same (and far more correct) forms which appear in A and its nearest associates. In other words: we have in our MSS the offspring of only one Greek version of the three canonical books, namely that of Theodotion; at a short distance from the original, but already considerably disfigured by accidents of transmission, stands A; farther on in the same direction, and with the disfigurement very much increased, follow the MSS of the B group.

The great inferiority of codex B, together with the fact that it represents in general a mere corruption of the A text, may be illustrated here by a few typical examples; others will be given below.

II Chron. 34:22, A Garoval, B Kaloval. A's reading agrees neither with MT nor with II Kings 22:14, but undoubtedly represents Theodotion's rendering of mappin, as also appears from a comparison of the $qer\bar{e}$ with the $ket\bar{i}b$ in our MT.

²⁴ This is a mere correction for 'Iovôacou; cf. codex 55 and the Ethiopic version.

II Chron. 36:8, the transliteration $\gamma a \nu o \zeta a$, mentioned above. A and most MSS have $\gamma a \nu o \zeta a \nu$ (the ν from the following letter μ , in an uncial text), B $\gamma a \nu o \zeta a \eta$, with the familiar corruption of N to H.

I Chron. 5:6, 26, for תולה פלנטר, A has both times Θαγλαθ-φαλνασαρ; B, in vs. 6 Θαλγαβανασαρ, and in vs. 26 Θαγναφαμασαρ. This is a fair sample of the difference between A and B throughout the four Chron.-Ezr. books.

I Chron. 1:54 (and Gen. 36:43) for the name \Box A has Hρaμ, B Zaφωειν! The scribal blunders, mostly made in copying a cursive text, are only those which the B scribes are constantly making. The original transliteration was $a\iota\rho a\mu$. The Z came from the final N of the preceding word; $\iota\rho = \phi$, as very often; the confusion of a with ω can be found on almost every page of B; μ becomes $\iota\nu$, ν , etc. very frequently.

I Chron. 2:47, for the name גישן, A has Γηρσωμ, B Σωγαρ. Neither agrees with MT, and the B reading is a corruption from that of A, as usual.

I Chron. 4:5, for אשההר, A Ασχουρ, B Σαρα (A for X, see below on Neh. 3:2).

I Chron. 4:21, the translit. $\epsilon \beta \delta a \theta$ a $\beta \delta \omega v$, given correctly in A and in other codices. B has $\epsilon \phi \rho a \theta$ a $\beta a \kappa$. This does not mean at all that B has been corrected according to a reading on the contrary, the confusion of the letters δ and ρ is a rather common thing in B or its nearest ancestors. Another example of the kind is Ezr. 8:27 καφουδηθ (the transliteration, according to B), where A and most of the others have καφουρη or its equivalent. In both of these cases, and in others of the same nature, the testimony of the other MSS of the B group shows that we have to do merely with corruption in the Greek text.

Neh. 3:2, B reads $Za\beta aoup$ for MT TI. This certainly seems at first sight to point to a variant Hebrew reading, but it does not in fact. The other MSS of the B group (\aleph, V) show that the reading of their archetype was $Za\kappa\chi oup$. The two scribal blunders, B for K and A for X, have each many examples in codex B.

II Chron. 27:3; 33:14. Theodotion's transliteration $o\phi a\lambda$ was corrupted by one of the very first copyists into $o\phi \lambda a$ (so A and the best of the others); B has in both cases $\delta \pi \lambda a$, "arms."

Such examples as these could be given by the hundred. And they are simply typical of what is the case in every part of the four books now under discussion. Attention should be called, too, to the large number of omissions in codex B, due simply to incredible carelessness. A good example is the very first verse of Ezra, in which three words absolutely necessary to the sense are dropped out. Phrases and whole sentences are lost with surprising frequency; see, for example, in Ezr.-Neh. alone, Ezr. 1:3; 2:10, 39; 3:3; 6:5; 8:5; Neh. 3:4; 7:26 f., 48.

This will suffice to show the character of the manuscript. In Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. and I Esdras, the best uncial, by far, is A; and the worst, by far, is B. It would be hard to find, among the more pretentious MSS of the Greek Old Testament, any other such miserable specimen of textual tradition as that which codex B offers in these particular books. On the other hand, it represents a text which has suffered comparatively little editorial correction. Of course, all of our MSS have been more or less "improved" by the rectification of obvious errors and the substitution of translations for the more disturbing transliterations. Examples of such correction in both A and B have already been given; it has taken place less often in B than in A.

2. Hexaplar MSS of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh.

As has already been said (AJSL, p. 67), Hexaplar Greek texts of these Old Testament books, Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. and I Esdras, have heretofore been quite unknown. We have the Syro-Hexaplar version of I Esdras, however; and in the first of these

 If there is any kind of blunder, or confusion of Greek letters, which the transcriber of B (and perhaps also, of its nearest ancestor) did not make repeatedly, I do not know what it is. It is to be hoped that the time may soon come when the authors and editors of works dealing with the Old Testament will cease to load their pages with the textual absurdities of this codex. At present, the custom is all but universal. It might be added, in general, that the recording of obvious blunders in spelling, and of the orthographic habits of unknown scribes (similar habits and poculiarities being already well known) is not a matter of the least scientific interest. The editors of the Encyclopacia Biblica, for instance, have made their work the repository of thousands of absolutely worthless "variants;" as though it were useful to note the occurrence of both Αδιν and Αδειν, or as though there could be any text-critical or other value even in the fact that while one codex reads Bekrished another reads Bekrished (the pronunciation being exactly the same in the two cases); to say nothing of recording such rubbish as B's Χθεοδ, from Ελλαδ (all ordinary blunders, even the X; of, the reading of \% in Neb. 7:40, etc.) in I Chron. 11:30, or its Beyeling, for Beθδεγων, in Josh. 15:41, or πολέμων, for πόλεων, in I Chron. 18:8, or hundreds of others even worse than these!

essays I have published for the first time the extant fragments of the same version of Nehemiah." We therefore have direct access to the "Septuagint" column of Origen's Hexapla, not only in I Esdras but also in Nehemiah. Through the general neglect and misunderstanding of I Esdras it has happened that no one has ascertained what Greek MSS are most nearly related to the Syriac, though this can be done with the greatest ease and certainty, thanks to the abundance of proper names. Nestle's astonishing assertion that the Syriac I Esdras was derived "from the Lucian text" (!) has already been noticed. Comparison shows, on the contrary, that the Hexaplar Syriac of both I Esdras and Neh. clings closely at every point to the peculiar text of the B group, which has just been described. That is, the MSS of the B group are Hexaplar MSS. This conclusion is confirmed by the much misunderstood note appended to the book of Nehemiah in codex &, written apparently by the original hand." The note states that the codex had been carefully collated with one of the oldest and most correct of all existing Hexaplar MSS. But there is in the MS itself no evidence of any considerable diorthosis to which this note could refer. corrections in the original hand are few and unimportant.

38 Thus Swete, in his edition; and the probability seems to me to be strongly supported by the attendant facts. Of course, the task of distinguishing the work of the successive hands in codex & is one of notorious difficulty—often quite hopeless. The matter is further complicated by the considerable additions to the text which have been made by the "second" corrector (% e.s.), of the seventh century, whose work has been quite generally supposed to be that which is referred to in the note; see Tischendorf's Vetus Testamentum Graece (1887), Vol. I, Prolegomena, p. 63; Nestle, Einführung in das griechische NT.2, p. 51; and compare also the note appended (this time by & e. *!) to the book of Esther in codex &. But the additions of this corrector are of a quite different type. They include: (1) the plus of the Hebrew (on which see below); also (2) corrections from the A text, such as those in Neb. 2:16: 7:70. and elsewhere; (3) extensive insertions, mostly worthless doublet readings, from the L recension, such as those in Neh. 1:9, 11; 2:5, 6, 8, etc.; and (4) corrections from still other sources, such as the name of the month in Neh. 1:1, and the word sirrouxes in 1:11. It would be plain, even without direct proof, that this variegated material was not derived from Origen's "LXX" column; and the witness of the Syro-Hex. version in 2:5-8 shows conclusively that it was not. This version of Paul of Tellä, it is to be remembered, included everything -even the asterisked matter - which stood in the fifth column of the Hexapla. The note at the end of Neh. in & then, if it tells the truth, has nothing to do with the work of the corrector M c. s.

necessary conclusion is, that at least in the book of Ezr.-Neh. codex & is, and from the first was known to be, a Hexaplar codex; and that care was taken to make it as faithful a replica of Origen's text as possible.³⁰

We can say then with certainty that in both "First Esdras" and "Second Esdras" (Ezra-Nehemiah) the manuscripts N, B, 55 represent more or less faithful transcripts of the fifth column of the Hexapla, and that codex N⁴¹ is Hexaplar at least in Ezr.-Neh. It is important to notice, further, that the asterisked passages (Origen's insertions from the plus of the Hebrew) are omitted. This fact appears plainly from a comparison of the Greek with the surviving fragments of the Syro-Hexaplar Nehemiah, which contain the plus. The B MSS coincide exactly with the Syriac except in this one particular."

In regard to the B group in Chronicles it is necessary to speak with more caution; but it is hardly to be doubted that here also these same MSS contain the Hexaplar text. The codices N, B, and 55, at all events, have the very same character here, and bear the same relation to one another and to the A group, as in the Ezra-Nehemiah books. I have not satisfied myself, thus far, that the same is true of codex N; for this, in the majority of the 39 One must of course bear in mind the fact of the remarkable displacement of a portion of codex %, and of the MS from which it was copied (the origin of the circumstance having been, probably, the accidental transposition of a single quire), in these very books; and also the possibility that the above-mentioned note was simply transcribed from an older codex. But no one of all these uncertainties can affect the conclusion that % is here a Hexaplar MS. That fact is absolutely certain.

⁴⁰In codex &, which is incomplete, I Esdras is now lacking, to be sure. The fact that in certain other books of the Old Testament codex B contains, or has affinities with, a Hexaplar text is well known; see Swete's Introd., pp. 487 f.; Cornill, Einleitungi, p. 335.

41 According to Swete's Introduction, pp. 132, 202, this codex does not contain I Esdras. What the ground of this statement is, I do not know, and nothing in the literature to which I have access has yielded any explanation. According to Holmes and Parsons, nearly the whole of the last chapter of the book is missing in the codex (XI), but their apparatus includes readings from every other part.

The relation of the text of N to that of the Hexapla is not a simple one. In Exr.-Neh. it is plainly based on Origen's; in I Esdras and Chron., on the other hand, it differs so widely as to make one of two suppositions necessary: either it represents an intermediate stage between the older and more correct text of A and the type selected by Origen; or else, it is eclectic. It usually contains old and relatively correct readings, but is plainly related everywhere to the Origen text in a way that is not true of cod. A and its nearest relatives. I have not made any thorough examination, and so cannot speak with confidence.

⁴²In codex %, the "second" corrector (% o.s), of the seventh century, has introduced these passages, as well as considerable other material of varied character. See the description of his work in a preceding note.

points at which I have tested it, has seemed to abandon its companions of the B group and to conform to the text of A and its fellows; see above. The investigation is rendered more difficult by the fact that X is wanting in nearly the whole of Chronicles, while the help of the Syriac and Ethiopic versions is no longer to be had, and the text of B is so corrupt as to render it unfit to be a basis of comparison.

The following passages will serve to show both the relatively poor quality of the Hexaplar text in these books (Chronicles, Ezra, Nehemiah, I Esdras) and also the relative amount of corruption in the several MSS which compose the Hexaplar group. It is often possible to recognize successive stages of degeneration, and in such cases it is almost invariably codex B which occupies the last stage.

Ezr. 10:23, where A and nearly all of the MSS of its "group" have the correct reading:

- Α, Κωλιτας καὶ Φεθεια καὶ Ιουδας
- 🕏 , Κωλιταυ κ. Φααια κ. Ιεδομ
- Ν, Κωλιετ κ. Φαδαια κ. Ναδομ
- Β, Κωλιευ κ. Φαδαια κ. Ιοδομ
- Neh. 1:1, Α, Χασεηλου; Ν and Ν, Σεχεηλ; Β, Σεχενλου.
- I Chron. 11:12, A (correctly), Αχωχι; &, Αχωνει; Β, Αρχωνει.
- I Chron. 11:33 f., Theodotion's original transliteration must have been:

Ελιαβα ὁ Σααλαβωνι, βενε Ασαμ ὁ Γουνι

- Α, Ελιαβα ὁ Σαλαβωνι, υίοὶ Ασαμ ὁ Γωυνι
- 🔾, Εαμαβα ὁ Σωμει, Βεννεας ὁ Σομογεννουνιν"
- Β, Σαμαβα ὁ Ομει, Βενναιας ὁ Σομολογεννουνειν

The variations of & and B from the original text are due here, as in the other cases, merely to copyist's blunders in the Greek.

- I Chron. 12:27, A and N, Ιωαδαε; Ν, Τωαδαε; Β, Τωαδας.
- I Chron. 15:9, A, Ελιηλ; ℵ, Ενηλ; Β, Ενηρ.^ω
- Neh. 7:70, 72, A, $\chi \circ \theta \omega \nu \omega \theta$; \aleph and B, in both places, $\mu \epsilon \chi \omega \nu \omega \theta$.

44 Presumably εν from ω, as occasionally elsewhere.

I Esdr. 5:66, A, $A\sigma\beta a\sigma\alpha\rho\epsilon\theta$, the original (corrupt) reading of the I Esdr. fragment; B, N, $A\sigma\beta a\kappa\alpha\phi\alpha\theta$; and this still more corrupt form stood in the Hexapla, as is shown by the Syriac and Ethiopic versions.

I Esdr. 8:7, A, Εζρας; B, Αψαρας(!); so also the Syr.-Hex. and the Eth. (with a slight variation). Cf. the form found in B in 9:46.

I Esdr. 8:31. For $\Phi aa\theta \mu \omega a\beta$ (or Π'), given in all the MSS which are not Hexaplar, B, Syriac, and Ethiopic have $Maa\theta \mu \omega a\beta$.

I Esdr. 8:33. The Hebrew (Ezr. 8:7) has: מברר עילם ישעיה This was correctly rendered in the I Esdras text, as A and its associates show: ἐκ τῶν νίῶν Ελαμ, Ἰεσσίας. In the text of Origen's LXX column, the first letter of each of the two proper names was missing; B has ἐκ τῶν νίῶν Λαμ, Ἐσιας, and with this the Ethiopic agrees, though combining the two proper names into one; Syriac has בובן פטמון, i. e. the same text, but reading MAA in place of ΛΑΜ.

These examples, which are truly representative, could be vastly multiplied. And they all tell the same story. It is an interesting question, but one which we hardly have the means of answering, how Origen happened to choose this inferior text for his "Septuagint." Possibly some old and venerated codex led him astray; or it may be that he made the same mistake which modern scholars have made. Not knowing that Theodotion was the author of this version—and we may be sure (see AJSL, p. 68) that he did not know it—he may have looked with suspicion on the Greek text that agreed closely with MT, and have preferred the one that showed somewhat more divergence. Even the latter stood nearer to the Hebrew (leaving proper names out of account) than was the case with the Greek versions of most of the Old Testament books.

3. The Versions Made from Origen's "Septuagint"

The main facts regarding the Syriac translation, made by Paul of Tellā, I have already set forth (AJSL, pp. 65 ff.). It is most unfortunate that just this portion of the Maes codex, which Text, auch bei den Namen," when it is everywhere as clear as daylight that the difference between the readings of A and B, in Swete's apparatus, is a difference due simply to inner-Greek corruption, and that A has, or approximates to, the very forms from which those of B were corrupted, passes my comprehension.

contained Chronicles, First Esdras, Ezra, and Nehemiah, should have perished utterly, leaving no trace behind. In other manuscripts I Esdras has been preserved entire; and a single MS—published in AJSL, pp. 71-74—gives us a few extracts from Nehemiah.

We know that this version was made from the fifth column of the Hexapla, and that it was very exact. In the attempt to determine its relation to the existing Hexaplar MSS of the Chron.-Ezra broks we are at a great disadvantage, because of the scantiness of the material. Codex & lacks I Esdras; and N, as has already been observed, either occupies an intermediate position or else yields an eclectic text, and cannot be trusted as a witness to Origen's readings. Throughout I Esdras the Syriac stands pretty close to codex B, but represents in general a text somewhat less disfigured by the blunders of scribes. The same is true in the Nehemiah extracts. Here, where we are at last able to compare R, the portion of the text is too small in extent to give a satisfactory basis of comparison. The Syriac agrees very noticeably with B in reproducing the clerical blunder Χελκεια (محمد) in 1:1, and in retaining ἐκτετιναγμένων (عنعيا) instead of ἐκτεταγμένων, in 4:16(10); in the former case against all other witnesses, and in the latter against all but the faithful codex 55. On the other hand, the Syriac agrees with N against B in the passages 8:2, καὶ ἔως; 8:9, οἱ συνετίζοντες; ibid., ἤκουσεν; 8:10, μερίδας. Ι have not made any careful comparison, however.

The Greek of Origen's fifth column contained his selected text expanded by the insertion of translations of the plus of MT, these additions being marked in each case by an asterisk and a metobelus. The early Greek transcripts of this column, made by those who wished the "true Septuagint text," omitted the asterisked portions, as we have seen. Paul of Tellā translated the whole column, retaining the signs." Subsequent copyists of his version generally retained the whole text, but omitted the signs. This is true of the Nehemiah extracts in our single surviving manuscript; the plus of the Hebrew is there, but not distinguished in any way. See for illustration 2:1, 8; 8:18.

[#] The text of I Esdras of course did not contain any of these asterisked passages.

Of an Ethiopic version of Origen's "LXX," only I Esdras has thus far been published. It has not heretofore been recognized as Hexaplar in its origin. Whether a similar version of any other of the Chron.-Ezra books was made, is not known. The text was edited, from five manuscripts, by Dillmann in his Vet. Test. Aethopici Tom. V, Libri Apocryphi, Berlin, 1894. He himself remarks concerning this version (p. 219) that it was made at an early date, from a Greek text which it renders very faithfully, and that it has been well preserved.

Examination of this version shows that it is a valuable witness to the Hexaplar text. It must have been made with unusual care, from a comparatively trustworthy codex. The Greek which can be restored from it coincides throughout with that obtained from the Syr.-Hex., B, 55, and (frequently) N, in sharp distinction from the other and more common type of text represented by A and the army of cursives. Some striking examples of this coincidence have already been given, and a great many more could be added if it were necessary. Ethiopic versions of Old Testament books are usually of very little consequence, and it is therefore most refreshing to find one that is really useful.

It is interesting to see what indisputable evidence is furnished of the corrupt state of the manuscript which Origen selected. Thus, in 5:18, where the old "Egyptian" reading was Βαιθασμωθ, the stupid doublet Βαιθασμων ζαμμωθ is faithfully reproduced by the Ethiopic and B (Syriac is wanting here); and in 8:29, where the ordinary text had Φινεας, Γερσων· ἀπὸ, the monstrous reading Φορος, Ταροσοτομος (think of pinning our faith to such transcribers as these!) is attested by B, Syriac, and Ethiopic alike. Another good illustration is found in 9:25. Here, instead of $\theta\nu\rho\omega$ ρῶν, "doorkeepers," Origen's text had θυγατέρων, "daughters" (!), and this nonsense is transmitted, as usual, by B, Ethiopic, and Paul of Tella. That we are ultimately dealing in these cases merely with a single very corrupt manuscript is proved conclusively—as also in a hundred similar cases—by the fact that both the Syrian text (preserved in L) and the ordinary Egyptian text (given by the great majority of the MSS) testify only to the correct reading.

The Ethiopic will generally be found, then, to agree with codex B. In many passages it differs, however, its distance from B being, on the whole, about the same as that of the Syriac, with which, in turn, it frequently fails to coincide.

4. The Two Main Branches of the Greek Tradition

In the case of the Chron.-Ezr. books, the fact of a double tradition of the Greek text can be especially well observed. The one branch may be called the Syrian, inasmuch as it forms the basis of the Lucianic recension; the other I have termed Egyptian, and this designation, though probably not exact, is at least convenient.

In the I Esdras fragment, and especially in the Story of the Youths, where there is no complication from successive translations, conformation to a Semitic text, and the like, the phenomenon of the two slightly differing types of text is seen in its simplest form. A typical case is that of the proper name in 4:29, which I have elsewhere discussed (AJSL, p. 183). Here, the form Baζaκου is attested by a formidable array of witnesses, including Josephus; while the more familiar form, Baptakov, goes back to a period considerably earlier than Origen, as is shown by the fact that it is attested by all our Greek MSS, excepting the few which constitute the L group. Throughout the whole of I Esdras, something similar to this can be observed. There are plainly two distinct traditions of the Greek text, differing from each other slightly, on the whole, including both the spelling of the proper names and the wording of the narrative. The variation is not at all such as to suggest two translations, but consists rather in those occasional differences which inevitably arise in the course of time, through the ordinary accidents of transmission, when documents are handed down through separate lines or families of manuscripts. The one "family" includes the text adopted by Origen, and also nearly all of the extant MSS; and we may therefore regard Alexandria as its proper home, even though it was in current use far beyond the borders of Egypt. Of the text belonging to the other line of transmission we know that it formed the basis of the one which came to be regarded as authoritative in Syria, at least in and after the fourth century A. D. (Swete, Introduction, pp. 80-86). It is thus presumably the text which had been handed down in Syria and Palestine from an early date. Its influence also extended far to the north and west. The MSS containing it are few (those of the L recension), but it is also embodied in the old Latin version of I Esdras. This same type of text—plainly belonging to the same tradition as that of I Esdras—is found in other parts of the Old Testament, as is well known. A. Mez, in a pamphlet published in 1895, showed that the Greek text followed by Josephus in his Antiquities, for the part of the Old Testament which includes Joshua, Judges, and the two books of Samuel, was usually the same which underlies the L recension. I had already, in my own investigation of the text of I Esdras, conducted in that same year, made a similar comparison for this book, and reached a result somewhat resembling that of Mez. In this case, however, Josephus' text does not correspond to the nucleus of L; nor, on the other hand, does it agree throughout with any form of the "Egyptian" tradition; it seems rather to occupy an intermediate position, giving now the reading of the one, now of the other. The cases in which Josephus coincides with L, against the ordinary I Esdras text, while not many in number, are worthy of notice. Examples are: I Esdr. 1:9, cf. Jos. x, 71, the numbers of the sheep and bullocks. I Esdr. 4:29, cf. Jos. xi, 54, the name of the father of Apama, already mentioned as an example. Ezra. 4:10 (the passage now missing in our I Esdr. 2:16 [13]), cf. Jos. xi, 19, the name of the king, Salmanassar. Inasmuch as all the Greek texts of I Esdras came from a single MS, the beginning of the two diverging lines of tradition, Egyptian and Syrian, lies not very far back, presumably a good while after the time of Josephus. It follows that the coincidence of his text with either one of the two (in cases where we cannot suspect correction or contamination) gives us the original reading of the I Esdras fragment.

From what has been said thus far, it might be supposed that the L text embodies merely the Syro-Palestinian tradition of the ⁴⁷ Die Bibel des Josephus untersucht für Bücher, v.-vii. der Archdol., Basel. See also Swete's Introduction, p. 379.

I Esdras Greek in the same way that the MSS of the A and B groups embody the Egyptian tradition. This is by no means true, as will be shown below. The L text is everywhere contaminated, conflated, and arbitrarily altered, even in the Story of the Three Youths; and this unfortunate redaction—the only form in which we know the text—was undertaken at a late date.

In the canonical Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., again, we can observe the same phenomenon of a Syrian text differing slightly (in its primitive form) but unmistakably from the Egyptian text. The differentiation did not begin in this case until after the middle of the second century A. D., since it is in Theodotion's version that it takes place. We should therefore expect the variation to be relatively small, and this it is in fact; but the distinction between "Syrian" text and "Egyptian" text is a real and important one, nevertheless. No better illustration is needed than that which has already been given, above, in recording occasional instances in which the Syrian tradition preserves Theodotion's characteristic transliteration—directly against the whole tendency of the L recension—while the Egyptian emends by translating. It often happens, of course, that the L MSS contain a synonym of the word which is found in all the other codices. This is in many cases not the mere result of a somewhat free transmission, however, but rather of a deliberate revision; see below. are not a few instances, finally, of addition, subtraction, or alteration in the Egyptian text, where L has preserved the original form. A good example is furnished by I Chron. 26:16-18, where in the whole array of MSS of the A and B groups vs. 18 contains a secondary rendering 46 which was evidently unknown in Syria, as it is wanting in L. Such revision as this is rare in the Egyptian text, however, while in L it is the rule. An example of a later Egyptian alteration, whose influence has not proceeded quite so far, is II Chron. 33:14, where MT reads: ולבוא בשער הדגים

^{##} Based on a slightly different Hebrew text? The זְּשִׁלְּבֶּוֹלְ suggests שׁלְכֹּת + שׁלְשׁת ; the word בְּבְּעַרְבָּן is apparently in another place; בּוֹנִילִה is not translated in either version. This added rendering makes it still more certain, by the way, that in the first clause of vs. 17 the original reading was בְּלִיךָ , and not בּלִילָם (the הַ came from the lastletter of the preceding word). Our modern translators, editors, and commentators appear not to have noticed this.

Theodotion rendered this: [Μετὰ ταῦτα ἀκοδόμησεν] καὶ ἐκπορευομένων τὴν πύλην τὴν ἰχθυικὴν κυκλόθεν (reading Το) εἰς τὸ οφαλ. In this text, through the blunders of a copyist or two and the influence of the Greek in 27:3, the word ἰχθυικὴν was lost and εἰς τὸ οφαλ became εἰς αὐτὸ οφλα (B, al. ὅπλα). A revising hand added, presumably in the margin of a MS, a new rendering of the passage: κατὰ τὴν εἰσοδὸν τὴν διὰ τῆς πύλης τῆς ἰχθυικῆς καὶ περιεκύκλωσεν (=MT) τὸ ἄδυτον. This then found its way as a doublet reading into the text of an important group of codices, including A, and into the margin of B. A single one of these changes, that of ΟΦΑΛ into ΟΦΛΑ, antedates the branching-off of the Syrian tradition; in other respects L has here kept the original reading.

In general, the best MSS of the Egyptian family present a homogeneous text which has been very little revised. By comparing them among themselves, with the help of the massoretic Hebrew, we can usually find our way back to the very words of Theodotion. The aid of L can never be dispensed with, however, and in a good many cases it is our sole Greek witness to the true reading. It is sometimes the case, to be sure, that even with the testimony of both recensions before us we are at a loss to find the original. With L alone, on the other hand, we should be very badly off. Unless it is constantly controlled by the Egyptian text it is very difficult to put it to any critical use. Along both of these main lines of tradition there has been a good deal of accidental corruption of the text, the greater part of which is easy to trace. The only type of text in which this corruption has gone very far is, as has been shown, Origen's own "Septuagint." The relation of the A group to the B group is in all other respects a close one; see, for an illustration, Neh. 12:37b-38, where a long passage is wanting in ABN, though present in many cursives as well as in the L text. It formed a part of the Theodotion version, as the θ avvoupeu μ shows (cf. 3:11). That is, the codex which was the ancestor of both A and the MS which Origen took as the basis of his text had accidentally lost this passage. Among the cursives of the Egyptian family which deserve close attention, cod. 56 and (especially) the Aldine MS 121⁵⁰ are conspicuous for the extent to which they have preserved the original readings of the Theodotion version.

5. The Syrian Tradition, the Lucian Recension, and our L Text

How wide an influence the Syro-Palestinian text exerted during its early history, while it represented merely a divergent form of the Greek tradition, we do not know. We do not even know whether it was ever a relatively correct text. We know simply that it preserved a good many old readings which were lost or changed in the more widely current version. It presumably deteriorated gradually, like its fellows, until the time when it was made the basis of that thoroughgoing recension which has survived to the present day.

Near the end of the third century A.D., Lucian of Antioch undertook a revision of the Greek Old Testament. The few facts which are known in regard to this Syrian editor have often been rehearsed; and the reasons why our L text is commonly supposed (and doubtless rightly) to be identical with Lucian's recension are also familiar. Even the bare comparison of the citations from Theodoret, given in Holmes and Parsons, would lead one to the conclusion that L is an Antiochian text; while the fact that it represents not a growth but an arbitrary revision is patent enough.

Occasionally in descriptions, and commonly in actual use, our L text is treated as though it were identical, or nearly identical, with the text of the Syro-Palestinian tradition. Thus Swete (Introduction, p. 379), in dealing with the Old Testament text used by Josephus, speaks of a probability that in certain of the historical books "the Greek Bible of Palestine during the second half of the first century presented a text not very remote from that of the recension which emanated from Antioch early in the fourth." But this is by no means the true state of the case. The version as reconstructed by Lucian bears about the same relation to the one on which it was based as a thoroughly remodeled, renewed, and enlarged house bears to its smaller original. In every part of the structure, a great many of the old beams, boards, stones, and other materials have been replaced by new ones, new fabric has everywhere been superadded to the old, and the fashion of the whole has been changed. The following classes of alterations characterize the Lucian recension:

⁵¹The old Latin translation of I Esdras gives us some information on this point, to be sure; see below.

⁵² See Swete, Introduction, pp. 80-86.

- 1. The text has been extensively conformed to the massoretic Hebrew. (a) The plus of MT is freely inserted; not consistently—nothing is done consistently in the L recension—but as a rule. Thus I Chron. 26:16, 17; Ezr. 9:13; 10:3; Neh. 2:1, 8; 8:9; 11:23; these being merely single examples of what takes place in every chapter. (b) The Greek text is very frequently corrected according to the Hebrew. The original reading of the Greek is changed from singular to plural, or vice versa, in order to conform to MT. Words which appear to be out of agreement with the Hebrew are often dropped, and their places are taken by translations of MT. So, for instance, in Ezr. 9:3, 5.
- 2. The Greek has been very much contaminated from other Greek texts. These include: (a) The parallel or duplicate accounts. Thus, a great many of the original readings of the L I Esdras have been discarded, their places being filled by the readings of the canonical version. In like manner, the readings of the parallel passages in the other historical books are adopted whenever they happen to be preferred. That is, for example, the reader of the L version of Chronicles must everywhere be prepared to find that the word or phrase with which he is dealing has simply been transplanted thither from Genesis, or Samuel, or Kings. (b) Readings found in any part of the Old Testament may be substituted for those of Theodotion in the interest of the harmonistic (c) Harmonizing alterations on the basis of the immediate context, usually very mischievous, are frequently made. Thus in I Esdr. 5:5 instead of ὁ τοῦ Ζοροβαβελ L offers ὁ καὶ Ζοροβαβελ.
- 3. One constant feature of the L recension is its conflation from various sources. Side by side with Theodotion's rendering, in these books, we very often have that of some other translator, or an extract from a parallel passage. Some of these secondary renderings are derived from the other Hexaplar versions; some are doubtless the work of Lucian himself; still others are of unknown origin. For characteristic examples see I Chron. 22:3; Ezr. 9:13; Neh. 4:10 (2), 27 (17); 6:10. Often a correction stands beside the word it was intended to correct, as in I Chron. 4:22. Occasionally a long passage is repeated in varying form, as in I Esdr. 1:9b-13, where the I Esdras and Chronicles accounts are put side by side. Not infrequently the translation of our MT is accompanied by the rendering of a manifest corruption of it, as in Neh. 2:6, 8.

It would be interesting to search for traces of the work of Aquila and Symmachus among these double renderings, whether they are found in L or in other recensions or manuscripts of these books. Sometimes, though probably not often, the identification would be possible. In Neh. 5:13 (L), Οῦτως ἐκτινάξαι ὁ θεὸς σὺν πάντα ἄνδρα δς οὐ στήσει σὺν τὸν λόγον τοῦτον κ.τ.λ., where the σὺν · · · · σὺν, representing ΤΝ · · · · ΤΝ, is not in the ordinary Greek, it seems certain that we have an extract from the translation of Aquila. In 13:25 (L) the verb ἐμαδάρωσα (otherwise unknown) looks like an imitation of the Hebrew ΤΩΝ (not rendered here by Theodotion) on the basis of the verb μαδίζειν, "make bald." If this is really its origin, it is presumably a coinage of Aquila, whose fondness for such new creations is well known.

The hand of Symmachus is pretty certainly to be seen in the double rendering of in the Hexaplar text (%, B, but not the Syr.-Hex.) of Neh. 1:3, ἐν τῆ χώρα ἐν τῆ πόλει. We know that Symmachus would have been likely to substitute πόλις for the older rendering χώρα, for he makes this very same correction in I Kings 20:14 and Dan. 8:2. The secondary translation in II Chron. 33:14 (the passage already discussed above), where בַּבְּיֵלֵה is rendered by τὸ ἄδυτον—the doublet this time also occurring not in L but in certain Egyptian MSS—suggests Symmachus, though I do not know that it is possible to say more than this. In I Sam. 5:9 Symmachus renders by κρυπτά, and he is the only one of the translators to interpret the root in this way. In Neh. 3:15, where MT has του, and the ordinary Egyptian text reads τῶν κωδίων, codex κ has, instead, θε τοῦ Σιλωαμ. This certainly appears to be an ascription to Theodotion, as Klostermann has observed. Whether it is a correct ascription or not is another question, but the possibility can hardly be denied. In that case we should have to suppose that a rendering corresponding to our MT has supplanted the original one here.

4. Alterations merely in the interest of literary quality and completeness, or to suit the editor's dogmatic or other preferences, are everywhere abundant. These include: (a) The removal (usual, but not invariable) of Theodotion's transliterations, which are accordingly replaced by translations. For examples, see the list above. (b) The free revision of difficult phrases, often to the extent of changing their meaning and completely obscuring their relation to the original Semitic. A characteristic example is I Esdr. 4:39, where instead of the exactly rendered, but disturbing, Aramaic idiom, τὰ δίκαια ποιεί ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἀδίκων, "she executes judgment on all the wicked," the L text has binaia ποιεί, καὶ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἀδίκων ἀπέχεται. So in 5:6 L alters τοῦ πρώτου μηνός (for τη πρώτη τοῦ μηνός) into τῷ πρώτφ μηνί. Or in 2:17 (14) where the ordinary text has ναὸν ὑποβάλλονται —in MT אשיא ידיטו L has "improved" the reading to vaòv ύπερβάλλοντα θεμελιούσιν. Or in II Chron. 2:12 (13), τὸν παίδά μου substituted for τον πατέρα μου. (c) Supplementary and interpretative additions, composed freely ad hoc. These are also very numerous, and every one of them is a trap for the unwary text-critic who wishes to advance science by giving new Hebrew readings from "Lucian." For example, in II Chron. 18:19 the narrative runs as follows: 'Yahwè said to his heavenly retainers, Who will mislead Ahab? One proposed one thing, and another another.' At this point L adds: καὶ εἶπεν, Οὕτως οὐ δυνήσει;

54 This word is a veritable translation of אל (cf. the Aramaic אל ', "hide"), and is by no means to be altered into βολίδων, as Klostermann proposes on the basis of the rendering in 4:17(11).

⁵⁵ Lagarde edits - wrongly, as I believe - καὶ εἶπεν οῦτως Οὐ δυνήσει,

"But Yahwe said, You will not succeed in this way." Compare vs. 21. In Neh. 4:8b (vs. 18 in the L Greek) just after the word בורהם, L has καὶ ὅρκισα αὐτοὺς κύριον λέγων, a purely arbitrary insertion in the Greek. There are many such examples, besides a good many cases in which the addition of a word or two has been made with interpretative intent. Thus, the words "to Jerusalem," Neh. 8:1; "of Benjamin," 11:8; the name "Ezra" in 8:18; see also I Esdr. 4:13, 48, 61; 5:5; Neh. 12:1, etc. Such interjected vocatives as "O king!" I Esdr. 4:43; "O Lord!" 4:60, are of course to be expected. And finally, a characteristic example is afforded by the close of I Esdras. In the original fragment, the end was reached in the middle of a sentence; but in the L text this inelegant conclusion is improved by the addition of a verse (Neh. 8:13) from the canonical version. (d) The substitution of synonyms. This well-known and comparatively harmless peculiarity of the L recension needs no illustration.

So much for the deliberate alterations undertaken by the Lucianic revision. As for the accidental corruption which the Syro-Palestinian Greek text had already undergone in the process of its transmission, before suffering this very extensive editorial transformation, it is sufficient to say that it does not appear to have been different, in kind or degree, from that which befell the standard Egyptian text. In general, the amount of this accidental corruption is much underestimated by those who have made use of Lagarde's edition. Klostermann (loc. cit., p. 508) even finds in some of it the evidence of differing dialects: "Wenigstens ist es kein Zufall, wenn die dentale Tenuis durch Sibilans ersetzt wird, wie ατιτα (ΝΣΤΣΠ), ατηρ, τελμων, bei Luc, durch αζιζα, αζηρ, σελμων." But this is a mistake. These are scribal blunders that recourse is had far too often to the hypothesis of divergent Hebrew texts, while there is far too little appreciation of the extent to which the Greek texts themselves have been corrupted in transmission. It is generally taken for granted, moreover (see, e. g., Benxinger's remark on the Greek MSS of Kings, in the introduction to his Comm.) that the text which diverges most from MT is the oldest and most important. But this is a criterion which has no value unless it is supplemented by exact information as to the quality of individual MSS and the nature of translations and recensions. Codex B and the L text, for instance, usually show the greatest divergence from MT, and in both cases the divergence means, as a rule, merely perversion of the older readings, which (more nearly agreeing with MT) are found in other MSS.

of a very common order, which abound also in the MSS of the ordinary text, and especially (of course) in B and its fellows.

These facts make it plain that the Greek published by Lagarde is not at all "the old Greek Bible of Palestine," and often bears little resemblance to it. It is in part a mixed text which is the result of an eclectic process, and in part a text arbitrarily constructed de novo; besides all the accidental deterioration which it has suffered. The fact cannot be emphasized too strongly that L in Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., when it differs from the ordinary Greek, usually does not represent another Hebrew text. It is mainly, of course, a translation of the Hebrew which lay before Theodotion. But this Heb. text almost everywhere agreed with our MT; moreover, the translation is very well preserved in the Egyptian MSS, and it is only rarely that L can improve upon their readings. It would presumably almost never be the case that a correct reading preserved only in L would happen also to represent a divergence in Theodotion's Hebrew. The doublet readings in L, whether Hexaplaric or not, are, as a rule, derived either from our MT or from a manifestly corrupt form of it. Really helpful corrections of MT are extremely rare. One is to be found in Neh. 11:17, 700 alvov for החהלה; undoubtedly derived from another Hebrew text, since Jerome's Latin makes the same correction. But in the most of the cases where L presents variant readings which sound plausible, we are not by any means at liberty to suppose that these were derived from a Hebrew text; on the contrary, they are pretty certain to be arbitrary improvements, of one kind or another, in the Greek itself. It follows, that emendation of MT on the basis of L alone is almost never permissible in these books; never, in fact, except for the strongest reasons.

All this is obvious enough; and yet our Old Testament scholars, in using the L text of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., treat it habitually as though it represented a Hebrew text of its own. Thus Kittel,⁵⁷ in his several works on Chron.; Benzinger, in his commentary on Chronicles; Bertholet, Comm. on Ezr.-Neh., and others. Siegfried, Comm. on Ezr.-Neh., does not pay much attention to the examination of the text.

Allied to the Lagarde text, but plainly not belonging to it, is the old Latin translation of I Esdras. This was made from the Syro-Palestinian Greek some time before the Lucianic revision; presumably in the second century A. D., since it is cited by Cyprian. In this version we really have a representative of the old Syro-Palestinian text, and the aid which it gives is important. The many additions, corrections, and conflations introduced by Lucian do not appear in it. Its text has come down to us in several slightly differing forms, which need to be re-examined.

The L Greek text, then, is an instrument only to be used with the utmost caution. It is true that even in Chron.-Ezr.-Neh. it contains a good deal of valuable material, not found elsewhere; but this is much less in amount, and far more difficult to secure, than is commonly supposed. The quest of it is not quite the search for two grains of wheat in two bushels of chaff, for in this case the material in which it is imbedded has also a certain value of its own—but only when its origin and true character are under-have observed one case, Neh. 11:8, in which MT can be emended in accordance with a reading peculiar to L; but even here it may be that the ci &&&&&e airco came from a happy conjecture and not from any real Hebrew reading. For examples of this mistaken use, see his notes on I Chron. 4:41 (where the Greek must originally have been ris wyis & coper deci, and its Heb.—exactly our MT), 5:20 (of course either ipoi[in] our or ipon[in] our jet of jet of

In general, the apparatus of this Biblia Hebraica in Chron.-Exr.-Neh. consists largely of information which is quite worthless for its intended purpose. The "LXX" notes have rarely any significance for the Hebrew text. In the L version of I Chron. 9:31, for instance, we have a bit of corrupt Greek side by side with its correct original. Why include such stuff here? Or why print in II Chron. 2:13 "LXX + sai véaires," when it is obvious at the first glance that the verb had its origin in a blundering dittography of the first letters of the following Hebrew word? Plain blunders of Greek copyists are also recorded, as in I Chron. 7:8 (twice). The apparatus of a Hebrew Bible (and a reprint of MT at that!) is not the place to study the performances of third-rate Greek scribes, interesting as the study might be under other circumstances.

36 See, for example, his comments on I Chron. 2:18 f.; 3:22: 11:1, 8 (περιεβίωσα τὸ; cf. Ex. 22:18), 11 (contamination from II Sam. 23:8), 22; 15:13(!); II Chron. 2:12; 35:3.

⁵⁹ Such as those in 1:9-12; 2:17 (18); 4:13, 39, 43, 48, 60, 61; 5:5—to give only the examples which have already been mentioned. The incomplete sentence at the end of the I Redras fragment is filled out in the Latin, but not in the same way as in the Lucian Greek.

The folly of "criticizing" our MT by the use of a Greek text which has itself not been criticized at all is nowhere more striking than in the present-day use of Lagarde's edition. The rule usually adopted appears to be: Take any Greek reading which seems useful, no matter whence it comes. Thus it happens that words due simply to copyists' blunders in the Greek, others which plainly resulted from a corrupt form of our MT, and readings which a closer scrutiny would have shown to be merely later doublet renderings of the same text, are all laid under contribution, and new and strange Hebrew phrases, said to correspond to them, are forthwith constructed. Since the conglomerate L text offers so much that is not found elsewhere, it is naturally a mine for those who are not over particular. Klostermann, in the introduction to his commentary on the books of Samuel, quoted in Driver, Hebrew Text of the Books of Samuel, p. lii, has expressed himself as follows: "Let him who would advance science accustom himself above all things to the use of Lagarde's edition of the recension of Lucian." Theoretically, this has some justification—though it would be better to advise students to begin by learning to make a scientific use of the ordinary Greek text; in practice, there has thus far been little use made of the L

One of the first emendations made by Guthe, in his Polychrome Ezra and Nehemiah, is an insertion in the text of Ezr. 1:3, on the sole basis of a reading in the Lucian I Esdras. But no one who is well acquainted with the L recension could doubt for a moment that its δς προθυμείται τοῦ πορευθήναι (2:3) is a free editorial insertion in the Greek.

These are merely typical instances, of three different kinds, one from each of the three books. The list could be extended to include nearly all of the modern "critical" use of L in Chron.-Exr.-Neh.

text in any part of the Old Testament which has tended noticeably to advance science. Not one in twenty of all the "emendations" of the Hebrew text hitherto made on the basis of Lucian readings will survive any critical examination. And the opportunities of doing harm through uncritical methods are much more numerous here than elsewhere. I would suggest instead this maxim: Let him who would advance science keep away as far as possible from critical operations with the Lucian recension until he has learned what it is and how to use it.

There is one purpose, however, for which the attention of scholars really needs to be directed to the L text at once, and that is, for the study of the Greek itself. There is doubtless much to be learned from it as to the history of both Hebrew original and the Greek versions, especially the Hexaplar, as well as in regard to the primitive readings of the Syro-Palestinian recension. And one of the first important undertakings of the criticism of the Greek Old Testament should be the reconstruction, so far as it is possible, of Theodotion's translation of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh.

V. THE CRITICAL PROCESS IN RESTORING THE SEMITIC TEXT

In investigating the Hebrew-Aramaic text of these books, in the part of the history covered by I Esdras, the process (after making sure of the traditional reading) must always be the following.

- 1. Ascertain the Egyptian Greek text of the canonical recension. Swete's edition usually (though not always) suffices for this purpose; and when it is used, the reading of codex A must always be given the presumption of superiority over that of codices B and &.
- 2. Compare the Syrian text (Lagarde's edition) of the same book, bearing in mind its treacherous character. By the comparison we can reach approximately the original reading of Theodotion's version.
- 3. By comparing (a) the reading thus gained with (b) the Latin version of Jerome, and then with (c) the massoretic text, we can approximate to—and in most cases reach with certainty—the Heb.-Aram. text which was selected, edited, and made normative by the Jewish scholars at the beginning of the second century A.D.

- 4. Ascertain the reading of the Egyptian Greek text of I Esdras, using for this purpose (a) the text of A and the allied cursives, with which must be compared the witnesses to the Hexaplar Greek, including (b) codex B, (c) the Syriac of Paul of Tellā, and (d) the Ethiopic version.
- 5. Compare the Syro-Palestinian I Esdras, using (a) Lagarde's Greek (with the greatest caution, since this particular recension has not only suffered the usual "Lucianic" alterations, but has also been very extensively contaminated from the canonical Ezra), (b) the old Latin version, and (c) the text preserved by Josephus in his Antiquities. By thus comparing the Syrian with the Egyptian readings of I Esdras it is usually possible to gain the true text of the old Greek translation of Chron.-Ezr.-Neh., which was probably made shortly before the middle of the second century B. C.
- 6. Regain the Heb.-Aram. text from which this translation was made; and attempt, through comparison of this with the text of the second century A. D., to restore the words originally written by the Chronicler, or found by him in the sources which he used. In reasoning from the old Greek version to the Semitic text which lay behind it, one must bear in mind that this translation, while truly a "close" one, is considerably more free than the later renderings; also, that the Greek text has been much longer exposed to accidental corruption than that of Theodotion's version. Many readings which seem to point to variation in the Semitic original are really due to changes which have taken place in the Greek itself. And finally, in comparing the two parent Semitic texts with each other, some account must be taken of their relative correctness, so far as any general estimate is possible.

CRITICAL NOTES ON ESTHER

PAUL HAUPT

In the following nn. I have not attempted to give all the divergences exhibited by the Ancient Versions; as a rule, I have recorded only variations which throw some light on the Heb. text.* The ancient versions of E are so free and inaccurate (cf. e. g. nn. on 3, 13. 14; 4, 1. 11. 14; 5, 13; 6, 1; 7, 3. 4) that it would be a waste of time to discuss all discrepancies. It does not help us very much for the understanding of the Heb. text if we are informed half a dozen times (4, 7; 8, 1. 7. 13; 9, 15. 18) that the Kethiv is דהודים, but that the Qere prefers the contracted form יהודים; or that GV adds after יהודים: μετά τούς $\lambda \dot{\phi}$ עסע די די די האלה (as in 2, 1) but that it omits פֿשּׁה Ai θ ועד כוש = דעד כוש, while it adds in 3, 12: $\dot{a}\pi\dot{o}$ 'I $\nu\delta\iota$ κής έως τής Αίθιοπίας, ταις έκατον είκοσι έπτα χώραις; that it reads τοις φίλοις και τοις λοιποις έθνεσιν και τοις Περσών και Μήδων ένδό-לכל שריו ועבדיו חיל פרס ומדי הפרחמים that it renders ואת יכר תפארת גדולתו: καὶ τὴν δόξαν τῆς εὐφροσύνης τοῦ πλούτου αὐτοῦ, &c. &c.

W's \dagger and J's \dagger theory that \mathfrak{G} is more original than \mathfrak{M} seems to me untenable (cf. e. g. nn. on 6, 1; 7, 4; 8, 8). The fact that the text of \mathfrak{G} does not read like a translation from the Heb. (cf. however $\pi\epsilon\sigma\hat{\omega}\nu$ $\pi\epsilon\sigma\hat{p}$, 6, 13)|| is easily explained by the popularity of E. As soon as a foreign book becomes popular, the translations become more idiomatic and free.§ If a French play is to be a success in America or England, it is impossible to present a literal translation. It is necessary to introduce additions as well as omissions. I see nothing in 6 that is incompatible with the view that 6 is based on ## or, to be more accurate, on a recension of the Heb. text from which ## is derived (cf. e. g. nn. on 1, 10. 14; 7, 4; 9, 9). W deems it not impossible that E was intended for Alexandria, and therefore written in Greek; afterwards, he thinks, it may have been translated into Heb. for the use of the Palestinian Jews. But E was written by a Persian Jew about 130 B. C. The Alexandrian festal legend for the Feast of Purim is the so-called Third Book of the Maccabees, and the Book of Judith is a Palestinian Purim legend; see Haupt, Purim (Leipzig, 1906) p. 7, ll. 30-38. I cite this book as Pur. The first number after Pur. refers to the page; the second, to the line. Cant. denotes Haupt, The Book of Canticles (Chicago, 1902) reprinted from AJSL 18, 193-245; 19, 1-32. In the same way Eccl. is used for Haupt, Ecclesiastes (Baltimore, 1905) and Nah. for Haupt, The Book of Nahum (Baltimore, 1907) reprinted from JBL 26, 1-53.

^{*}It might be well to add that I completed the restoration of the Heb. text of E on Oct. 16, 1905, and that I revised it twice, on Aug. 6, 1906, and July 11, 1907. The Critical Notes were begun on Jan. 24, 1906, and finished on the following day; they were rewritten from June 9 to July 13 and on Aug. 4 and 5, 1906. Finally I recast them again from June 4 to July 12, 1907.

The unabbreviated names of Biblical Books printed in Italics (e. g. Kings, Psalms, &c) denote the critical notes on the Heb. text in SBOT, i. e. my edition of The Sacred Books of the Old Testament; the first number after the name of the Book refers to the page in SBOT, the second indicates the line. Thus Genesis 50, 9 refers to p. 50, l. 9 of the critical edition of the Book of Genesis in SBOT; but Gen. 50, 9 means chapter 50, verse 9 of the Book of Genesis. In the references to SBOT the (unabbreviated) names of the Books are printed in Italics; in the references to the received text of the Heb. Bible the names of the books are abbreviated, but not italicized, and the numbers of the chapters are printed in heavy-faced figures (1, 2, 3, &c).

I use \mathfrak{G} for \mathfrak{G}^{V} , i. e. $\mathrm{E}\sigma\theta\eta\rho\beta$ in L's edition (= A in Fritzsche's edition) and \mathfrak{G}^{L} for $\mathrm{E}\sigma\theta\eta\rho$ a (=B in Fritzsche's edition). The denotes the first Targum in L's edition; $\mathfrak{T}^{2}=\mathfrak{D}^{U}$ (the numbers after \mathfrak{T}^{2} refer to the pages and lines of L's edition). The apocryphal additions to E in \mathfrak{G} are cited according to the cc. and vv. of the Vulgate (3) e. g. 11, $2=\mathfrak{G}^{V}$ 1, 1. This corresponds to the numeration in the Authorized Version (AV).

A scholar who considers the Moabite stone to be metrical may discuss the poetic form of E;* but so far as I can see, it is written in prose, just as Ruth and Jonah are (apart from the Maccabean psalm inserted in c. 2; see AJSL 23, 256).

(1) אוֹ אַרְשִׁירָשׁ) is a corruption of אַרושירשׁ) = Old Pers. Khšayarša. It is not necessary to suppose that (בֹּשׁׁירֶשׁ) became אַרְשִׁירְשׁי (Kings 126, 47; 270, 22) and that the מוֹ איי were afterwards transposed, while the "was corrupted to ". The name שוֹרַבוֹשׁ does not appear as הַרִּיוֹשׁיִן.

For the transposition of the vowels cf. אֲדְשִׁיְרָפְּנִים (3, 12) for בּיִדְבָּ = Old Pers. khšatrapavan, also בֵּידְבָּ for אֲדִידְשָׁיָרָ (see n. on בַּיִדְבָּ, בַּיִּדְשָׁיָרֶן, בְּיִדְשָׁיָרֶן, Assyr. Araxšamna; see Pur. 23, 15;* cf. L, Purim, p. 52, below.

The first ין of ארשורוש is a corruption of י, the second is due to dittography of the המבורי and המבורי and המבורי, cf. the dittographed Ruth 2, 8; 3, 14; also לעבור־בך, Nah. 2, 1 (see Nah. 29, below) and ברודם (9, 19). The letters ן and ה as well as ן are often confounded, dittographed and haplographed (Pur. 51, 22). For and cf. E 8, 13; Ruth 2, 1, and Kings 259, 29. S reads correctly , just as we find in an Aramaic inscription: מבאביל, corresponding to the Babyl. Xiši'aršu (-i, -a) or Axšijaršu (x = -a). For confusion of ן and ר (ד) cf. my remarks on קוֹס ורכב" instead of ואנורה and אול ד'רול for האנורה (Ex. 15, 2) in AJSL 20, 158, below (see also 23, 225, below). The suffix in ברכ דרכבן is due to dittography of the initial ה of the following המדה. In the gloss 2 K 16, 10 we find דומשק for דרמשק; in Job 41, 21 (a variant to v. 20) חרתה stands for חרתה = Assyr. tartaxu, shaft, arrow (KB 6, 328). In E 1, 16; 2, 21; 3, 12; 8, 10 we find אדשורש; in 10, 1: אחשרש. The form וביה (أخشورش) is more correct than אחשורוש, although the first ז is a corruption of י. In ארשרש the omission of the \((for \(\)) before \(\) is due to haplography; similarly \(\) has been omitted before ן in אַרן (for הפרן) E 7, 8, and און (δαμάλως, סבר ביים)

^{*} Cf. also בול = Assyr. abûbu (Nah. 31) and modern Arab. qaba-jûr for French abat-jour (VG 1, 121, below).

[‡] IN 23 Ed. Meyer still renders: Ross und Reiter; he also maintains the pre-Exilic date of Moses' Song of Triumph. He agrees with me, however, in stating (p. 49, below) that there is some historical nucleus in the story of the catastrophe of the Egyptians; cf. my remarks in AJSL 20, 149, 153, 154, 158.

read pure instead of pures. Joel 1. 17: grang must be derived from any = array; see n. on 9. 26.

It is often stated that the name of God is never mentioned in E (cf. n. on 4, 14) while the King of Persia is referred to 187 times, and his kingdom 26† times; cf. c.g. W 27 and Hastings' DB 1, 733, footnote. S (137, n. 1) remarks that the King is mentioned 190 times. I find that the name where cocurs 29 times, while he is simply referred to as the King 193 times. This would be 222 times, not 187. In several passages, however, the title would be 222 times, not 187. In several passages, however, the title passages.

This discrepancy is not striking if the name which is a later addition in all the passages except 1, 1 and 3, 6 (see above). G' According is a later correction, just as G' Omorro for G' Acro. Z reads, at the beginning of the parenthesis, which are an According to AoF 3, 5 is Cambyses, and the conspiracy in 2, 21 was aimed at Cyrus (cf. below, ad 2, 21) but King which is E represents Alexander Balas (see Pur. 29, 8; 35, 42) i. e. the poor and wise youth alluded to in Eccl. 4, 13 (for poor = humble, of mean birth, of low origin, see AJSL 23, 226, n. 13).

The parentheses are a characteristic feature of E (cf. Pur. 9, 6). We find a great many explanatory parentheses in Herodotus; cf. e. g. Holder's edition where the parentheses are enclosed in () while glosses are enclosed in []. As E was written about B. c. 130, the Sadducean author may have read Herodotus' work, just as the Sadducean author of Ecclesiastes may have been acquainted with the works of Epicurus

^{*}This must not be interpreted to mean that all proper names, or titles, that might be dispensed with should be canceled, even if they are omitted in some of the Ancient Versions.

†This is correct only if we include \(\text{TOTS} \) in 1.19; 4.14; 5.1, where it refers to E.

and other Greek philosophers (Eccl. 6, n. 7). I have indicated the parentheses by () e. g. vv. 13. 14; 2, 5, 12; 5, 7. Transpositions are indicated by $\{\}$ and [] e. g. v. 6, not by ().

(2) The prefixed ההום is due to scribal expansion.

According to AOG 21 מלכותו בוללך על מא מלכותו שובה הוכלך על משבח הובלך על משבח הובלך על משבח הובלך על משבח הובלך על משבח הובלף או when he acceded to the throne. The beginning of the following verse, however, shows that the great banquet was given, not at the accession of the King, but in the third year of his reign. W (16, above; cf. 21, below) referred ε εθρονίσθη (several MSS have ενεθρονίσθη) to the solemn enthronization of the King, which may have been celebrated three years after the accession of the King (cf. Jacob, ZAT 10, 281). The German Emperor William I. succeeded his elder brother Frederick William IV. on Jan. 2, 1861, but his coronation was celebrated at Königsberg on Oct. 18, 1861. 6 εθρονίσθη (which is a free translation of מוברת על כפא בלכותן שובה און שובה שובה שובה שובה בל בשבח על כפא בלכותן (cf. εν αὐταῖς ταῖς ἡμέρως) but this is not the original meaning of ft. Heb. בירך, (אַ בּבּיבָר, עּבּיבָּל, בּרַרָּהָא) is a Babyl. loanword = birtu, citadel (HW 185a). It בירָרָה denotes the Acropolis of Susa; so, correctly S. (4) The statement (AoF 3, 31, n. 1) that the original meaning of this passage was undoubtedly that the King gave a banquet after having displayed his power is untenable; בהראות cannot mean after having shown. Neither 6 καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα μετὰ τὸ δεῖξαι αὐτοῖς nor 6 εἰς τὸ ἐπιδαιχθῆναι (3 ut ostenderet) are correct. The emendation הארון is gratuitous.

The 180 days may be an exaggeration, just as the 10,000 talents (3, 9) or the 50 cubits (5, 14) or the 75,000 said to have been slain by the Jews (9, 16) but the author undoubtedly intended to convey the idea that the banquet lasted 180 days, i.e. half a year.

- אל הבים הבים is a corrective gloss (or variant; cf. Adap Narav in 6t 3, 7 and Kings 213, 48; 291, 4; Nah. 40, 5; also n. on אול הברוא און, v. 10, and n. on 8, 6) to the following משונים ושאר יום; it is omitted in 6th. The glossator may have considered the 180 days an exaggeration; cf. second n. on 6, 8.
- או מוברול רעד קטן means both high and low, not old and young; the latter phrase is expressed by מַנער ועד זמָן (3, 13). B interprets כמברול ועד קטן correctly in the present verse; but in v. 20 he takes it to mean old and young.

וחצר (בנת ביתן המלך א) בחצר גנת ביתן המלך In is according to Wn a gloss to גנת ביתן; but this is impossible. 6 εν αύλη οίκου του βασιλέως omits [] ; 6 has ένδον εν τη αύλη του βασιλέως. The feast was not given in the park: this would have ruined the park; it was given in the forecourt of the royal park. This forecourt (D in the groundplan of the Acropolis of Susa in Billerbeck's Susa, p. 132) had a mosaic pavement. A mosaic pavement in the park (B) would be very strange. Nor is E's banquet (c. 7) given in the בנה ביתן; the King goes from E's banquet to the park (7, 7) and returns from the park to the place of the banquet (7, 8). According to Ch (EB is a corruption of ברתן: it was an orchard of pistachio nut-trees that was meant! It might just as well be explained as a slight modification of ירחמאל! But ביתן is a Babyl. loanword (KAT*, 649) derived from bitanu, palace. Cf. tarbaçu ša bitani in Behrens, Briefe kultischen Inhalts (Leipzig, 1906) p. 39, n. 3. The idea (AoF 3, 2) that ביתן is an ideogram with phonetic complement (n + r)appadan or maethana)* is impossible; see Pur. 48, 10. The punctu-

(6) אור הור is an explanatory gloss to the following Pers. loanword ברכם אלמימסיס. A second explanatory gloss to ברס is ארבים which must exchange places (cf. n. on 3, 11) with הכלח. The transposition of ארבים and הכלח is probably due to 8, 15 where we find ברט ; cf. the remarks on הרבין (Nah. 3, 17) in Nah. 33. For ארבין הכלח הכל my remarks in THCO 220. Both terms are Babyl. loanwords (KAT*, 649, n. 2). Muschelkalk (shell-limestone) is called in Assyrian pilu or pūlu = πῶρος; see AJSL 23, 259, below; Nah. 16, n. 15.—Heb. ησηρος may be identical with Assyr. sixru (HW 495) which is probably another name for šubū (HW 637) = iɔm (Ex. 28, 19; 39, 12) rendered in 63: ἀχάτης; so it may mean onyx marble which the Romans called alabastrites. Onyx is but a variety of agate. Delitzsch's conjecture (Proleg. 85) that šubū = iɔm denotes the diamond, is improbable.—The meaning of ὑm is reasonably certain; the explanation of the three other terms is more or less conjectural.

(10) The names of the seven chamberlains of the king are just as doubtful as the names of the seven councilors (v. 14) and the names of the ten sons of H (9, 7). The name אחרבור is mentioned again in 7, 9 as ברכונה, with final הובונה instead of & (cf. Ruth 1, 20 &c). The name אחרבור is seems to be miswritten for אורבור (6, 2) ברכונה (2, 21). For ع = 3 = 5 cf. AJSL 23, 235, n. 46; also n. on 9, 9. The name דרבונא suggested destruction; cf. المُعْمَدُ and المَعْمَدِ = المُعْمَدُ (SG² § 128, B). In בבים, פּרירתא ודינא (Œ אוריתא ודינא, אוריתא, בבים, פּריב, σνι νόμον καὶ κρίσιν, 3 leges ac jura majorum, AV law and judgment, LB Recht und Händel) the term דֹן is not added as an explanation of דֹן (S). The meanings of the two terms are entirely different: n7 denotes especially a personal or executive act, while דין denotes a legislative act; הז is a royal decree (דבר מלכות, v. 19; cf. כדת 1, 8; 2, 12; 4, 16 and the last paragraph of nn. on 1, 14) or edict, and reans consuctudinary law including the ecclesiastical (ceremonial, ritual) law; in Arabic the term לבט din is therefore used for religion. The term כביט corresponds to the decisions of the Roman emperors, which were called decrees (Lat. decreta) and formed part of the imperial constitutions (Lat. constitutiones principum). Cf. v. 19: יצא דבר מלכות ויכתב בדתי פרס ומדי Heb. 77 is a Pers. loanword (cf. Ezra 63, 18) and means lit. what is given (Lat. datum). Heb. דרך, on the other hand, is a Babyl. loanword (KAT*, 650 below) which may ultimately be, not Semitic, but Sumerian (SD 527, 1). Babyl. dinu corresponds to Sumer. di=din, just as qant, reed is derived from Sum. gi = gin (CV 9). For the vanishing of final consonants in Sumerian see SFG 49; ASKT 136, l. 7; CV 8; and for the preservation of silent final consonants in loanwords cf. Pur. 16, 32 (also גנו = גנון).

S's conjecture בַּקְרָב (1 K 5, 7) is not good. אוֹן אַרְהָב מּמֹח אַרְסִיּהְאַלּאָר מֹּיִדְיּם (לַּנִּי προσηλθεν αὐτῷ (לַּנִּי προσηλθον) does not presuppose a different consonantal text; the Hiphil הַקְרַב may be

For the seven names of A (3 Charsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Mares, Marsana, Mamuchan) 6 has but three, viz. 'Αρκεσαῖος, Σαρσαθαίος (61 Σαρεσθεος) and Μαλησεαρ. In vv. 16. 21 6 has & Mouxaios for נמרכן; this may be a Greek adaptation, just as φρουραί, vigils for (see nn. on 9, 23) and βουγάιος, braggart for Γωγαίος = באני (see n. on 3, 1). For the article cf. the remarks on δ Maρδοχαίος = מרדכי (2, 5) and GK2, § 125, d. Movxaîos, it may be supposed, was regarded as a dialectic by-form of μοιχικός, adulterous; cf. Æolian Mοΐσα = Μοΐσα, Μοισαΐος = Μουσαΐος. This councilor may have been called & movações, because he advises the King to divorce the Queen; cf. The last clause of c. 1, ומדבר כלשון א which is omitted in 67, is a late gloss; in Meg. 12b (BT 3, 581) the phrase שורר בביתן is discussed, but there is no reference to ומדבר כלשון עמון. The meaning is: he is to talk plainly to her, as we say to talk plain English or United States, Ger. mit dem werde ich einmal Deutsch reden, French je vais lui parler français or je vous le dis en bon français; cf. my remarks on اعرس, JBL 19, 66. The modern Yiddish phrase is mamme loshen reden, to talk in the mother tongue (mamme = mamma, mother, and lóshen = לשוך, tongue). An Alexandrian Jew in such a case talked to his wife, not in Hebrew, but in the language of his people, i. e. in plain Greek, just as a Jewish rabbi in Berlin would talk to his wife in such a case, not in Hebrew, but in German; cf. the last n. on 8, 9. But $\tau \hat{\eta}$ πατρίφ φωνή (2 Macc. 7, 8. 21. 27) does not mean in der Landessprache (so Kamphausen in K) but in the paternal (or ancestral) language, i. e. in Hebrew (or Aramaic). The name מרדכי is derived from the name of the chief god of Babylon, Marduk (Pur. 10, 26) = או מֵרדָה instead of מָרדָה (with דֹּ; cf. סרבון). (Babyl. and) Persian New Year's festival (Pur. 11, 31). According to Ch (EB 3198) M derived his name, not from Marduk (so, too, C 50, below) but from Jerahmeel: Abihail is most probably a popular corruption of Jerahmeel, Kish = Cushi, and the true name of M may have been Carmeli; cf. the Jerahmeelitish explanations of the names Vashti (1, 9) and Shethar, Tarshish (1, 14) and contrast IN 400, 1.

For בהכרנצה we had better read בהכרנצה = 6 Ναβουχοδονοσορ = Babyl. Nabu-kudurri-uçur. For the correct pronunciation of mispointed cuneiform names see Kings 270, 16. The best form is the Kethiv in Jer. 49, 28: ברכדראצור . The o of the final syllable seems to be preserved also in בוכדנצור (Ezr. 2, 1) unless the j is merely due to dittography of the \lnot ; cf. the remarks on ארשורוש (1, 1) for אַרוֹשִירשׁ. The אַ (which was assimilated to the preceding consonant; cf. Non = xitt = xit', SFG 11, below; VG 127, 8) is found also in the spelling נבוכדואצר; the \neg instead of \exists (cf. nn. on \exists , 1, 8, = Assyr. urasu) in בכוכדראצר. The n instead of r is due to dissimilation (contrast Aram. תרין). We have no right to restore throughout כבוכדראצר (with ה and א) just as it would be pedantic to substitute in the text of an English author sycomore for sycamore, or Nazirite for Nazarite. The omission of the R and the substitution of for \(\) no doubt represent the actual pronunciation. The \(\) is certainly not due to graphic corruption, while the alleged preservation of the o in the final syllable צור (Ezra 26, 51) may be due to dittography of the ה (Pur. 9, 26). Alasa, the name of the place where Judas Maccabæus was slain, may be an intentional alteration of Adasa; see Pur. 38, 39.

M 177 Γ3, the daughter of his uncle (the brother of his father) means, of course, his cousin (cf. the extract from Maqrizi in L, Purim, p. 13) not his niece. Wd (169, below) calls E M's cousin, but in the introduction to c. 2 he refers to her as M's niece; so, too, p. 181, l. 10; on p. 186 (bis) he calls M E's uncle. The same mistake is made by N (EB 1400-7) and S (149, l. 8 from the bottom). Cf. also W 17. 18; C 49, 10; 57, 17; 78, 15. In C 53, 8 E's father, Abihail, is said to be a cousin of M. B (400) has correctly cousin, not niece. To inserts between θυγάτηρ and άδελφοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ the name Αμειναδαβ; see nn. on v. 15.

תאר הואר יפת הואר הארן וברו מראה refers to the figure; תארו מרבת מראה to the face; מובת cannot be derived from ראר, it is a secondary modification of הואר in the sense of form, shape; cf. n. on המוך (Cant. 7, 2) AJSL 18, 217. The a in האר is on a par with the Pathah furtive. Cf. also Kings 167, 37.

Instead of לבח (לכרדה לו מרדכי) לל (לתמומנים מידיים למחה לו מרדכי) לא ישימנים seems to have read לביח. According to Rabbi Meir (Meg. 18°, quoted C 62, below; J 46, below) we should read לברח instead of הביל מידיר אל חקרי לבת אלא לביח). The word רבי מאיר אל חקרי לבת אלא לביח, house is used in the Talmud for wife. The cosmetic treatment could not be hastened; a period of twelve months was prescribed by a royal decree (v. 12) and E had to await her turn (v. 15). Nor did Hegai hasten to send E her meals; she was not starving. But he took a special interest in E and gave special orders concerning her cosmetic treatment and her meals; cosmetic treatment without proper diet does not help very much. Hegai also devoted special attention to the selection of E's seven maids. His experienced eye saw that E was likely to become queen (contrast C 58, 12).

- (11) או לפני חצר means opposite (or in front of) the forecourt, $ קדם דרתא די בבית נשיא €, ס, אינ נשוף. M did not enter the forecourt of the harem; cf. 4, 2.6. Wd raises the question how it was possible that a man could talk to a girl from the royal harem, and how her Jewish extraction could be kept secret under those circumstances. Similarly N (EB 1401) says that M was able to communicate freely with his niece (contrast n. on it, v. 7) in the harem. S states: aber die Schwierigkeit, wie M (S, throughout, Mordehai, as though it were ברדודי! cf. n. on 4, 7) ohne Eunuch tzu sein im Frauenvorhofe sich blicken lassen durfte und E dort sprechen konnte, geht der spät-jüd. Erzähler leicht hinweg. The narrator, it may be supposed, knew more about Oriental manners and customs than did S; the author did not overlook this difficulty, but S overlooked אנכר M did not talk to E; in c. 4 E sends Hatach to M, and M sends his answers through this eunuch. If M walked in the place before the forecourt of the royal harem, he could easily get some news concerning the inmates of the harem from the eunuchs. By some diplomatic questions he could even obtain some special information concerning E without revealing the fact that she was his cousin and foster-daughter. He could simply ask, How is that beautiful girl in whom Hegai takes so great an interest? See also n. on 6, 10.

A glossator who misunderstood THOM to mean tribute (cf. 2 Chr. 24, 6. 9)† added the gloss which we find in M at the beginning of c. 10, where it is connected neither with what precedes nor with what follows, just as we find at the end of the Book of Canticles two disconnected misplaced glosses, viz. 12, 13 (belonging to 2, 14) and 12, 14 (which belongs to 2, 17). See remarks on misplaced incorrect glosses in ZDMG 61, 297, l. 20; Nah. 43 (vv. 11. 6) and 41; also 30 (v. 4) and 25 (v. 11). Cf. nn. on 3, 7; 9, 16.

According to AoF 3, 26 the King levied the tax after he had repealed the decree to exterminate the Jews, because he wanted the money which H had promised to pay for the privilege of exterminating the Jews. AoF 3, 27 the statement רובוה למדינות עשה ויתן משאת is said to be meaningless; it is suggested that we should read instead of למדינות (משוֹאת) the singular (מבוֹאת, referring to the capital, i. e. Seleucia; ממוֹאת (מדינות) is supposed to be merely a variant of מבוֹאת, meaning impost; v. 18 is taken to be the introduction to 10, 1, which should therefore be transferred to c. 10, the elevation of E to the queenship being the final climax.—This is all gratuitous.

^{*}Even in 1 M 10, 34; 13, 34 άφεσις does not mean remission of taxes (ἀτέλεια). Cf. 13, 39: ἀφίσμεν δὲ ὑμῖν ἀγνοήματα καὶ τὰ ἀμαρτήματα ἔως τῆς σήμερον ἡμέρας and 10, 33 where ἀφίημι is used of the release of prisoners; cf. however vv. 29-31.

(19) VV. 19 f. is not an ἐπάνοδος or retrogressio, as Grotius says, but a gloss added by some one who deemed it necessary to explain the כובוקבץ בתולות שנית ישוב המרדכי ישב בשער המלך omits, also the final clause of the preceding verse, ריתן משאת כיד המלך; for בשער הבולך שב בשער הבולך has ὁ δὲ Μαρδοχαίος ἐθεράπευεν ἐν τῆ aὐλη, which means, according to W 18, below, he had a high position at the royal court (cf. 11, 3; 12, 5) but θεραπεύειν may mean also to pay a visit (cf. θεραπεύειν τὰς θύρας τινός) &c. It is not necessary to suppose that M had an official position at the royal court (cf. C 75, 8; contrast 135, below). He may have been a ינילחני or τραπεζίτης, i. e. he may have had a money-changer's table at the King's Gate, i. e. apparently (according to 4, 2.6) the gateway* leading from the City to the Acropolis; cf. last n. on c. 3. The translation of ועמוֹה כן למרדכי היהודי היושב בשער המלך (6, 10) in 🗗 καὶ ποίησον Μαρδοχαίψ τῷ Ἰουδαίψ τῷ καθημένψ ἐν τῷ πυλῶνι is more correct than the rendering in 6 ούτως ποίησον τῷ Μ. τῷ Ί. τῷ θεραπεύοντι ἐν τῆ αὐλῆ.

According to Ch (EB 3198) M derived his name, not from Marduk (so, too, C 50, below) but from Jerahmeel: Abihail is most probably a popular corruption of Jerahmeel, Kish = Cushi, and the true name of M may have been Carmeli; cf. the Jerahmeelitish explanations of the names Vashti (1, 9) and Shethar, Tarshish (1, 14) and contrast IN 400, 1.

(6) און השרי איר בורכי אייר וואר refers to בן הארי בורכי אשר; the pide בן הארי בורי אשר; contrast last n. on 1, 14. The genealogy, בן הארי בן קשו, is parenthetical. Jair (about 600 b.c.) is M's father; Shimei (about 1000 b.c.) and Saul's father, Kish (about 1050) are two of his famous ancestors; cf. the complete genealogies of M in T 7, 6; T 2, 5. C 52 deems it impossible that Kish in the present passage represents the father of Saul. Tinserts between Shimei and Kish the name of Shimei's father, Gera. Shimei is named, because he considered himself at least as good as David; just as M, the descendant of the first king of Israel, considered himself at least as good as the barbarian H (see ad 3, 4). M is introduced as a descendant of Saul, not as a son of David, because under the reign of the Maccabean princes descendants of David were not persona grata (see Pur. 23, 31). For אורר = אורר באורר ב

For בהכדנבה we had better read בהכדנבה = 6 Ναβουχοδονοσορ = Babyl. Nabu-kudurri-uçur. For the correct pronunciation of mispointed cuneiform names see Kings 270, 16. The best form is the Kethiv in Jer. 49, 28: נבוכדראצור. The o of the final syllable seems to be preserved also in ברכדנצור (Ezr. 2, 1) unless the j is merely due to dittography of the \neg ; cf. the remarks on אהשורוש (1, 1) for שׁרְשׁירשׁ. The א (which was assimilated to the preceding consonant; cf. Non = xitt = xit', SFG 11, below; VG 127, 8) is found also in the spelling ינברכדנאצר; the ה instead of בול (cf. nn. on אוכ , 1, 8, = Assyr. urasu) in בכרכדראצר. The n instead of r is due to dissimilation (contrast Aram. תנין). We have no right to restore throughout ברכדראצר (with ה and א) just as it would be pedantic to substitute in the text of an English author sycomore for sycamore, or Nazirite for Nazarite. The omission of the R and the substitution of for \(\) no doubt represent the actual pronunciation. The \(\) is certainly not due to graphic corruption, while the alleged preservation of the o in the final syllable צור (Ezra 26, 51) may be due to dittography of the ה.

RON, myrtle may be a contraction of radaššatu (see Pur. 39, 23) and TTOTT may be connected also with Adam (= TTOTT, Nova) i.e. the name of the place where Nicanor, the prototype of H (Nah. 26, 1; 30, 4) was defeated on the 13th of Adar, 161 B.c. M ήτη ης, the daughter of his uncle (the brother of his father) means, of course, his cousin (cf. the extract from Maqrizi in L, Purim, p. 13) not his niece. Wd (169, below) calls E M's cousin, but in the introduction to c. 2 he refers to her as M's niece; so, too, p. 181, l. 10; on p. 186 (bis) he calls M E's uncle. The same mistake is made by N (EB 1400-7) and S (149, l. 8 from the bottom). Cf. also W 17. 18; C 49, 10; 57, 17; 78, 15. In C 53, 8 E's father, Abihail, is said to be a cousin of M. The cosmetic treatment could not be hastened; a period of twelve months was prescribed by a royal decree (v. 12) and E had to await her turn (v. 15). Nor did Hegai hasten to send E her meals; she was not starving. But he took a special interest in E and gave special orders concerning her cosmetic treatment and her meals; cosmetic treatment without proper diet does not help very much. Hegai also devoted special attention to the selection of E's seven maids. His experienced eye saw that E was likely to become queen (contrast C 58, 12).

- (10) את הדרה is pluperfect; cf. n. on כלוות (1, 9). The objection raised by several commentators, that the Persian officers could not fail to discover E's Jewish extraction, is not valid. - (11) או לפני הצר אור means opposite (or in front of) the forecourt, S קדם דרתא די בבית נשיא T, סקמ יל נבו M did not enter the forecourt of the harem; cf. 4, 2.6. Wd raises the question how it was possible that a man could talk to a girl from the royal harem, and how her Jewish extraction could be kept secret under those circumstances. Similarly N (EB 1401) says that M was able to communicate freely with his niece (contrast n. on בת הדוֹד, v. 7) in the harem. S states: über die Schwierigkeit, wie M (S, throughout, Mordehai, as though it were ! cf. n. on 4, 7) ohne Eunuch t zu sein im Frauenvorhofe sich blicken lassen durfte und E dort sprechen konnte, geht der spat-jüd. Erzähler leicht hinweg. The narrator, it may be supposed, knew more about Oriental manners and customs than did S; the author did not overlook this difficulty, but S overlooked אנכי M did not talk to E; in c. 4 E sends Hatach to M, and M sends his answers through this eunuch. If M walked in the place before the forecourt of the royal harem, he could easily get some news concerning the inmates of the harem from the eunuchs. By some diplomatic questions he could even obtain some special information concerning E without revealing the fact that she was his cousin and foster-daughter. He could simply ask, How is that beautiful girl in whom Hegai takes so great an interest? See also n. on 6, 10.

The emendation of Grotius and Fritzsche, κλήρων instead of ὑμῶν in the apocryphal addition 16, 22, is very doubtful; it is not probable that the characteristic κλήρων should have been corrupted to ὑμῶν (cf. the remarks on the emendations ὀργῆς for αὐλῆς in 7, 4; פְּבָּבֶּן for פְּבָּבָּן for פּבָּרָן in nn. on 8, 10; also AJSL 22, 197, l. 15 and Nah. 26, below). S ἐν ταῖς ἐπωνύμως ὑμῶν ἐορταῖς is generally interpreted to mean among the feasts named after yourselves (i.e. according to C. J. Ball, † among your own Persian festivals or as if the word Purim were connected with the word Persians) but ἐπώνυμοι ἐορταῖ may refer to the days on which the ἄρχων ἐπώνυμος was appointed (cf. ἐνιαντὸς ἐπώνυμος &c). This institution existed among the Assyrians and Babylonians. festival the priest produces a box with small ivory chips variously inscribed. If the lot marked wisdom comes out, it means more wisdom for the man for whom the lot is drawn. Similar oracular practices may have prevailed at the celebration of the Persian New Year (Naurōz) in the times of the Maccabees. Cf. the statement of Berūni, quoted in ZDMG 61, 277, on the same day (Naurōz = Purim) the happy lots are distributed among the people of the earth (على الأرض ونيد تقسم السعادات). The casting of the lots for the two goats on the Day of Atonement* may be a purified form of some Babyl. oracular practice at the beginning at the second half of the year (Pur. 3, 39; 4, 2. 20. 26. 33; 33, 14; 49, 26).

E is a festal legend for Nicanor's Day, just as the Book of Nahum is a festal liturgy for the celebration of that great victory gained by Judas Maccabseus over Nicanor on the 13th of Adar, 161 B.c. (OLZ 10, 64; ZDMG 61, 275). This commemoration of Nicanor's Day was combined with the observation of the Persian New Year's festival (celebrated at the time of the vernal equinox) which is no doubt based on the Babyl. New Year's festival (Pur. 3, 3; 4, 39; 11, 27; 19, 10). In the Talmud the cuneiform name of the New Year's Festival, aktu, aqtu† appears as known (which is an adaptation of known) while Nauroz is corrupted to (for בורדרן, כורדרן). See ZDMG 61, 276.

The original meaning of פורים (=Nauroz=Akitu) is not lots, but portions, Heb. בנורח; see n. on 9, 26.

In casting lots in order to determine what day would be most unlucky for the Jews and therefore most auspicious for the general massacre planned by H (cf. L, Purim, p. 8, l. 13) they did not try every single day of the year until they finally hit on the 13th day of the 12th month. They might have put 12 lots, marked from 1 to 12, into the urn (Assyr. ptru) and 30 lots marked from 1 to 30; then it was only necessary to draw two lots. But the phrase אור לרום ובעודם לרום לרום לרום לרום לרום that this simple procedure was not used at that time. They tried first the first day, then the second, and so forth; when the lot decided in favor of the 13th day, they tried to determine the month. In this way it was necessary to cast the lot 25 times before they hit on the 13th day of the 12th month. Cf. my remarks on Urim and Thummim in JBL 19,

It is not necessary to read, with O, הפילר; contrast 6, 9 where O reads instead of הכבישור. According to B, הפיל refers to H, and the explanation of פרר is not merely הורא הגורל, as in 9, 24, but הורא, as in 9, 24, but , however, must be connected with . הפיל פור (הוא הגורל) לפני המן -: הפיל פור Even if we read instead of להמן, as Wd suggests, the phrase להמן לפני המלך see n. on לפני המך לפני המלך would be very strange. For לפני (2, 23). According to T2 the lots were cast by the scribe Shimshai (cf. Ezra 4, 8. 17. 23 and C 103). To also states (ad 6, 1) that the King commanded the scribe Shimshai to bring the Book of Records. S has אפיל מילתא הוא עדבא קדם המן ז; וושי פן סחסי פן ס, חש (Syr.) is apparently a transposition of $\psi \hat{\eta} \phi o_s$; see Pur. 45, 11). For the translation of this clause in 67 and 64 see Pur. 16, 1. 61 has rail βάλλει κλήρους είς την τρισκαιδεκάτην τοῦ μηνὸς Αδαρ Νισαν κτλ. Here Nurse represents a variant (cf. last n. on 1, 4) to Adap (it may be derived from ## ליכן at the beginning of this verse).

In the same way, the fourteenth day, given in $\mathfrak{S}^{\mathsf{v}}$, may be a subsequent correction for the thirteenth day (so $\mathfrak{S}^{\mathsf{L}}$; see above). In 8, 12; 9, 1 $\mathfrak{S}^{\mathsf{v}}$ has the thirteenth just as \mathfrak{M} . In the apocryphal additions \mathfrak{S} has the fourteenth day in 13, 6; but the thirteenth in 16, 20 (Pur. 15, 11). Cf. also n. on 9, 17.

(8) For יֶּטְיֶּנֶן we must point יֵשֶׁכָּן; see Numbers 57, 36; cf. ZA 14, 347.

For מבקל סעבלים, א מבדר ומתפרש 6 has simply διεσπαρμόνον, but it would be a mistake to suppose that one of these participles in \mathfrak{M} was due to scribal expansion. \mathfrak{G} repeatedly substitutes one verb for two or three verbs of \mathfrak{M} ; cf. n. on v. 13.

For דררהם שנות מכל עם cf. the comparatio decurtata (GK", § 133, e).

(9) The conjecture (AoF 3, 26) that שול is a gloss, and that we should read לשקול (as in 4, 7) instead of אשקול, is not good; שיפות אלפים כפר כסך לשקול is not Heb. What Wn has in mind would be:—מחבר השקלו היהודיים עשרת כפר כסך. But the suggestion that הכסך in v. 11 is a gloss is correct; see below and cf. above, ad 2, 18. The interpretation (W 17) that H offers the King 10,000 talents to make up the financial loss involved in the extermination of the people (loss of taxes) is unwarranted; cf. below, ad 7, 4.

אלהה (cf. 9, 3) means here officials, especially revenue officers (cf. the remarks on עביל), ZDMG 61, 275). Also in 1 K 11, 28; 2 K 12, 12 (contrast Kings 240, 20) as well as in Neh. 13, 10; Ezr. 3, 9 &c עלאכה שלאכה שלאכה means business man (cf. ψ 107, 23) especially financier, tax-gatherer, collector, &c. Cf. also 1 S 8, 16; Dan. 8, 27; 1 Chr. 29, 6.

- should exchange places (cf. n. on 1, 6) and הכסה should be relegated to the margin (Pur. 6, 33) as the question of a reader who was anxious to know what became of the enormous amount of money (10,000 talents, i. e. about \$18,000,000). Cf. for this gloss Kings 137, 35; Isaiah 19, β ; 81, 18; Eccl. 20, χ ; 21, ϵ ; 25, $\kappa\kappa$; BL 3, γ . The King takes it for granted that H will pay the money into the royal treasury; he therefore deems it unnecessary to refer to it, saying simply:

Heb. 內面數 is a Babyl. loanword. The singular 河東 must be pronounced pēxxāh (GK²¹, § 27, q) not pēxāh (AOG 25). The doubling of the 內, however, is secondary, just as in 內內內, brothers; 河東, one; 河東, after, &c. In Assyr. paxātu, pixātu (HW 519b) the guttural is not doubled.

In Assyrian, rakbu (= בֹּבֹר) is used for envoy, and allaku xanţu for courier (HW 619b. 281b). The stem xamāţu, to burn is identical with the stem xamāţu, to hasten; the original meaning is to flash; cf. Heb. 550, to plunder (cf. 8, 11) is a Babyl loanword. The noun 550 ($ commal; cf. AJSL 3, 107) means here household effects, personal property, just as Ger. Plunder means household effects, trumpery, baggage, while the verb plundern means to pillage. In certain parts of the United States the term plunder does not mean pillage, spoil, booty, but household or personal effects, baggage, luggage. Ger. plundern is a privative denominative like our to skin &c (AJSL 22, 251; Nah. 32). Assyr. šalālu (HW 662b) means to carry off; so 550 denotes movables; French meubles; cf. the Ger. privative denominative vermābeln. See also Pur. 34, 18.

The conjecture (AoF 3, 26) that this verse is evidently a subsequent (post-Seleucidan) addition is gratuitous.

The idea (AoF 3, 26) that the last clause of this verse, לדורת עודים , is a subsequent addition, and that the first part of v. 14 is the immediate sequel of v. 12, is impossible.

(15) The conception (AoF 3, 26) that the couriers are sent out twice, is erroneous; vv. 12-14 describe the drafting of the edict, and v. 15 relates the execution of the order.

אתרא הערך שושך (פּיְבְּעֹבּן בְּבִּבְּרְהַן) means here the City of Susa in distinction from the Acropolis (הְבֵּרְהָן). The King and H feasted in the Acropolis; cf. n. on 1, 2. The people in the Acropolis were not perplexed, but the people in the City were in a quandary. 3 et cunctis Judæis, qui in urbe erant, flentibus seems to have regarded the initial cf. כוֹכְהָן מוֹנְיִים as a dittogram of the final cf. (3) The clause שׁכן רַבִּים (AV, many lay in sackcloth and ashes) means Most of them had a sack-cloth (or coarse loin-cloth) and overspread (Ger. aufgeschmierte) ashes (i. e. spread over the body). ולבוש שק וקיטבא הוה would mean Many had (לַרְבִּים וסקיא וקטמא משכבא לסגיאין 🗗 , מתשם עלוי צדיקיא סגיאין but שרבים means Most of them had; cf. πολλοί and oi πολλοί (GKⁿ, § 133, g). But this spreading of the sack-cloth on the ground would be at variance with the disregard for personal comfort, which is characteristic of mourning. The sack-cloth was not spread on the ground, but put on as a loin-cloth, and the ashes were not sprinkled on the loin-cloth, but over the body. הילבש שוֹם ואפר וויצא in v. 1: καὶ περιεβάλετο σάκκον καὶ σποδωθεὶς εξηλθεν; cf. also 6^{τι} 14, 2: σποδοῦ καὶ κοπριών (6^ι κόπρου) ἔπλησεν την κεφαλην αὐτης. Heb. ביהורים cannot mean to pay to the Jews;* ביהורים is the ביהורים (see Kings 224, 5) for Judeorum nece. In his nn. *In the German Reichstag Gen. Von Deimling, the commander of the colonial troops in German Southwestern Africa, said on May 28, 1908: Darüber haben Sie hier nicht su bestimmen, sondern ein Anderer (i. e. the Emperor). In his novel Tristram of Blent (vol. 1, p. 255 of the Tauchnitz edition) Anthony Hope says: And if by a miracle he [the prime minister] said yes, for all I know somebody else might say no. This dark reference to the Highest Quarters caused Southend to nod thoughtfully.—Ibid. p. 270 we find: There was now not only the very grave question whether Robert Disney [the prime minister]—to say nothing of Somebody Else—would entertain the idea; and on p. 117 of vol. 2: The last words had, presumably, reference to the same quarter that Lady Evenswood had once described by the words "Somebody Else."

If the negative were inserted in Hebrew, אם לא לעת וכן, the phrase would mean: Perhaps thou hast not been made Queen just for a contingency like the present. This statement would be possible only if E had not become Queen. If the King had given orders to kill the Queen, the father of one of the maidens who were not made Queen, might have said to his daughter: — מי יודע אם לא הגעת למלכות הלכת כזאת. The negative in our Who knows whether thou hast not been made Queen just for such an emergency is on a par with our not in phrases like Won't you come? which is quite different from Will you (really) not come? The particles בהול or כהול (B) could not be used in this connection. B's interpretation (which has been adopted by Reuss) Who knows (what may happen) when thou hast come to the royal throne at that time or when thou hast appeared before the King's majesty at that time (Ger. Und wer weiss wenn du um diese Zeit hingekommen sein wirst zum königlichen Thron) is impossible. This would be: ומי יודע מה יהיה כבואף אל המלך בעת ההיא. The words would be appropriate בעת ההרא would be appropriate only if a time had been specified; e. g. if E had been urged to go to the King at a certain time, then some friend, wishing to dissuade her, might say, If I were you, I would not go; who knows what will happen when thou goest to the King at that time. It is true that this phrase might also anticipate a favorable outcome; Naomi might have added to her instructions in Ruth 3,3: ומי יודע מה יהיה כבואך אל האיש בעת the statement would be meaningless.

כן, thus means, not for the same period, i. e. for three days (B) but in the same (strict) manner, viz. day and night. Fasting was observed, as a rule, from sunrise to sunset, food and drink being taken each day after sundown, just as in the Mohammedan fast of Ramadan (مفاني).

After having fasted for three days, both day and night, she could not be very attractive to the King, unless God wrought a miracle as in the case of Daniel and his friends (Dan. 1, 15). The fasting in the present case is not a sign of mourning, אנים לומבר does not mean she stepped in, entered (S) or she stood (so AV = 3 stetit) but she waited; cf. 6, 5; 7, 7 and our stay = Lat. stare, Arab. ובֹּן (Kings 174, 27; cf. n. on העברד, 4, 5). To stay means to come to a stand, stop, wait, remain. Shakespeare says: a servant that stays upon me; cf. העברד (4, 5) also בעברדן (געברן לעבר) and Josh. 3, 16 (דעברדן; cf. Ger. stauen).

את הבית הבית does not refer to E (as S states) but to the royal throne; כת בית הביל refers to E, but not הבית הביל . The throne was opposite the entrance, so that the King, seated on his throne, could see who was waiting in the forecourt.

(2) או עמדת is a circumstantial accusative; see Kings 136, 37; 298, 3; and below, vv. 9. 14: שמח ; v. 13: יושב ; 6, 12: אבל וחפוי ראש ; רובר אל עשו ארוך; הנדה שמעתי את אביך מדבר אל עשו ארוך; הנדה שמעתי את אביך מדבר אל עשו ארוך;

The rendering of האבל in 3 osculata est is unwarranted; ביי אווידת .

 - (6) או שָׁאֵלֶתְּהְ must be read יָשֶלֶתְהָ; see last n. on 2, 15.
- (7) The ; at the end of this verse corresponds to our —. There should be a dash, not a colon in K's Textbibel; also the Athnah in [v. 8] is equivalent to a dash. E starts to tell the King what her petition and request is. She begins: My petition and request—then she hesitates and decides to wait another day; she therefore invites the King to dine with her a second time when she will answer his question (so, correctly, B and Wd). The idea, that it would be better to wait another day, comes to her while she adds the humble qualification: if the King is kindly disposed toward me, and if it seem proper to the King to grant my petition and to accede to my request.
- (8) The last clause of v. 8, כרבר המלך, shows that the explanation given above is the correct interpretation of vv. 7. 8. If this last clause were omitted, we might interpret: My request is (= all I ask is simply) that the King dine with me again. S supplies in his translation after my request:—besteht darin, following 3 petitio mea et preces sunt istae (just as LB and AV supply is at the end of v. 7) but in the nn. he gives the correct explanation; cf. n. on 4, 7.

στ reads καὶ εἶπεν τῷ διδασκάλῳ αὐτοῦ εἰσφέρειν κτλ, but fit is more original. στῷ διδασκάλῳ αὐτοῦ (cf. Pur. 7, 21) is just as secondary as the clause ὅτι θεὸς ζῶν μετ' αὐτοῦ at the end of v. 13, or καλῶς ἐλάλησας in v. 10, or καλῶσατε αὐτόν instead of אַבַר' (בּבַּב', דַ לְּבָּר', 3 ingrediatur) at the end of v. 5.

א דברי הינדים (ז' דיומא) is a gloss (so, too, J) derived from 2, 23 and 10, 2; cf. n. on 8, 14 and the remarks on the gloss מום, Nah. 31.

- (2) Similarly בים is a scribal expansion based on the received text of 2, 21. Cf. the scribal expansions in 2, 3. 8.
- (3) In מה ועשה יקר וגדולה the two nouns are genitives depending on [72] (3 quid, pro hac fide, honoris ac praemii M consecutus est). In the same way we find in the cuneiform account of the Deluge, l. 174: a'ú-ma ûçî napišti, what soul has escaped? cf. Arab. ای رجل ajju rajulin, what man? (WdG 2, 220). Consequently we must read the ideograms at the end of ll. 82.83, and 68 of the Flood tablet as genitives (not accusatives, HW 556°; nor nominatives, KB 6, 234) viz. m1ma 1šû eçênši xuraçi, i. e. I loaded her (the ship) with all the silver I had, I loaded her with all the gold I had; lit. (with) whatever I had I loaded her of gold; eçênši = açênši from çênu = טעל. Heb. טעל (Gen. 45, 17) is an Aramaism; cf. פתרוך in Gen. 40 (see Nah. 25, 2). The passages in Gen. 40. 45 belong to the Ephraimitic Document. AG², 303 translates eçênši: I filled it; for the epenthesis of the e in eçênši see my Assyr. E-vowel, p. 28; cf. AG2, 266. 94. In the same way we must read in l. 68 of the Flood tablet: III šar çâbe nâš sussulša içábila šamni, i. e. three σάροι of (sesame-) oil (see Pur. 30, 39) carry her stevedores (lit. κανηφόροι, basket-bearers; cf. also Delitzsch, Mehr Licht, p. 39).
- (4) For אל־הצר read אל־הצר; the omission of the א is due to haplography; see Ezra 30, 27; Kings 245, 35; ZDMG 61, 289, 40.
- (5) For לכנד (T קארם) waiting (not standing, AV standeth) see n. on 5, 1.
 - (6) For מה לעשות cf. n. on 1, 15.
- אם לעשות יקר בותר בותר משנה does not mean to confer more honor than on me (B mehr Ehre als mir; also Wd mehr als, AV more than to myself) but to confer honor except on me (6^{TL} d m) imit, 3 nullum alium nisi; LB wem anders denn mir, K ausser) S translates ausser mir, but in his nn. he says, יחור משנה means mehr als ich; cf. n. on 4, 7. אור משנה (בין משנה בין משנה משנה) means beyond me, beside me, in addition to me. Nor does יחור מוך mean more than in Ecclesiastes, as Wd states. In Eccl. 2, 15 יחור means exceedingly, extremely, very; in 7, 11 it means exceeding; superior, better; in 7, 16: exceeding, over, too; in 12, 9: beyond, in addition to; in 13, 12: besides (see Eccl.).

(7) The prefixed nominative absolute, at the end of this verse, איש אשר, does not reflect the verblendete Überstürzung of H, as Wd supposes; this construction is by no means abrupt (B) in Semitic; cf. GK²¹, § 143, c, footnote; WdG 2, 256; SG², § 317; Dillmann, Ethiop. gr.², p. 446 (Eng. translation, p. 505).

(8) For the phrase די לבישו ביה ית ש) אשר לבש בו המלך כל למלכותא (5, 11). אשר לשלם ביומא די על למלכותא (5, 11).

The last clause of this verse, ואשר נהן כתר מלכות בראשו, is a tertiary scribal expansion, derived (cf. n. on 8, 14) from the secondary addition in 8, 15 (דעםרת זהב גדולה) and אשר is a quaternary gloss. If we omit אשר, the suffix in בראשון refers to the man who is to be honored (just as the Maccabean prototype of M, Jonathan, was honored by King Alexander Balas; see 1 M 10, 20. 61; Pur. 6, 35; cf. also third n. on 9, 16) but גאשר נהן כתר מלכות בראשו can mean only on whose head (referring to the horse) a golden crown has been placed (so נדי איתיהב כלילא דמלכותא ברישיה the suffix refers to the horse, the clause being coordinated to the preceding relative clause (מוכרא דעל למלכותא) די רכב עלוי מלכא (ביומא דעל למלכותא). 3, LB, and AV, however, do not refer the suffix to the horse: 3 et (homo debet) accipere regium diadema super caput suum, LB (den Mann soll man herbringen) dass man die königliche Krone auf sein Haupt setze, AV and the crown royal which is set upon his (scil. the King's) head (this would require transposition of בלכות:—בולכות: אשר נהן בראשו was inserted by a reader to whom the on the head of M seemed too gross an exaggeration; cf. n. on the gloss ימים רבים (1, 4). If the final clause, ונתן כתר מלכות in לתר מלכות were original, we should expect a reference to בראשון v. 10, after הכרש ואת הלבוש ; also in v. 11. It is possible that this gloss ונהן כתר מלכות בראשו stood originally after ודלבשו is, of course, perfect הַון is, of course, perfect Nif'al, not impf. Qal (Maurer) for (see Judges 57, 42). Nor is it necessary to read רְנָתֵן or רְנַתוֹן, especially if this gloss stood originally after 'רהלבש וגן. In 67 this clause is omitted; in 63 a hand of the 7th cent. has added in the margin (after the clause לבוך אשר רכב עליך הבולך) the correction καὶ δοθήτω διάδημα βασιλείας έπὶ τὴν κεφαλὴν αὐτοῦ.

(10) For היושב בשער המלך (3 qui sedet ante fores palatii) see n. on 2, 19.

The question raised by J. D. Michaelis, Had the King forgotten that all the Jews were doomed to destruction; is easily answered. The King might have honored M, even if all the Jews were to be massacred in a few months; a soldier (or sailor) may be decorated before he is put to death. But the King had probably decided to discard H and his sanguinary policy, as soon as he learned from the official records that M had saved his life, not H. The order to honor M, which he gives to H, is the first instalment of the punishment he intends to mete out to H (cf. n. on 7, 7). Nor is it reasonable to ask, How did the King know that M was a Jew at the King's Gate? This was probably stated in the records; if not, the attendants of the King could easily supply this information, just as Harbonah told the King that H had put up a stake for M. If the King asked, Who is this M? some one was no doubt present who could answer: He is a Jew (who has a stand) at the King's Gate. But M may have been a familiar figure in Susa, so that he was known to the King. Cf. nn. on 2, 10.11; 3, 14.*

^{*}I believe, of course, that E is entirely fictitious (see Pur. 21, 35). I merely try to defend the author of E against unwarranted criticisms of modern expositors (cf. e.g. nn. on 2, 10; 3, 14; 7, 7; 8, 11. 13; 9, 3) just as my paper on Jonah's Whale (cf. AJSL 23, 255) in the Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society, vol. 46, pp. 151-164 (1907) is not a vindication of the historical character of this Sadducean apologue (about 100 B. c.) but a refutation of some unfounded objections raised by modern students of the Bible.

The literal translation would be: The enemy is not equivalent to the annoyance of the King. The clause מוֹלְים מוֹלְים מוֹלְים מוֹלְים מוֹלְים מוֹלְים מוֹלִים מוֹלים מוֹלִים מוֹלִים מוֹלִים מוֹלִים מוֹלִים מוֹלִים מוֹלִים מוֹלים מוֹלִים מוֹלִי

In Ezra 4, 15 בהנוקת בולכין ומדינן means, not hurtful (AV) but troublesome for the great King (ὁ μέγας βασιλεύς) and the provinces (the satraps) and המתח מלכין, at the end of v. 22: to the trouble (or annoyance) of the great King (not to the hurt of the kings; so AV). א מחם או וה Ezra 4, 13 is certainly not a noun meaning revenue, but an adverb with the meaning eventually, finally, ultimately. 6 has in Ezra

4, 15: κακοποιούσα βασιλεῖς καὶ χώρας (so, too, 6 1 Esdr. 4, 15; but Ezra 4, 15: βασιλεῦσι καὶ πόλεσιν ἐνοχλοῦσα; so, too, 6 1 Esdr. 2, 19) and at the end of v. 22: εἰς κακοποίησιν βασιλεῦσιν; but 6 has here εἰς τὸ μὴ ἐνοχλεῦσθαι βασιλεῖς, and in 1 Esdr. 4, 22: τοῦ ὀχλεῦσθαι βασιλεῖς, cf. 6 1 Esdr. 2, 24 εἰς τὸ βασιλεῖς ἐνοχλῆσαι (see below).

In the present passage 6" renders כי אין הצר שונה בנזק המלך:-ού γὰρ ἄξιος ὁ διάβολος τῆς αὐλῆς τοῦ βασιλέως. J restores the Heb. text on the basis of this corrupt translation as follows: כי אין השוכן שורה המלך. This may be archaic Hebrew, but even Saul would not have understood it without the help of the witch of En-dor (cf. n. on 8, 1). 6 aiλης is also supposed to be a corruption of δργης, but it is difficult to see how δργης should have been corrupted to αὐλης; cf. the remarks on the emendation κλήρων for ὑμῶν in nn. on 3, 7. C 197 thinks that αὐλῆς represents a Grecized form of χή, injustice. The original reading may have been the abbreviated genitive of δχλησις, trouble, annoyance (cf. όχλον παρέχειν, to give trouble, &c). 5 καὶ ήθελον ἀπαγγεῖλαι ΐνα μὴ λυπήσω τὸν κύριόν μου gives the sense of the passage correctly, but freely. I nunc autem hostis noster est cujus crudelitas redundat in regem (i. e. whose extreme cruelty will reflect on the King) is a mere guess. LB so würde der Feind dem Könige doch nicht schaden is entirely wrong; nor is the rendering in K's Textbibel any better: da aber der König geschädigt werden soll, so verdient der Widersacher nicht geschont zu werden. In المناهدة كمكما إلى المناهدة المكلم المكافئة ا participle less seems to be a corruption, not of less, as B-R suggest, but of №; $ has № = יוור in $, 8, but مدا in $, 13. בעיקא רמלכא באוזניקא דמלכא. All these various renderings presuppose no different text. פארדרקא seems to be a transposition of ארנזיקא ; cf. conclusion of n. on ארנזיקא (8, 10).

The rendering of AV, although the enemy could not countervail the King's damage, has recently been defended by W who says (W 18) that the meaning of our passage is, H would not be able to reimburse the King for the damage (loss of taxes &c) he would suffer, if he permitted H to exterminate the Jews. W 24 calls attention to the fact that there were a great many Jewish publicans in Egypt, and that the King (Euergetes II) would have suffered great loss, if the Jewish farmers of the revenues had been exterminated together with their coreligionists. But if the property of the Jews had been confiscated, the King would have received, not only all the taxes collected by the Jewish publicans (including their commission) but also their accumulated wealth; see also Pur. 28, 15.

(5) M ΓΩΝ 2° (so, too, T) is superfluous. S' has simply εἶπεν δὶ ὁ βασιλεύς Τίς οὐτος κτλ.

 E had invited H to the banquet in order to be able to give the King this answer. If she had accused H in his absence, the grand vizier would have had a better chance to defend himself (cf. C 168). Here he was confronted with the Queen, and he collapsed, not because he had tried to exterminate all the Jews, but because he knew the King was aware of the fact that M, not H, had saved the King's life, and that H's hatred against M and the Jews was chiefly due to his apprehension lest the trick to which he owed his sudden elevation might become known to the King (cf. n. on 3, 4). The situation was all the more desperate after the Queen had told the King that she was a Jewess and the foster-daughter of M who had saved the life of the King.

את יובען means he was surprised, taken by surprise, overtaken (Ger. aberrumpelt) not he was afraid (so AV). Arab. אביי means to happen unexpectedly, to come or fall upon a person suddenly and unexpectedly (אבּי בּיבּי). The noun בּיבּי denotes a surprising event, a sudden attack. אונ יי בּיבּי וּשׁלַבּאָל ; 3 obstupuit. בּיבּי בּיבּי אַ יִּירְשׁתְּעַבְיִים בּיבּי ; 3 obstupuit. בּיבּי בּיבּי ; 3 so, too, in 4, 4 for בּיבּי בּיבּי .

(7) For the pregnant construction, ההמלך קם הובית, cf. the last paragraph of nn. on 4, 4. W's conception of this passage is entirely wrong. It is perfectly natural that the King leaves the room and goes to the garden. In the first place, he was very much incensed and did not like to give vent to his anger in the presence of the Queen; many a man who is enraged will get up and leave the room rather than speak out in the presence of his wife. Moreover, the King wanted to have time to think the situation over. H was grand vizier and had no doubt a number of powerful adherents; so he could not be disposed of without due consideration. B states that the King went to the park um in der freien Luft die erste Hitze des Zorns verrauchen zu lassen und zu überlegen, welche Strafe über H zu verhängen sei. The King's suspicion had been aroused as soon as he learned from the official records that M, not H, had discovered the conspiracy (cf. n. on 6, 10). The statement that the King left the room and went to the garden, is not a grober und geradezu unerklärlicher Compositionsfehler (W 18; contrast C 181, below). In a dramatic performance (see Pur. 38, 31; 12, 1) the audience would wait in breathless expectation for the reappearance of the King. When the King returned, he knew, of course, that H had no idea of assaulting the Queen; his remark, Is he going to assault the Queen while I am at home? is a cruel jest (C 200 calls it tödtende Ironie). It showed how the King was disposed toward H (C 200 says: In diesen furchtbar ironischen Worten lag H's Todesurtheil).

(8) The pointing bi implies that H threw himself at the feet of E (cf. 8, 3) when the King returned. The translation had thrown himself (AV was fallen, S war niedergefallen, K war niedergesunken, 3 reperit Aman super lectulum corruisse) would require the pointing bi; for the pluperfect cf. n. on 1, 9. The participle is more dramatic. Also by is participle, not perfect.

If E was recumbent on a dining couch, H had to bow down כל המסה, if he wanted to clasp, or kiss, the feet of the Queen. A man may kiss the hem of the garment of a lady to show his humble devotion to her; but her husband may misinterpret it. S's rendering vor dem Diwan is inaccurate. If H had fallen down before the couch, the King could not have made his cruel jest. Heb. 57 cannot mean before; it might mean close to, hard by; cf. GB14 534b, 3, c. This ל שלהן is different from על שלהן (cf. our phrase to sit over a meal) &c (Kings 134, 27). If a man sits very close to a lady in a crowded car, he sits almost upon her. הדבר הודבר feers, of course, to the cruel jest of the King (see conclusion of first n. on v. 7) not to a special command to execute H, as B supposes; the order to put the grand vizier to death is given at the end of v. 9 in the words הלהן עליון.

לא הכה does not mean Huc accedit quod (S). It implies an ellipsis, just as the בם לה הבי (Ruth 2, 21) I might also state that, or in הוא וה (Gen. 3, 1) which corresponds to our by the way or a propos; cf. also אך כי אכר וה 5, 12. Harbonah thinks H is a בן בורח ; he ought to be impaled, and we have not only a malefactor worthy of impalement, behold! there is also (בן לא הבי און the pole which H set up for M.* If we render this בן by Why, we have again an ellipsis: Why, there is the pole means originally: Why don't you impale him? There is the stake &c.

The stem אמרבון means to complete, to mature, to wean, to do; it may mean to do good or to do evil (cf. 1 S 24, 18) but, as a rule, it means, in Hebrew, to do good; cf. אין 13, 6; 116, 7; 119, 17. Arab. באבל jamila means a good deed, a favor, benefit. In Assyrian, on the other hand, turu gimilli, to return a deed (HW 198b) means, as a rule, to return an evil deed, to retaliate. Our verb to retaliate means now especially to retaliate injuries, but formerly one could say also to retaliate favors; to retaliate a visit meant to return a call, to repay a visit. Similarly to requite may mean to recompense, to reward or to retaliate, to punish; cf. אמרבול על ראשר (במלן על ראשר (במלן על ראשר (במלן על ראשר) verily I will punish him (or them) in Am. 1. 2 (see OLZ 10, 306).

The fourth clause, וטובה אני בעיניו, does not imply that E takes a personal interest in the matter (as S supposes) but it is a coquettish climax, equivalent to our if you really care for me a little.

The clause האגל האגל בן המדחא האגל (∞ ביסיי, אבר באסיי) is a scribal expansion interrupting the connection between אמר מתב and משר כתב (which may be impersonal; cf. n. on v. 10). It is derived from the end of v. 3.

(6) The first clause of this verse seems to be a gloss (or variant; cf. last n. on 1, 4) to the second; איככה אוכל וראיתי means How could I see (δ' πῶς γὰρ δυνήσομαι ἰδαν) not How could I have seen (B, Wd) lit. How shall I be able and (how shall I) see. For the perf. וראיתי see GKⁿ, § 112, p.

The idea (AoF 3, 3, below) that the final ז אבדן is due to Persian influence is just as fanciful as the explanation of ביתן; see conclusion of nn. on 1, 5. The constr. of אבדן should be אבדן, not אַבְּדָן; ef. nn. on מֵלְהַן (1, 5) and שרבים (4, 11).

- ישוב (7) The clause ביהודים על היהורים על אשר שלה ידו ביהודים על השור משר השב על היהודים על ראשר (9, 25) is not original. The King did not give the order: תלהן עליך (7, 9) because H had planned to exterminate all the Jews in the Persian empire; this plan had been sanctioned by the King. H was impaled because he had deceived the King (cf. second n. on 6, 10). The alleged assault on the Queen was merely a pretext (cf. n. on 7, 7). The gloss על אשר שלה is derived from 9, 25 just as the scribal expansions in vv. 3 and 5.

Heb. מרכון , property means originally mount = animal for riding; cf. Assyr. ruktišu (see Ezra 57, 38) whereas Syr. Line means originally property and then especially animal for riding. In Mic. 1, 13 רתם המרכבה לרכש is corrupt; it cannot mean bind the chariot to the swift beast; but the meaning of the passage may be: Abandon the chariot for the racer, i.e. try to get away as quickly as possible, not in a chariot, but on the back of a swift horse. און may be a corruption of רמשי, although the reading of M is confirmed by 6 ψόφος = רחם (not = המרך (not = המרך as Marti supposes). المحرك منتوصلاً بالمعالم (معرف) و و بالمعالم (معرف) و و بالمعالم (معرف) و بالمعالم (معرف) و المعالم (معر מיפבאה = ויאסר יוסק מרכבתו Heb. רמש to cast down may mean to cast off; cf. המליך 2 K 7, 15; Eccl. 3, 6, and ד הַרְּמִשְׁנַה (Ex. 23, 11).

וא הארשרונים is derived from Old Pers. khšatra, dominium; so it means dominicus. Instead of הַאָּרְוֹשְׁרְרָיִם we must point (cf. n. on 3, 12). This was the name of the horses kept for the personal use of the King (cf. 6, 8: קבול הבל ליון הבלל השרונים). The horses (saddle horses and teams) kept by a landed proprietor for his personal use are often called in Germany Herrschaftspferde (i. e. seigneurial or manorial horses) in distinction from the Wirthschaftspferde, i. e. the farm-horses, work-horses, &c. B (436, 3) correctly states: Wir mussen wohl an herrschaftliche Pferde denken, welche in koniglichen Gestüten gross gezogen wurden; cf. the Ger. Trakehner. ארטבלא (naked) seems to be a corruption of ארטבלא (בעריל של העריל העריל העריל העריל של העריל העריל העריל העריל העריל של העריל העריל

For ברבות אובר, which would mean sons of the herdsmen (cf. Syr., herdsman) we must read לּפֹבּוֹן, sons of the herds or studs, i. e. bred in the royal studs for the special use of the King. In Syriac, ביי היפבון means a herd, especially of horses; in the Talmud, בְּבָּרָהְ seems to denote a cross between a jackass and a mare, i. e. a mule; instead of ramaka denote a blood-horse, bred in a stud; in fact, it means an inferior mare. But such changes of meaning are not uncommon; the word mare means in German (Mahre) a mean or poor horse, a jade; hajin means in classical Arabic of low origin, a mean or poor horse, but in modern Arabic it is used for fast dromedary. The etymological equivalent of knave in German, Knappe, means squire of a knight, while in modern English, knave is used for rogue. J's objections against the interpretation sons of the studs are gratuitous. Cf. Fleischer in Levy's Talmudic dictionary, 4, 487b. The stem may be Semitic; it may be a transposition of rogue. The stem had be semitic; it may be a transposition of rogue. The stem had be semitic; it may be a transposition of rogue. The stem had be semitic; it may be a transposition of rogue.

(AV, incorrectly wherein; so, too, C 217) H; S wodurch) the King had given (permission) to the Jews (cf. דברון, 9, 13, and Kings, 113, 7) not which he had given to the Jews, referring to the horses. S's statement that the King presented those horses to the Jews is unwarranted.

M > τρ. το does not mean to assemble, but to organize themselves, to take concerted action. 6 interprets this to mean χρησθαι τοις νόμοις αὐτῶν; cf. 1 M 6, 59: στήσωμεν αὐτοις τοῦ πορεύεσθαι τοις νομίμοις αὐτῶν, 10, 37: καὶ πορευέσθωσαν τοις νόμοις αὐτῶν. At any rate, the idea is not that they should assemble on the day of the massacre planned by H, but that they should assemble in advance to organize armed resistance for the 13th of Adar. If they had assembled on that day, they would have been unable to protect their property. Cf. n. on 9, 2.

The phrase לעמד על נפעם (5 (ספבב) means to defend their lives, lit. to stand up for their lives (see Pur. 34, 1). To make a stand means to take a position of defense and resistance. The heading of c. 8 in AV correctly states: Ahasuerus granteth to the Jews to defend themselves. This is much more appropriate than the summary given in LB: Die Juden haben Erlaubniss sich an ihren Feinden zu rächen. The idea of the King is not, that the Jews may attack any one who is supposed to be unfriendly disposed toward the Jews; they only receive permission to resist any attack. The repetition of the terms used in the edict of H, להשביר ולהרג ולאבד, implies that the Jews shall be permitted to resort to retaliatory measures: if any one attempts להשמיד ולהרג ולאבד אתם, then ישמידו ויהרגו ויאפדו אתו. If the Russian Jews had been permitted to organize themselves for selfdefense, the majority of the pogroms (see Pur. 35, 11) would never have happened; cf. n. on 9, 5. It is true that 6 has instead of τοῖς ἀντικεμένοις αὐτῶν ὡς βούλονται, but this is not the original Heb. text; it seems to be derived from מבור מוני (at the end of 9, 5) which is omitted in 5°. Even βοηθῆσαί τε αὐτοῖς is not an accurate rendering of מבור על מבור על (עבור על מבור על מבור על (i. e. self-defense)* while the Greek phrase corresponds to the Ger. Selbsthülfe. Selbsthülfe (taking the law into one's own hands) may be more aggressive than self-defense.

For הארים אתם רצר יפלירים אתם: cf. Num. 10, 9: הארכם אתכם אתכם: cf. Num. 10, 9: הארכם אתכם אתכם: A participle may take a verbal suffix (cf. ייסיים &c, GK^n , § 116, f) but the substantive את במחסל במחסל של במחסל של אול אול אול אול במחסל של האיל אול ושל האול אול במחסל של האיל אול במחסל במחסל

S's suggestion, that we should supply בהודים מהלך להודים מהוד בהולך מהודים אתם is gratuitous; at any rate this addition would be just as superfluous as the second מוד מודי מודינות in 2, 18. It is probably due to his misunderstanding of the clause אשר נתן המלך at the beginning of this verse.

S's note, Die Lesart (DN DTY) instead of DN DTY) ist zweifelhaft, da man nicht erwarten wird, dass diese Bedranger von Weibern und Kindern werden angegriffen werden, is due to some uncorrected misunderstanding, just as the remarks referred to in n. on 4, 7. In DD is a scribal expansion derived from 3, 13 (see Pur. 34, 5) but S's remark, von Weibern und Kindern hatte man schwerlich Gefahr für sein Leben zu befürchten is unwarranted: a heathen woman might assault a Jewish woman, a heathen boy might attack a Jewish boy; some heathen children might kill an old Jew &c.

^{*}In Moses Schulbaum's Deutsch-Hebr. Worterbuch (Lemberg, 1881) עמידה על יוור שני is given as the Heb. equivalent of Nothwehr.

assaulted them (מתלה בירום). They had permission only משלח רעום (9, 2) i. e. to lay hands on those who attempted to do them harm; they were allowed forcibly to resist a forcible attack upon their persons or property. 67 לְּנִעִּישׁרִישׁנִי (16, 20) does not mean they may be avenged on them (so AV) but they may repel them. Wd's conception that the enemies of the Jews were to be massacred without being able to offer any resistance (die Feinde der Juden sollen wehrlos von diesen umgebracht werden) is unwarranted. B-R 360 (l. 13) correctly states, the Jews were granted permission, alle welche sie bedrangen, zu tödten. Similarly S says, Den Juden wird durch ein Decret das Recht gegeben, für den 13. Adar Schutzmassregeln gegen ihre Feinde zu treffen; but he makes the gratuitous addition und dieselben mit Weib und Kind auszurotten. Even the received text speaks only of the slaying of their assailants.

Driver (LOT, 486) says: If all these measures were taken in self-defense, they need no justification; but the terms of the narrative itself make it extremely difficult to think that this was the case. This statement, however, is incorrect, just as the statement that it seems impossible to acquit M of permitting an unprovoked massacre. Nor, continues Driver, can the request in 9, 13 be excused. But the gibbeting of H's ten sons and the second massacre in Susa may have been necessary in order to prevent further anti-Jewish outbreaks. The personal safety of the Queen and the Grand Vizier made it necessary in Susa to teach the enemies of the Jews a lesson.

- (14) J thinks that רוופים is a gloss to ברבר; but it is merely a scribal expansion derived from 3, 13; so, too, the following ברבר (cf. footnote to n. on 2, 3). The combination בברכים ודרופים would be an anticlimax, just as דרופים at the end of v. 15. If it were original ($ has simply סביים) we would expect דרופים; the passive participle דרופים means pushed, urged, driven, while מבהלים means eager: in 3, 13 the couriers carried out the command of H, because they were compelled to obey his orders, even if they were distasteful to them; here the couriers are not דורפים, but מבהלים, i. e. they take a personal interest in the matter; cf. n. on 2, 9. For מבהלים read מבהלים.

אַרְּלָהוֹ (omitted in 6") means she roared, shouted; see Nah. 89, l. 5. B kreischte (shrieked, screamed with delight). The people of Susa, at least the majority of them, exulted over the downfall of H and the elevation of M; their boisterous mirth was not due to the edict published in favor of the Jews, as B would have it. J thinks we ought to substitute אַרְלָהוֹ וֹשְׁרֵבּוּלִה וֹשְׁרֵבּוּלִה וֹשְׁרֵבּׁה , however, is an anticlimax, just as בּהַלָּה וֹשְׁרֵבּׁה (v. 14). The second verb is an explanatory gloss.

The term אורד, light is especially appropriate inasmuch as M and E were originally gods of light; see Pur. 9, 36; 10, 32; 11, 20; 22, 6; 26, 34; cf. MDOG, No. 33, p. 35, below; also ZDMG 61, 287, 21.

substitutes περιετέμνοντο for מרודרים the verb περιετέμοντο καὶ. כּנּ substitutes περιετέμνοντο for מבלבים. S has simply במכבים. C's emendation מבלבים is unnecessary. It is possible that ממלבים means Judaizing in the sense of sympathizing with the Jews, favorably disposed toward the Jews; cf. Hellenizers &c; Arab. تقيس taqaiiasa means to side with Qais (WdG 1, 37). Contrast

(1) א has here א בעולועדה עשר ביןם; so, too, in 8, 12; contrast last n. on 3, 7. In σ a corrector has substituted reσσαρεσκαιδεκάτη.

For ביום אשר שברו איבי היהודים לשלוט בהם $ has simply יביביבים, depending (contrast SG², § 249, D) on the preceding פיום אשר שברו איבי היהודים Both clauses, ביום אשר שלט בהם משלוט בהם אשר שלטו היהודים המה בשנאיהם and משלוט בהם seem to be scribal expansions.

(2) או נקהלר (so, too, 9, 16) is pluperfect; cf. nn. on מהולר (1, 9) and להקהל (8, 11). The apodosis does not begin with נקהלר (AV, K) but with רוה (LB) cf. n. on וכדי (1, 17).

For רעתם אם בבקשי רעתם . The meaning of the Heb. phrase is undoubtedly who tried to do them bodily harm &c, not who were unfriendly disposed; cf. Num. 35, 23 (ולא מבקש רעתר (לא מבקש רעתר) and 1 S 24, 10 (25, 26).

The clause ואיש לא עבד לפנידהם does not mean no one stood up against them. The enemies of the Jews attacked them, but could not prevail against them. There is a difference between אים לא עבור and אינו לא סם לפניהם, although Wellhausen reads ים וויי in ψ 55, 19. AV, correctly, no one could withstand them; so, too, S (Niemand konnte vor ihnen bestehen) but in the introductory remarks prefixed to his nn. on c. 9 he makes the unwarranted statement: Die Judenfeinde werden am dreizehnten des Monats Adar ausgerottet. Vom Schrecken gelähmt wagen sie keinen Widerstand, sondern lassen sich im ganzen Reiche ruhig hinmetzeln (cf. n. on 4, 7). The same mistake is found in 3 (nullusque ausus est resistere). Cf. n. on התעמד (5, 1) and Nah. 53, iv: דעבור לפנין, who can endure His fury. Heb. עבוד, to abide may mean endure, remain firm, and סום, to stand may have the same meaning (cf. to stand fire &c). Nor is it necessary to read בפניהום (עובאפיהור) as in Josh. 10, 8; 21, 42; 23, 9. Wd's statement, Es wird nicht gesagt, dass die Heiden anfingen; schon die, welche das Unglück der Juden suchten, wurden umgebracht. Jeder also, der im Rufe eines Judenfeindes stand, ward getödtet, is gratuitous.

The clause at the end of this verse, כר נפל פודרם על כל הזעמים is an illogical scribal expansion derived from the end of c. 8; cf. n. on 8, 14; see also passages like Deut. 2, 25; 11, 25; Josh. 2, 9, &c. The reason why no one could withstand them was not, that all the gentiles were frightened, but that the Jews were fully prepared for the attack and had organized a vigorous resistance and defense.

(3) For עשר בלאכה see n. on 3, 9.

ארם אום does not mean extolled (3 extollebant, א בייביים, 67 פינועיאים, LB erhoben) but they supported (AV helped).

Also the clause at the end of v. 3, ברדכר עלידום, is a scribal expansion. It is expressed in $\mathfrak{G}^{\mathsf{vL}}$, but $\mathfrak{G}^{\mathsf{v}}$ omits v. 4. $\mathfrak S$ has instead of ברדכר. The reason why the satraps &c favored the Jews is given in v. 4.

- (4) In the same way the clause at the end of v. 4, כי דאיש מרדכר, is due to scribal expansion; ונדול is inf. absol. (cf. n. on דורון, 2, 18).

The term כרעותדון ש, וע נסשנסט) at the end of v. 5 implies that the authorities did not interfere (cf. v. 3). If the authorities had allowed the Jews to organize armed resistance, the numerous massacres in Russia during the past few years would have been nipped in the bud (cf. n. on לעבוד על נפשם, 8, 11). But, as a rule, the assailants of the Russian Jews were supported by the governors, military commanders, officers of the police, &c (see Pur. 35, 21; 43, 15. 22. 32. 38. 44. 46. 48; 44, 2). או מרצונם does not mean to their hearts' content (French à cœur joie; this would be בכל אוּח נפשם or כתאוח סובכל אוּח נפשם. It implies simply that the Persian Jews had free hands in dealing with their assailants owing to the non-interference on the part of the authorities. Syr. احب اخمله means in my opinion, in my judgment. The Persian governors &c received no instructions to suppress all anti-Jewish demonstrations (the royal edict issued by H could not be repealed; cf. 8, 8b) but they did not support the assailants of the Jews, and allowed the Jews to defend themselves. In this way the permission granted by H's edict was not worth more than the pound of flesh which Portia* allowed Shylock to cut from the body of Antonio.

(6) The addition of הבירה (ביבי) is due to scribal expansion; the fight between the Jews and their assailants did not take place in the Acropolis, but in the City of Susa (cf. nn. on 1, 2; 4, 17). In vv. 12-15 we find simply שושן, not שושן . The scribes did not know the exact meaning of הבירה; they regarded it as a kind of epitheton ornans; cf. Assyr. Uruk suptru (JAOS 22, 8, n. 7). No importance can be attached to 6 v de Normans of that the same rendering

The addition of אבר וואפר implies that 500 were dead or missing; cf. n. on סוביד להרג ולאבר (3, 13). In the present passage $ has simply באבי בילים, but in v. 12: באבי בילים בילים. In both passages אור ואברן seems to be due to scribal expansion, just as אור ואברן מער הרב (v. 5). The glossator, of course, did not intend אור בילים וואברן (v. 5). The glossator, of course, did not intend ואברן באברן (v. 5). ועברון אברן (v. 5). ועברן אברן (v. 27).

(7) The names of the ten sons of H are just as doubtful as the names of the seven eunuchs (1, 10) or the names of the seven (?) councilors (1, 14). To follows M; also the names in I are almost identical with those given in M; in S, and especially in S, the divergences (which are to some extent due to popular adaptation) are greater, as is evident from the following table:

Φαρσαν καὶ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ is a corruption of Φαρσαν.. ταν καὶ Δελφων. In $5 \stackrel{\checkmark}{\sim}$; the $\stackrel{\checkmark}{\sim}$ is miswriting for $\stackrel{\checkmark}{\sim}$. The ϵ in Δελφων may be due to the influence of Δελφοί, δελφίς, δέλφαξ. Δελφίς and Δελφίων are Greek proper names.

Φασγα may be transposed from Ασφαγ, and this may be a corruption of Ασφατ (with Γ for T; cf. last n. on 2, 14) = NDEON. S Zaam is phonetic spelling (see Kings 279, 52) for NDEON.

- In the transposition may be due to the fact that $| \cdot \cdot \cdot \rangle$ is more common in Syriac than $| \cdot \cdot \cdot \cdot \rangle$. Owing to the vocalic character of the rathere is not much difference in Syriac between initial $| \cdot \cdot \cdot \rangle$ and $| \cdot \cdot \cdot \rangle$; cf. SG², $| \cdot \cdot \rangle$ 52 (also $| \cdot \cdot \rangle$ 32) and for the dropping of the final $| \cdot \rangle$ see $| \cdot \rangle$ 26, C. Sarbaxa may be a corruption of Ardaba, the initial $| \cdot \rangle$ as perhaps due to dittography of the second syllable of the preceding Barra. Arbaxa (for Arbaba) may be influenced by the Persian names Arbaxa, Arbaara, Arbaara,
- (9) א במשבים may be a corruption of ביטבים (with ב for ב, m for בס, and a for ב) influenced, perhaps, by ביטבים, persuasion, supplication. א ביטבים stands for ביטבים; the m is due to corrupt dittography of the following ביטבים: א שביטבים stands for ביטבים: the m is due to corrupt dittography of the following ביטבים: א שביטבים: א שביטבים: להביטבים: להביט

אַריסי stands for אָליי. ליני א 'Aporaios seems to correspond to No. 8: אַריסי it may be originally a variant of 'Povpaios = אַריסי which may be a corruption of 'קוֹפּי (see above).

All these explanations are, of course, entirely conjectural (see Pur. 27, 40, which might have been cited also in ZDMG 61, 195, 14) but it is important to show that all those divergences (apparently irreconcilable) may be derived from the same text. B's statement, that some of the names in 6 are entirely different, is an exaggeration; Wd even says that [all] the names of the sons of H appear in 6 in an entirely different form.

The Persian etymologies given by Benfey and Benary (quoted in B) are no doubt unsatisfactory (for Scheftelowitz see my remarks in AJP 27, 164; cf. J's preface) but J's. Heb. etymologies are worse. J combines Bapora = אַרליא with the name of the King of Sodom, ברשל (Gen. 14, 2) and 'Povpaios is supposed to be אַרליא; for 'Apoulos J compares יְלַרְשִׁרְן; Φάσγα, J thinks, may be a corruption of אַרַבּיבּין; and אַרַבּיבּים (for אַר בּרשנדתא) is supposed to be פרשנדתא, eques gloriae.

(10) It is hardly necessary to add that the wai before rows deen vious $A_{\mu\alpha\nu}$ in \mathfrak{S}^L is secondary, just as the before defined in \mathfrak{S}^L in \mathfrak{S} , \mathfrak{S} . Four of the ten names have dropped out in \mathfrak{S}^L (just as four of the names of the seven councilors are not represented in \mathfrak{S} ; see nn. on 1, 14). Therefore the remaining six names were no longer felt to be identical with the ten sons of H.

Instead of בן המרתא has בן.

depend on בא. Nor is it possible to derive איף, from איף, to loathe (AoF 3, 396: taedet me generis humani). This idea is expressed in vv. 6. 7. Cf. also Am. 8, 2: בא הקץ על עביי

(16) או (סרולר) is pluperfect (as in v. 2) and means they had organized themselves; contrast ומרולר) in v. 15. A new און הוא was necessary as soon as the Jews learned that the edict was to be in force for one more day.

B proposes to read [] instead of [] (6 decravouro, 2 and R (in K) proposes to read [] (8, 13) or []]; also GB¹⁴, 44 states that we must read an inf. of []]; see, however, AJSL 21, 141, n. 21 and the remarks on the emendation κλήρων for ὑμῶν in nn. on 3, 7. If [] is a misplaced gloss (cf. n. on 3, 7) with Waw explicative (cf. n. on 1, 17) to [] in v. 17; it is probably derived from v. 22 (cf. n. on 8, 14).

Instead of 75,000 (so, too, TSI) 6 has 15,000 (μυρίους πεντακισχιλίους) fff is more original; 6 represents a subsequent mitigation. S's statement that 6 as well as TSI have 15,000 instead of 75,000 is incorrect; cf. n. on 4, 7. We need not suppose that 75,000 represents the aggregate number of the enemies of the Jews (the soldiers of Antiochus Epiphanes and his successors) who were slain by the Jews in the Maccabean battles, although this may have been the opinion of the glossator who added the gloss of 1 in 8, 11. We read in 1 M 11, 47 that 3,000 Jews, which Jonathan (the Maccabean prototype of Mordecai; see second n. on 6, 8) had sent to Antioch, at the request of King Demetrius II, about the end of B. c. 145, slew 100,000 men there in one day. The whole city was at the mercy of the Jews (κατεκράτησαν οἱ Ἰουδαΐοι τῆς πόλεως ὡς ἡβούλοντο, cf.

(20) Wd thinks it not impossible that vv. 20-28 and 29-32, which B considers to be a subsequent addition, were taken from an older source, and that E was composed for the purpose of explaining these two documents, just as some critics believe that the object of the Book of Jonah is to explain the psalm in c. 2; contrast AJSL 23, 256. B (376, below) stated: Die Einschaltung 9, 20-32 wird aus einem anderen Purim-Buche in unser Purim-Buch hineingestellt sein. But it is a mistake to suppose that the entire section 9, 20-32 is derived from a different source. The first three verses (20-22) are genuine, also the first part of 26 and vv. 27 and 28^a; but vv. 23-25, the second part of v. 26, v. 28^b, and 29-32 represent secondary additions. They were not taken from an older source, but added by a later glossator (cf. Pur. 44, 31).

M, the prime minister, had received reports from all the governors of the provinces, stating what had happened on the 13th of Adar, how many assailants of the Jews had been slain, and how the Jews had celebrated the following day. M sent this information to all his coreligionists in the Persian empire, urging them to commemorate this notable event for all time to come.

The Persian term פורים is equivalent to Heb. מנות, portions or presents of food (cf. Neh. 8, 10. 12) exchanged at the Purim festival. The singular of פורדי = פורים, but פורדי = פורדי, the Middle Iranian form (*purde) of Vedic parti (syn. daksina) portion, espe-28; Lev. 7, 33; 8, 29. The omission of the 7 (which is preserved in $\mathfrak{S}^{\mathsf{L}}$ φουρδι) is due to haplography; cf. n. on אדשורוש (1, 1). 67 φρουραι (i. e. watches, vigils) is a popular adaptation of ϕ ov ρ au (with A for Δ) = φουρδι. This popular etymology may have been suggested by the vigils (cf. מַּמְרִים, Ex. 12, 42) or watch-meetings which have been held on New Year's eve from times immemorial. The Purim festival is a Jewish adaptation of the Persian spring festival Nauroz, and this is derived from the Babylonian New Year's festival (about the time of the vernal equinox) so that בורת = פורים corresponds to Lat. strenae, French étrennes. The observance of the Persian New Year's festival was combined with the commemoration of Nicanor's Day; see Pur. 3, 6; 4, 41; 9, 26; 10, 39; 14, 40; 17, 7. 23; 46, 24. 29. 32; 50, 37; 51, 10; 52, 4; ZDMG 61, 275, 17; 277, 1.

The clause את אשר החלו refers to the celebrations of the victory over their assailants, and מרדכי אלידום refers to the celebrations of the victory over their assailants, and מרדכי אלידום alludes to the two days of feasting on the 14th and 15th of Adar. The Jews in Susa had celebrated the 15th day; the provincial Jews, the 14th. M recommended the perpetual general observance of both days.

A subsequent glossator deemed it necessary to emphasize the fact that the King had made this statement although he had authorized H to exterminate all the Jews in his empire; he therefore added III is en in spite of the letter (scil. which the King had authorized H to wend to the governors &c). The second part of v. 26 is a gloss explaining the על כן at the beginning of the verse, with special reference to מינער at the beginning of v. 27. Two explanations of על כך are given; the לל ככה ומה :the second; על כל דברי האברת הזאת ומה ראו דוביע עלידום. The second is a tertiary gloss explaining the preceding פומה הגע עליהם and על כל דברי האגרת הזאת=על ככה: = על כל דברי האברת הזאת was sufficiently explicit; therefore this tertiary gloss substitutes simply כל ככה; but למה but למה לשות ; but might be misunderstood, and was therefore explained by ומדה הוביע עלידום, in order to make it clear that כתה did not mean what they had seen, but what they had experienced; cf. the explanation of in T2, quoted above, רעקתא דארע יתון. S's rendering, Deswegen, nach allen den Worten des Briefs, so wohl in Betreff dessen, was sie selbst dieserhalb erlebten, als dessen was sie betraf, setzten die Juden fest, is monstrous (cf. n. on 4, 7). For עלידום we must not read אלידום (contrast last n. on 4, 5). In this preposition means in addition to; see Kings 125, 7.

ולא יעבור (cf. 1, 19) is misplaced; it should be transposed to the end of this verse, after בכל שנה בשנה, and instead of ולא יעבור we must read את שני הימים האלה, referring to את שני הימים האלה; cf. the gloss in v. 28 b. The letters ן and ¬ are easily confounded; cf. n. on חפר (7, 8). For transposition of ¬ see also Nah. 41 (להב), &c).

(28) The second part of this verse is an explanatory gloss, not only to the first part of v. 28, but also to the end of v. 27. א העברן for המרן, and בבן for המרן

(29) Verses 29-32 represent a subsequent addition.

את כל הוקף cannot mean with all strength, with all energy; AV with all authority: K unter Einsetzung ihres ganzen Ansehens:

שנה studio. This expression would be still more peculiar than the phrase אמר עם הספר (v. 25). With all energy or most emphatically might be expressed by המל הוקה בכל (cf. Deut. 6, 5). The prefixed א must be the nota accusativi; so בבי בייבי (אחר כל הוקא). For אם בייבי see Nah. 25. $ has בייבי להחקם החת כל הוקח בל הוקח בל הוקף הואר כל הוקף הואר בל ה אורת is a tertiary gloss; cf. n. on 2, 14. Also המנית is a subsequent addition.

(30) V. 30 is omitted in 6.

אמן (א פייסי) is impersonal (cf. n. on 8, 10). But the original text may have been אור דרי הייסי); the masculine form may have been substituted after הייסילון; the masculine form may have been substituted after הייסילון (v. 29) had been transposed. In Cant. 2, 7, on the other hand, the feminine form has been substituted for the masculine form (הארבוה) is a later addition) because אחרבון may have reminded some readers of Job 40, 17: המייסילון, where במעלם Hor. Sat. 1, 2, 45; 2, 7, 49. The original meaning of אחרבון is intendere. Cf. the explanation of the scriptio plena השלבון (Cant. 5, 2) BL 33.

(31) או ברדכי המלכה after מרדכי הדרדי is a tertiary gloss.

The לידהם in עלידהם does not refer to משר as Wd supposes, but to the Jews; cf. לקים עלידהם in v. 21.

את ברי הצונות וזעקתו (cf. n. on 1, 13) or institutions of the great fast (plur intens.) and their crying (or invocation), אלוחהון, בילי דצונא, בילי דצונא, בילי דצונא, בילי דצונא (ריזען זעקה בולה בילי בילי וניקה). This refers to 4, 1.3.16. M had cried with a loud and bitter cry (ריזען זעקה בולה וניקה) and the Jews had fasted, wept, and lamented (צום ובכי וניספד) when the edict of H became known. Afterwards E asked M to fast with all the Jews of Susa for her sake, three days and three nights, before she went to the King, and E herself with her maids fasted in the same way.

During the Babyl. Captivity Ezekiel (about 570 s. c.) recommended to observe the Day of Atonement on the 1st of Tishri, while the New Year was to be celebrated on the 10th of Tishri, in order to avoid a coincidence of the Jewish New Year with the Babyl. festival at the beginning of the second half of the year. Under Persian dominion, about 500 s. c. (when the Priestly Code was compiled in Babylonia) the two festivals in the seventh month, as prescribed by Ezekiel, exchanged places so that the Day of Atonement was observed on the 10th of Tishri, because the Persians celebrated the μαγοφόνια on that day. Cf. n. on v. 27 and Pur. 4, 20-37; 20, 3; 33, 14.

(32) Wd's view that <code>¬ppd</code> refers either to the book from which the author took the two letters (cf. n. on v. 20) or to our Book of E, is gratuitous. Heb. <code>¬ppd</code> does not necessarily mean in the book (AV) it may also mean in a book (so K, S) see Kings 191, 37.

(1) For the misplaced gloss in v. 1 see fourth paragraph of nn. on 2,18.

(2) In v. 2º we must transpose • and f: the opening clause, וכל בורתו הקפו וגבורתו should follow the second clause, מעשה תקפו וגבורתו פרשה נכל מעשה תקפו וגבורתו even the first clause; מרדכי אשר גדלו המלך refers to M, not to the King.

The clause אמר גדלן המלך אמר גדלן המלך 11; it cannot mean whereunto the King advanced him (so AV; K zu der ihn der König erhob) nor does it mean whom the King advanced (so S; בירה מלכא ד, כוֹכים פעבון ד, די רבייה מלכא ד, די רבייה מלכא ד, בירה מלכא ד, די רבייה מלכא בירה מלכא ד, די רבייה מלכא ד, די רבייה מלכא בירה מלכא ד, די רבייה מלכא בירה מלכא ד, די רבייה מלכא בירה מלכא

The phrase לעמר שוב לעמר means: he tried to promote the interests of the Jews, while דבר שלום לכל זרעו implies that he was not haughty and distant, but affable and kind to the meanest among his brethren, in spite of his exalted position. For דבר שלום S refers to Zech. 9, 10; ψ 85, 9. Cf. ψ 122: אבַרעד־נא שלום בך מוב בך מוב לך.

The statement in the present passage, . . . ברי הצומות ודעקתם ליקים אח שישר would seem to imply that the Jews had adopted the fasting (and crying) before they adopted the feasting. They may have observed the Babyl. New Year's festival at first as a fast-day, but the less orthodox Jews (the Sadduceans) may have gradually adopted the celebration of the (Babyl. and) Persian New Year's festival (just as many modern Jews celebrate Christmas). This was afterwards sanctioned by the ecclesiastical authorities, but the date was changed: the feast was celebrated, not at the beginning of the first month, but at the middle of the preceding month, just as the ancient Heb. spring festival, the Passover, was not celebrated at the beginning (new moon) of the first month (about the time of the vernal equinox) but at the middle (full moon) of the first month, in order to avoid a coincidence of the Jewish Passover and the Babylonian New Year's festival.

During the Babyl. Captivity Ezekiel (about 570 s. c.) recommended to observe the Day of Atonement on the 1st of Tishri, while the New Year was to be celebrated on the 10th of Tishri, in order to avoid a coincidence of the Jewish New Year with the Babyl. festival at the beginning of the second half of the year. Under Persian dominion, about 500 s. c. (when the Priestly Code was compiled in Babylonia) the two festivals in the seventh month, as prescribed by Ezekiel, exchanged places so that the Day of Atonement was observed on the 10th of Tishri, because the Persians celebrated the μαγοφόνια on that day. Cf. n. on v. 27 and Pur. 4, 20-37; 20, 3; 33, 14.

(32) Wd's view that \begin{align} \text{refers} either to the book from which the author took the two letters (cf. n. on v. 20) or to our Book of E, is gratuitous. Heb. \begin{align} \begin{align} \text{does not necessarily mean in the book (AV)} it may also mean in a book (so K, S) see Kings 191, 37.

(1) For the misplaced gloss in v. 1 see fourth paragraph of nn. on 2,18.

(2) In v. 2° we must transpose ° and β: the opening clause, וכל, should follow the second clause, ובררתו הבלך המלך; even the first clause וברותו refers to M, not to the King.

The clause אמר גדלן המלך המלך is a set 5, 11; it cannot mean whereunto the .! der ihn der König erhob) nor dos (so S; א مناه مناه), • א ביי מיי של א מיי מיי של א ביי מיי של א מיי של א מיי מיי של א מיי

CRITICAL NOTES ON OLD TESTAMENT PASSAGES

JULIUS A. BEWER

1. OBADIAH, Vs. 16.

The most natural and reasonable interpretation of the drinking on Mount Zion is the one that refers it to the drinking of the cup of Yahweh's fury (cf. Jer., chap. 25; 49:12). Since this is now the prevalent interpretation we need not again adduce the arguments for it. There is only one point in connection with it that is strange, namely, that the nations are doomed to drink continually (TIP), for it is manifestly impossible for them to go on drinking after they have become "as though they had not been." The force of this observation has long been felt, and two ways out of the difficulty have been suggested:

- 1) The reading of many Hebrew manuscripts, which have בְּבֶּיב in place of קְּבָיד, was accepted by many scholars, from De Rossi on, as the original. But the arguments brought forward against it were so conclusive that the latest commentators, Nowack and Marti, do not even think the variant reading important enough to mention it.
- 2) The reading of the Greek version (A א בּבּ Q), סוֹיסי מוֹסידמו, Hexaplar Syriac בּבּבּ, has been regarded by many as representing the original. Olivov, which stands in the place of אַבָּי (cf. Deut. 32:14) or of שִּבְּי which occurs in New Hebrew in this meaning. Which of these two synonyms should be substituted for בּבָּי is still the question. This suggestion has the advantage of easily explaining the reading בּבְּי , and has again been taken up by Marti, and by Nowack in Kittel's Biblia Hebraica. But it does not explain how the other reading בּבְיבָּי for דִבְּיִה originated, and, moreover, it is not really in harmony with the interpretation that the drinking refers to the drinking of the cup of fury of Yahweh, for if מְבֶּר or מְבֶּר originally stood here, the other interpretation, which refers it to reveling and banqueting in connection with the celebration of the victory over the holy city Jerusalem, seems to be more natural, but against this the whole context protests. It is not the drinking of wine but of fury that must be referred to. In none of the passages where the drinking of the cup of judgment is spoken of do we find this expressed merely by "they shall drink wine," not to lay stress on the fact that מול is never used in such connections. It would be much more reasonable to regard nas a corruption of "לְּבֶּלְתְ, "they shall drink my fury," for such a phrase would indeed express the idea that must be in the original text; cf. Job 21:20, בַּחֲבֶּה שֵׁדֵּי יְשִׁהַּה . I do not know whether this has ever been suggested. It would at least be plausible, and would fit in admirably with the context. But it is not easy to explain how שמח was misread as סביב, though it is not difficult to see how חמרד might have arisen from a badly written המהד. The reading is, however, attested by too many manuscripts to be left altogether out of account. We must therefore seek for a different explanation.

There are three readings: (1) MT TIP; (2) many Hebrew manuscripts, IIP; (3) & Syr. Hex. olvov. The key to the solution of the difficulty lies in the recognition of the fact that olvov represents not IIP (Deut. 32:14) but NIO, which is translated by olvos in Isa. 1:22. It so happens that IIP occurs only once, in Deut. 32:14, where the Greek has olvos—the only other occurrence, Isa. 27:2, is due to a corruption—and that NIO also occurs only once, in Isa. 1:22, the other two occurrences, Hos. 4:18, Nah. 1:10, being due to textual error. (See on both nouns Brown-Driver-Briggs, Hebrew Lexicon.) Thus, there is just as much reason for regarding NIO as underlying olvov as for thinking that IIP was the Hebrew original of AN Syr. Hex. The correctness of the restoration of NIO will at once appear.

This סֹבָּא sides with the reading of the Hebrew MSS, סָבִיב . It is easy to see how the one could be mistaken for the other. But it would be a mistake, now that we have discovered how the reading סָבִּיב originated, to think that we have also discovered the original Hebrew text, and that it is necessary merely to substitute אָבֶּי for דְּבָיּה; for the objection urged above against the reading סְבָּיג or דְּבָיּה; holds also against אֶבֶּי, which is merely a synonym of קְבָיר, and, moreover, it would not explain how דְבָיִּה could have arisen. And מוני also is too well attested to be simply set aside.

This is exactly what we need in our text, which now reads:

For as ye have drunk
Upon my holy mountain,
So shall all the nations drink
The cup at my hand;
And they shall drink and swallow down,
And be as though they had not been.

It will be noted that in the parallel passage, Jer. 49:12, we have the phrase מֹשׁבוֹת בְּשׁבֹּיֹם, which is a weighty argument in favor of our restoration. As is well known, this verse in Obadiah belongs to the later portions. The phrase "to drink the cup of fury at the hand of Yahweh," is so well known that it is not necessary to add an explanation regarding the contents of the cup, though this was done when the phrase was first used, Jer., chap. 25, Isa., chap. 51. But in Hab. 2:16 we have it called simply בְּשִׁרְ בְּשִׁרְ בְּשִׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בְּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בְּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בְּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בְּשִׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּעִירְ בְּשִׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּעִּיִי בְּשִׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּעְּיִבְּעִי בְּשְׁרְ בִּעְרְ בְּשִׁרְ בִּשְׁרְ בִּעְרְ בְּשִׁרְ בִּעְרְ בִּעְרְ בְּשִׁרְ בִּעְרְ בִּעְרְ בְּעִיבְּיִי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִיבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעִבְּי בְעבִּי בְּעִבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְעבְּי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּבְי בְּעבְּי בְּעבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְיבְיבְי בְּעבְי בְּעבְיבְיבְי בְּעבְיבְי בְּבְעבְי בְּבְיבְיבְּבְי בְּבְיבְּבְיבְיבְיבְיבְיבְי that in another passage against Edom, Lam. 4:21, we have simply סוֹם without any qualifying element, and yet every one recognizes that it can be nothing else but the cup of Yahweh's fury, In our passage we have the qualifying אָבֶּרְ הַּוֹשְׁבֶּר , which places it beyond doubt that the cup of wrath of Yahweh is intended. We may add that the verse is also metrically better when restored as above.

The " at the end was probably not written. Then one scribe, regarding א, כ, ס as not belonging to the text, copied merely הברים חברד; another scribe thinking that א, כ, ס were put in as a correction, and therefore the better text, copied merely אכם. But he took כ for ב, which was one of the easiest things to do, and read the whole as אכם, which seemed to him to fit in admirably with שמה, but which another read as מהבים סבים. It is interesting to notice that he read the consonants in the other direction, not סבים but אבס, which indicates that a word written implies might be read either NID or DIN, since there was apparently no rule for writing up or down in such cases. Possibly this may explain a number of textual mistakes where the various consonants have been transposed.

The confusion arose before the LXX translation was made, at a time when the square alphabet was used, or a form of the alphabet approximating it very closely. The passage belongs to a Maccabean writer, as I shall try to make probable in another place.

2. Judges 2:1a, 5b

וַהַּצַל מַלְאַה־יְדוֹּיָה מִן־הַבּּלְבָּל אֶל־הַבּּכִים וַיַּצַל מַלְאַה־יְדוֹּיָה מִן־הַבּּלְבָּל

These verses follow the story of the invasion of Canaan by the various tribes as summarized in the first chapter, and are usually interpreted as follows: "Israel being now firmly established in Canaan, the religious center is transferred from the plains of Jericho, where they first gained a foothold in Western Palestine, to a sanctuary in the heart of the land. This change is signalized by the removal of the Angel of Yahweh, his presence manifested in oracle and theophany, from Gilgal to the new holy place, which, upon his appearance there, is consecrated by sacrifice (vs. 5b). The transfer of the religious center to Bethel marks the end of the period of invasion, as the preceding period of migration ended with the encampment at Gilgal (Jos. 5:10-12)."

It is assumed here that vs. 1a and vs. 5b go together, and are not from the redactor who wrote vss. 1b-5a, but part of an old source; and further that cannot be original in vs. 1, for we expect the older name of the place and a name of greater note."

These assumptions appear to be altogether correct. But it is now further declared that the source from which these verses are taken must be J, from which we have also chap. 1, and that the original name of Bochim was in all probability Bethel, which is gathered from the conflate reading of \mathfrak{G} , $\partial \mathfrak{A} = \partial \mathfrak{A} + \partial \mathfrak{A} +$ chapter. But if this is so, then it is strange that the Angel of Yahweh is, in chap. 2:1, still at Gilgal, i.e., in the old camp where the tribes were together before they separated. We should have expected that he would go up with them into the various parts of Canaan, but instead of this we find him still in the plains of Jericho. Why should this be so? Did this writer think that the Israelites could fight their battles without the help of Yahweh, whose representative or manifestation the Angel is? Certainly not, for both in 1:19 and in 1:22 he says distinctly, "Yahweh was with Judah," and "Yahweh was with them," i. e., the house of Joseph. A writer who had this conception that Yahweh Himself was going with the invading armies can hardly have thought that the Angel of Yahweh remained behind at Gilgal, for how could the people tell that Yahweh was with them, if they saw that the Angel of Yahweh stayed at Gilgal? Budde says: "The Angel of Yahweh did not follow the march of Judah but that of the house of Joseph (vs. 22). That would be the And this would have a good reason, since Judah regained in the far South its contact with Yahweh Himself in His seat."

²G. F. Moore, International Oritical Commentary, "Judges" (1895), pp. 56 f.

² Moore, ibid., p. 57: "What stands between (vss. 15-5a) is in substance and form strik ingly different from chap. 1, and bears the stamp of the school of Hebrew historiography which, for lack of a more suitable general name, we call Deuteronomic."

Now, as a matter of fact, the Angel of Yahweh always went before Israel and did not stay behind. Ex. 23:20, 23; 32:34; 33:2, are explicit on this point. It is promised there that the Angel should lead Israel into Canaan and help them gain possession of the land, and not that he should stay at a given place where the religious center, i. e., the camp, would be, and let the armies march away from him. He is to be the victorious leader of Israel's invading army. If then we find him in 2:1 still at Gilgal, it means either that he has not yet gone up into the hill country, or that he has returned to the camp at Gilgal after his expedition. Neither conception is in harmony with the representation of chap. 1. And 2:1a cannot come from the same writer as chap. 1. The writer of chap. 1 does not speak of the Angel of Yahweh at all; he speaks of Yahweh Himself. This is in line with the results of the investigations of the sources of the Hexateuch, for chap. 1 is admittedly from J. But in the

Hexateuch it is not J who has the conception of the Angel of Yahweh, but E and R^{IB} . Chap. 2:1a is therefore not from J but from E.

If this is recognized the main difficulty is removed, for it is seen at once that this verse is really entirely in line with the representation of E. For E regards the camp at Gilgal as fixed, and lets Joshua return to the camp at Gilgal with his army after the great decisive battles (cf. Josh. 10:15, 43), and of course the Angel of Yahweh who, according to E in Exodus, is to go before Israel, is with the army. So also here. The army is in camp at Gilgal after having won the victories over the Canaanites, and now the Angel of Yahweh leads them on into the hill country. The camp, which is the religious center, is removed from Gilgal to a place in the interior of the country.

Unfortunately the name of the place whither he leads them is uncertain, for the reading הבֹכים is, as is generally acknowledged, corrupt. The conflate reading of 6 gives no satisfaction either. But we shall find a fruitful suggestion in the fact that the verse belongs to E. The religious center is transferred, according to E, from Gilgal to Shechem. According to E in Josh., chap. 24, with which Judg., chap. 2 is connected, Joshua has the Israelites gathered at Shechem, and it is on Mount Ebal, near Shechem, that they sacrifice, according to Josh. 8:30, 31 (E). According to Judg. 2:6 (E,=Josh. 24:28) also, the Israelites are at Shechem. And so it seems to the present writer exceedingly probable that the original reading in 2:5 was שכם in place of הבכים, a reading which graphically also corresponds better to the Massoretic text than ביתאל of G. The reading of G appears to be nothing more than a conjecture, which may have been due to the fact that there was an 'Allon Bacuth near Bethel (Gen. 35:8). But that Bethel was the religious center after Gilgal we are told nowhere else. That Shechem was so is in harmony with the narrative of E in the book of Joshua.

The corruption of יובכים into יובכים into יובכים not only preceded the Greek translation but is older than the interpolated verses 15-5a, which explain the name. This must also be assumed on the other theory; and it argues strongly against the originality of בירואל.

Moreover, on this hypothesis the relation of 2:1a, 5b to the following description from E of the death of Joshua, vss. 6 ff., becomes clear. Chap. 2:1a, 5b, are not the conclusion of chap. 1, but form, with vss. 6 ff., a parallel to Josh. 24. Chap. 1 is a summary of the conquest of Canaan from the document J, and was prefixed to the book of Judges when it was made a book by itself; chap. 2 has nothing to do with this, but is from E-of course, only the verses that have been discussed are meant; for our purpose it is not necessary to go into an analysis of the whole of chap. 2. Verses 1a, 5b, take up the narrative of the settlement in Canaan according to E, not of the conquest. The army has gone back to its camp at Gilgal, and from there they move their camp to Shechem (vs. 1a). At Shechem a sacrifice is offered, and Shechem becomes the new religious center (vs. 5b). Then Joshua sends the various tribes into the territories which had been assigned them by lot (vs. 6). Verse 6 also assumes that all the tribes are still together; but they are not sent away, as in chap. 1:1 ff., to conquer the land—that had been done before—but simply to take possession of their allotted sections. Then follows the death and burial of Joshua, and the redactional summary of Israel's faithfulness during Joshua's lifetime and its unfaithfulness after his death. This is succeeded by the summary of the period of the Judges.

3. Isaiah 42:5-9

The long, formal, introduction shows that vss. 5-9 do not belong to the Servant of Yahweh poem, 42:1-4. The passage must be taken with 41:21-29, of which it is the logical continuavs. 1. For when vss. 15-5a were added, the reading in 1a must already have been DDDT. Bethel is therefore nothing else but an old explanatory gloss and does not represent the original text.

It is also to be noted that & read not simply in the Kandpaira and in Bandia but added and the trip elast Topaia. Moore thinks that this is merely due to dittography of $\text{Normal}$, while Budde and Nowack regard it as a correction of a more original $\text{DOT}$ \text{Topaia}$, and adopt the latter as an original element of the text, which according to them was: "And the Angel of Jahve led 'the house of Joseph' from Gilgal to 'Bethel.'" That $\text{NOTD}$ \text{TOT}$ \text{TOT}$ corresponds here to $\text{DOT}$ \text{TOT}$ is clear, for the Judaeans do not go to Bethel. But it is not an original part of the text, but another marginal note, which explained that the Angel of Yahweh went with the Joseph tribes, according to chap. 1:2; and in the discover Topaia is thus a gloss upon a gloss. Note also the peculiar grammatical construction in the Greek, which gives no sense and shows its secondary character. At best it might be supposed that $\text{TOT}$ \text{NOTD}$ stood originally after $\text{TOM}$." and he said to the house of Israel."

tion. Verses 5 f. are addressed not to the Servant of Yahweh but to Cyrus; they expand the thought of 41:25; verses 7-9 expand 41:26-29. In this way everything has its true, natural force.

The terms employed in the address correspond precisely to those used in chap. 45 with reference to Cyrus:

לאניע בֿבּבֿל = בֿבּאניעל בֿבּבֿל קנינע בֿיבֿינן = נְאַנוֹל בּבָּבָל 42:13 אַמָּר-בֿינְינֹלוּני. בֹיבִינן

Compare also קראתיר with קראתיר 48:15.

Yahweh declares the purpose which he has in view with Cyrus. Cyrus is to set the captives free. The introduction, vs. 5, sums up the claims that have been made for Yahweh in the previous chapters, and forms an admirable backing for the work of Cyrus. The Almighty God, the creator of the world and of men, stands behind him in his undertaking. Omnipotence guarantees its complete success. The emphasis on "I, Yahweh," is at once clear when we remember the debate of chap. 41. Yahweh has called him, and no one else; for it is he who directs the affairs of the world. Yahweh watches over him and protects him (נצר); "unharmed" he goes from battle to battle (41:3), his life is charmed because it is in Yahweh's keeping. All this is plain, and stands out very clearly when applied to Cyrus. But now we come to the difficult לברית עם. Before we determine its meaning we should observe that the following phrase לאוֹר בּוֹים is not an original element of the text. The reasons for this assertion are, first, that it is missing in GB, and therefore rightly omitted in Swete's edition; one cannot explain its omission, but very well its addition; second, it is missing in 49:8, where our passage is evidently quoted, and where there would be no reason for its omission, on the contrary every reason for its addition if it had already been in the text of 42:6; for it would be strange indeed if it had been there and yet had been omitted, when in the following verse he speaks to those who are in darkness. It was thus not yet in the Hebrew text of the LXX, and it was not yet in the Hebrew text of the interpolator of 49:8ba. It was introduced into our passage by one who regarded the verses as addressed to the Servant of Yahweh, and in fact, he took the phrase from one of the Servant of Yahweh songs, 49:6.

With the recognition of this interpolation, one of the diffiis eliminated. It is clear from vs. 7, which defines Yahweh's purpose, that must refer to Yahweh's people Israel. Moreover, it seems to the present writer that Duhm is quite right when he declares that the phrase has not been correctly preserved, and also that Duhm's proposal to read לברכת עם for לברית should be adopted. The change is exceedingly slight, merely 5 for 7. It is exactly what we expect in connection with the following. Verse 7 follows quite naturally. It expresses the manner in which Cyrus shall be a blessing to the people: He shall "open blind eyes, bring out captives from the prison, and those who sit in darkness from the house of restraint." Cyrus shall be the agent of Yahweh in the restoration of his exiled people. The phrases do not fit the Servant of Yahweh, but are altogether appropriate in connection with Cyrus. And exactly in line with this is the conclusion in vss. 8 f., which looks back to the great argument of chap. 41: I, Yahweh, that is my name; I, not the idols, have done this. To Yahweh all the glory is due. He had prophesied things in the past; these prophecies had come true. Now he foretells something new that will also certainly come to pass, the release and restoration of Israel.

Taken thus the whole passage can, and must, be regarded as genuine, and is not to be given up as secondary with Duhm, Cheyne, and Marti.

4. JEREMIAH 2:34

The second half of this verse is difficult. The latest commentator of Jeremiah, Cornill, does not translate it. If one looks over the many suggestions that have been made, it may be said that today there are two that commend themselves to many scholars. The one translates, "Not in the act of breaking in didst thou find them," i.e., those whom thou hast slain were not detected in crime. Thus Brown-Driver-Briggs, Hebrew Lexicon, s. v. בַּתְּקְבֶּהְ ; so already the Syriac version, the Targum, Hitzig, Graf, et al. The passage is then compared with Exod. 22:1, according to which such killing would be justified. This is not without difficulty, for if the murdered people are innocent, it is rather strange that we should be assured that they were not killed in the act of breaking in. But especially difficult, on this interpretation, is the following clause; בּרַ בְּלֵב בְּלַבְּאֵלֶה; could then only mean "but on account of all these," i.e. the aforementioned evil practices of nature-worship. And one might think of prophets and true Yahweh worshipers who were killed by them because of their protest against the wickedness of the people.

The other interpretation is that of Duhm, which Cornill regards as the most acceptable so far proposed. Duhm takes מחקרת concretely as "burglars," instead of abstractly as "burglary," and translates, "Not with burglars have I found it, but upon all these;" with "these" he points at certain well-known people. The "it" refers to הבי which must be read for □ in the first half of the verse. In this Duhm rightly follows 6 and Giesebrecht. The reference of the whole clause would be to the human sacrifices which were offered in connection with the nature-worship which the people practiced so zealously. The difficulty with this view is that a burglar is not a type for a murderer; for one does not as a rule find blood on burglars, and this would be required here: Not with burglars—where of course everybody expects to find blood—have I found it, but upon all these! Moreover, the difference in the prepositions, 2 with and כל־אַלה with כל־אַלה, is inexplicable. So already Cornill. Nevertheless Duhm is in the main on the right track. That the reference cannot be to judicial murders is quite clear from the following, where the people are confident that Yahweh's wrath shall turn away from them, because they believe themselves guiltless' (vs. 35). It must be connected with the religious practices.

The solution of the difficulties in this verse is in a slight emendation of the text. We should probably read בַּבְּּטִבְּים for . בבהחרה. The translation would be: "Not in hidden places have I found it (the blood), but upon all these." The antithesis is simple and natural. The murders have not been committed in secret, but openly; and the people declare in addition that they have brought no guilt on themselves thereby. Openly they carry the very traces of their crimes, of the sacrifices of children and slaves; they are not ashamed of them or afraid because of them; they think, on the contrary, that they have deserved mercy and forgiveness on account of them. Compare Mic., chap. 6. The people have the brazen forehead of a harlot, and refuse to be ashamed (3:3). A reading of the second and third chapters will show that this is entirely in line with the argument of the prophet. The change is simple and slight and the meaning that we get is exactly what is needed in this verse. It is significant that both Luther and A.V. instinctively felt this. Luther translated "und ist nicht heimlich, sondern offenbar an denselbigen Orten" and A.V. (also R.V. margin), "I have not found it by secret search but upon all these."

5. PSALM 32:2

spirit there is no rebellion"? This would be exactly in line with what he says in the psalm.

There is, however, another argument against the genuineness of the clause, the argument from meter. "This clause adds a defective line to a strophe complete without it" (Briggs). This is held also by Bickell and Duhm. If this argument prevails, it will still be interesting and important to explain how this addition was made. For Professor Briggs himself has pointed out its striking character: "This renunciation of deceit of spirit is a very high ethical ideal, not appearing elsewhere in the Old Testament." In view of this, and of the above-mentioned argument, it seems likely that the explanation of the origin of the reading lies along the line before followed; viz., that the clause originally read, in harmony with the context, "קֹבֶּי, which was mistaken for בְּבֶּיִה.

6. King Jareb in Hosea 5:13, 10:6

Of the many explanations collected most fully by President Harper (Amos and Hosea, pp. 277 f.), the one that has commended itself as the best is the one which regards מכלך ירב as originally being בַּלְבֶּי רֶב "the great king"=Assyr. šarru rabū, "the old nominal ending being retained because the whole expression was thought of as a proper name" (p. 273). It is the king of Assyria according to this proposal who is meant by Hosea. And he is called by one of his titles of honor.

Now it is significant, that this title of honor is given nowhere else in the Old Testament to the king of Assyria by Israelites. In II Kings 18:19, 28 = Is. 36:4, 13 the Assyrian king is called המכך הגדול by an Assyrian officer. This המכך הגדול is the exact Hebrew translation of šarru rabū. If these points are kept in mind, it will be seen that the term מלכי עלכי עמדי was not current among the people in Hosea's time as a designation for the king of Assyria. Did Hosea, then, coin the phrase himself? That would imply that the man who protested with all his might against political alliances with Assyria and Egypt, who opposed most earnestly foreign and especially Assyrian influence, should have come under the influence of Assyrian speech to such an extent that he applies a name of honor to the very king with whom he wants Israel to have nothing to do. What possible reason could he have had, he of all men, to call the king of Assyria by his proud title? Only on one supposition could it be made probable that Hosea used this official name: if he referred to it sarcastically in addressing the princes and nobles, using a phrase which he might have heard at court. But there is no trace of sarcasm in 5:13 and 10:6 in the use of the phrase. In view of the difficulties which beset even this brilliant suggestion I venture to submit a new proposal. In brief it is this: King Jareb is no one else but King Jeroboam, ירב is a simple abbreviation of רבשם. It is under King Jeroboam that Hosea prophesies (Hos. 1:1), and he is mentioned by name in the superscription of Hosea's book. That such abbreviations of names were not uncommon is well known; compare, e.g., Ahaz, whose full name was Jehoahaz, the Assyrians called him Iauhazi; or Coniah, Jechonia, Jehojachin; or, קבועם I Chron. 24:23, where the Vatican text has $Io\kappa o\mu$, or Shalman for Shalmaneser (Hos. 10:14).

The passages read, then, as follows:

5:13 And Ephraim saw his sickness
And Israel¹³ his sore
And Ephraim went to Asshur
And King Jeroboam sent (messengers) to him.

באך ירב is subject of the last clause. For אליר read אָלָיוּ. The parallelism of the lines is perfect.

10:6a Yea, it itself shall be brought to Asshur As a tribute of King Jeroboam.

is not a tribute for King Jareb, but a tribute of King Jareb. I prefer to retain the Hebrew text rather than change it to בְּמָהַתְּה מֵלֹךְ, because it is indetermined. The different use of 'b' in the first half of the line does not speak against taking it as above.—It is probably due to the 5 in 10:6 and to the omission of the suffix with 5% in 5:13 that scholars have always thought a foreign king, Assyrian, Egyptian, or Arabian, was referred to in these passages.

The historical situation under Jeroboam II has led historians to conclude that Assyria must have been responsible to a large extent for Israel's victories over Syria. "Jeroboam's own relations to Assyria," says George Adam Smith," "have not been recorded either by the Bible or by the Assyrian monuments. It is hard to think that he paid no tribute to the 'King of Kings.'" Now, Hos. 5:13; 10:6 explicitly refer to the tribute of Jeroboam. Hos. 5:13 shows that in a time of great distress, when the nation had received a sore "wound," King Jeroboam turned to Assyria for help and "healing." It is highly probable that the Syrian danger is referred to here. Hosea is opposed to these political schemes. There is only one who can help Israel: Yahweh, and Him they have forsaken! Out of His hands no one, not even Assyria, can save them. Hos. 10:6 is not a reference to the past, but an announcement of future happenings. The political situation has not been remedied by seeking Assyrian help, as Hosea had said. Political alliances drain the strength of the nation (7:8). Hosea foresees the time when King Jeroboam will have to send not only the contents of the treasury of the temple at Bethel, but the golden calf as part of the tribute to Assyria. There is a grim sarcasm in the passage, though not in the phrase מלך ירב; the golden bull, whom Hosea ridicules, will be sent as a present to Assyria. He cannot help, he is worth only the price of his gold. And then, the folly of it! It will be all of no avail, for the one who will destroy Israel is Yahweh; cf. 10:2 and 10:6, 8. None can avert the awful catastrophe.

In neither of these passages is Assyria the instrument of Yahweh, or is exile in Assyria contemplated by Hosea.

7. Composition of Hosea, Chap. 2

In an article on "The Story of Hosea's Marriage" in AJSL, January, 1906, pp. 120-30, I tried to prove in regard to chap. 2 ^{14&}quot; The Book of the Twelve Prophets," Expositor's Bible, 1898, Vol. I, p. 46, that certain elements which have been regarded as secondary are in reality a part of Hosea's own story, telling of his determination to do with his adulterous wife as was customary with adulteresses. The following are the verses according to the numbers of the verses in the Hebrew text, which differ from those of the English Versions:

- I. 2:4 $a\beta$ She is not my wife, And I am not her husband,
 - 2:6 And her children I will not pity,
 Because they are children of harlotry,
 - 2:7a For their mother has played the harlot, She that conceived them has done shamefully.
 - 2:12 And now will I uncover her shame Before the eyes of her lovers, And no man shall save her out of my hand.

- II. 2:3 Then said I to Jezreel and Lo-'Ammi and to their sister Lo-Ruḥamah,
 - 2:4* Contend with your mother, contend, that she put away her whoredoms from her face, and her adulteries from between her breasts,
 - 2:5a Lest I strip her naked, and set her as in the day of her birth.

Israel und Judah bei Amos und Hosea nebst einem Exkurs über Hos. 1-8, 1898, pp. 82-44.
 Studien zur israelitischen Religionsgeschichte, 1908, pp. 64-78.

This part belongs to an earlier stage of the story of Hosea than 1. Hosea tries to make his wife leave off from her adulterous practices. But in vain! Then comes the stern resolve of 1. Upon this follows chap. 3. I thought that this was all that we had of Hosea's story, and so I wrote "The story breaks off here. We are not told what Hosea did. But there can be no doubt that he obeyed the divine command." But there is still another part, which Seesemann has correctly recognized: vss. 8, 9. It is again striking and interesting that these verses have been regarded as not original. They are as follows:

III. 2:8 Therefore, behold I will hedge up her way¹º with thorns,
And I will build her a wall that she may not find her paths.
2:9 And when she follows her lovers she shall not overtake them; and when she seeks them she shall not find them.
Then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband, for it was better with me then than now.

Hosea shows us here how he fulfilled Yahweh's command of chap. 3. He will make it impossible for his wife to have further intercourse with her lovers. He seems to have put her away from his home. He does not supply her with means of living and makes it impossible for her to gain a living by harlotry. A period of suffering results which is intended as moral discipline for her, the result of which is to be her willing return to her husband.

With this Hosea-story there is now woven together the Israelstory, which tells of Israel and her husband Yahweh. It is interesting to see how closely connected the verses belonging to the Israel-story are, now that they are disentangled from the Hosea-story. The beginning is fragmentary.

THE ORIGIN OF SOME CUNEIFORM SIGNS

GEORGE A. BARTON

Professor Friedrich Delitzsch, to whose industry and scholarship Assyriology owes so much, was the first to attempt a systematic explanation of the origin of all the cuneiform signs. Up to the publication of his Entstehung des altesten Schriftsystems, oder der Ursprung der Keilschriftzeichen, Leipzig, 1897, it had been taken for granted that the cuneiform signs originated in hieroglyphic pictures, although for a large part of them no one had been able to suggest a hieroglyphic form. In reality the origin of about two hundred of them remained unexplained. Delitzsch, in the work mentioned, proposed a new theory of the While admitting that certain signs origin of many of these. originated in pictures, and that others were formed by combinations of pictures, or by doubling and tripling original pictures, he set forth the fact that the Babylonian scribes themselves recognized certain signs as gunus of simpler signs, i. e., as Delitzsch holds, they were made from the simpler signs by adding three or more wedges, sometimes in one position, sometimes In meaning these gunued signs expressed, in in another. Delitzsch's opinion, a "heightening" or "potentializing" of the meaning of the simple signs. From this Delitzsch went a step farther, and inferred that besides this potentializing motif the Babylonian scribes employed many other motifs, each one of which expressed some abstract idea, and that our present syllabary is largely composed of signs artificially formed by combinations of these motifs.

This theory of Delitzsch, although Hommel protested against it at the Oriental Congress in Paris in 1897, has been pretty generally regarded with favor by Assyriologists. Among American scholars Professor Kent' has approved and amplified it, and Professor Prince' accepts its explanations for most of the signs.

Professor Friedrich Delitzsch, to whose industry and scholarship Assyriology owes so much, was the first to attempt a systematic explanation of the origin of all the cuneiform signs. Up to the publication of his Entstehung des altesten Schriftsystems, oder der Ursprung der Keilschriftzeichen, Leipzig, 1897, it had been taken for granted that the cuneiform signs originated in hieroglyphic pictures, although for a large part of them no one had been able to suggest a hieroglyphic form. In reality the origin of about two hundred of them remained unexplained. Delitzsch, in the work mentioned, proposed a new theory of the origin of many of these. While admitting that certain signs originated in pictures, and that others were formed by combinations of pictures, or by doubling and tripling original pictures, he set forth the fact that the Babylonian scribes themselves recognized certain signs as gunus of simpler signs, i. e., as Delitzsch holds, they were made from the simpler signs by adding three or more wedges, sometimes in one position, sometimes In meaning these gunued signs expressed, in in another. Delitzsch's opinion, a "heightening" or "potentializing" of the meaning of the simple signs. From this Delitzsch went a step farther, and inferred that besides this potentializing motif the Babylonian scribes employed many other motifs, each one of which expressed some abstract idea, and that our present syllabary is largely composed of signs artificially formed by combinations of these motifs.

This theory of Delitzsch, although Hommel protested against it at the Oriental Congress in Paris in 1897, has been pretty generally regarded with favor by Assyriologists. Among American scholars Professor Kent¹ has approved and amplified it, and Professor Prince² accepts its explanations for most of the signs.

² Materials for a Sumerian Lexicon, passim.

The authority of Delitzsch's great name and the fact that the theory gave us a semblance of knowledge where before we had only ignorance, led the present writer at first to regard the work of Delitzsch with favor. As my Semitic Seminary was devoted in the year 1901-2 to Old Babylonian inscriptions, I was led to study the whole subject anew, and became convinced that Delitzsch's theory is too abstract to fit the primitive conditions in which the cuneiform signs originated. The discovery was then made that in early times the picture of an object was often made in different ways according to the pleasure of the writer, that in later times there was a struggle for survival between these variant forms, and that what the later scribes regarded as gunus of a simple sign is in most cases simply the survival of a variant picture of that simple sign. Miss Ellen Seton Ogden, who was a member of the Semitic Seminary in that year, deserves in part the credit of making this discovery with me, and is now at work upon a dissertation in which she will prove that any account of the origin of cuneiform writing based upon the gunu theory of the Babylonian scribes is necessarily as little like the real origin of them as a history of Israel based upon the P document would be like the real history of that people. Any sound method of investigation must first take into account the earliest known forms; secondly, it must take into account all the simple ideographic meanings, not simply a few of the most common, as Delitzsch has done; and thirdly, it must follow the psychological principle that the picture originally represented some objective thing, and be able to show how the various meanings came, by psychological processes, to be attached to the picture in question. In applying these principles one will naturally be compelled to make allowances in many cases for a mixture of the meanings of two signs. Such mixture has arisen, first, from a similarity of the forms of two signs, and, secondly, from similarity in the sounds of the names of the objects which the primitive signs represented. These would seem to be the sound principles on which to investigate this subject, though in so complicated a problem these will not always enable us to arrive at certain results.

See the writer's Semitic Origins, 161. 4 Cf. JAOS, XXIII, 28, n. 17.

The writer hopes to publish within a few months an investigation of the whole cuneiform syllabary based upon these principles. In the present article he takes the opportunity of presenting in advance a few of the results in a form different from that which in the larger work the complicated nature of the material will render necessary.

Egyptologists are accustomed to arrange the Egyptian hieroglyphs under such headings as "figures of men," "figures of women," "members of the human body," "quadrupeds," "parts of quadrupeds," "implements," etc. We can now begin to do the same for Babylonia, though our lists under each heading are as yet much briefer than the Egyptian lists. In the following pages but a few of the writer's results are presented, and those presented are selected almost at random. An effort has been made to illustrate the possibility of introducing into the cuneiform syllabary the same classification which Egyptologists use in arranging the hieroglyphs. Thus in the following table under A are grouped human forms; under B, parts of the human body; under C, animal forms; under D, parts of animals; E, birds; F, fishes; G, trees and plants; H, water and canals; I, houses and their parts; J, implements and vessels; K, articles of apparel; L, fire. Had space permitted, the examples under several of these heads might have been made more numerous, and several additional classes might have been added. In the first part of the table a tolerably complete genealogy of the later forms is in each case given, but from class G, No. 2, onward, only a few of the forms of each sign are presented. This compression for the sake of economizing space does not seriously affect the illustrative examples. No effort has been made to follow the archaic revival of old forms which may be seen in many of the records of Assyrian Neo-Babylonian kings. That is sufficiently done in Amiaud and Méchineau's Tableau Comparé. The principles on which this work is done must in the present article be presented by illustration rather than by full demonstration.

The sign in A, 1 has long been correctly recognized as the picture of a man. A, 2, Delitzsch regards as the picture of a man, plus the motif for 'great,' but Rylands made a suggestion, which is quoted and approved by Houghton, that it is the picture of a man surmounted by a crown or umbrella. This suggestion is, I believe, on the right track. Primitive Babylonian sheiks or kings, like many others, wore a magnificent headdress, out of which the crowns of later time were developed, and this motif for 'great' is nothing but a rude representation of this primitive headdress. In considering A, 3, the ideographic meanings do not aid us, as the one meaning given (Kakasiga, Sb, IV, 27) has not yet been successfully translated; but the form suggests that the original was the picture of a man standing with one arm bent and the hand resting on the hip. A, 4 of the table is a difficult sign, as among its ideographic meanings there are none which designate objective concrete things. The meanings are: 'seize,' 'go out,' 'be high,' 'be full,' 'flaming' or 'brilliant,' 'lift up,' 'lifting up' (of the hands in prayer), 'pardon,' 'be high,' 'be heavy,' 'to honor.' The earliest form of the sign which we have is considerably removed from a pictograph, but is still sufficiently close to suggest that its original was the picture of a king wearing his primitive headdress, standing with one hand resting on his hip and the other outstretched.

B, 1 represented the legs of a man (cf. the Egyptian Λ , Erman, Aeg. Grammatik, 2d ed., p. 208, No. 96). These strong legs were apparently in accordance with Semitic ideas used to denote strength. (Cf. "He delighteth not in the strength of the horse, he taketh no pleasure in the legs of a man," Ps. 147:10.) By natural psychological processes it then came to signify 'deeds,' 'fight,' 'wrath,' 'anger,' and 'rise against.' B, 2, as Delitzsch has recognized, represents the buttocks, and so naturally came to stand for 'later,' 'after,' 'future.' B, 3, 4, and 5 form an interesting series. B, 3 is a head; B, 4 the same with two lines which represent the lips, while the analogy of the development of these two, as shown by a comparison of their genealogies, makes it clear that B, 5 represented a head to the face of which a beard was attached. This apparently suggested a full-grown man, hence we have the meanings 'strength,' 'be strong,' 'protection.' These naturally suggest the opposite, 'fear,' which became also one of the meanings. It would also stand for an old man, hence it signifies 'be old,' 'rest.' It also represents two deities, Salulu and Salmu. Was it because these gods were pictured with beards? Delitzsch¹¹ makes much of the fact that the Assyrian scribes (S², II, 42) call this sign a gunu of B, 1. That was natural in later times when the old pictorial form was lost, but research now makes it clear that originally the sign was born not because an abstract potentializing motif was attached to a picture of a head, but because it pictured a head with a beard. B, 6 was evidently originally a rude outline of a head and neck. Its position is the reverse of B, Perhaps this was to emphasize the idea of the neck. This picture expresses directly the meanings 'neck,' 'head,' and 'man.' Through the meaning 'head' the meanings 'front,' 'totality,' etc., might attach themselves to the sign. Through the meaning 'man,' that of 'brother,' 'side,' etc., came to be expressed by it. Through 'front,' it might come to signify 'fight,' though this meaning may have been suggested by the severed head. How it came to mean 'house,' 'door,' 'beam,' 'peg,' and 'land,' it is difficult to tell, unless there was a mixture with pictures of houses (I, 3, 4, or 5). B, 7, explained by Delitzsch 12 as gunu, is probably, as comparison with B, 6 shows, a neck and head surmounted by some sort of headdress or burden. Its one meaning is 'tribute.' Whether it pictured tribute brought on the head, as portrayed on the black obelisk of Shalmaneser, or whether the severed head itself, often bound with a costly turban, was tribute or booty, it is difficult to say. Perhaps this and the preceding sign were pictured reversed to indicate that the head was severed from the body, in which case the head itself would be the 'tribute.' B. 8 is evidently the left shoulder, arm, and hand. Its one ideographic meaning is 'left.' B, 9, 10, 12, and 13 have long been recognized as of phallic origin,18 but B, 11 has not before been satisfactorily explained. Delitzsch (op. cit., 177 ff.), explains it as compounded of a motif for direction plus a motif which he cannot explain. The earliest form of the sign bears a striking resemblance to a clay phallus found at Ashur and pictured in the Mittheilungen der deutsch. Orients-Gesellschaft, No. 22 (June, 1904), p. 26, and I have no doubt represented an ithyphallus. Such a picture would naturally express 'unto,' 'in,' 'in the midst of,' 'out from,' 'with,' 'desire,' etc. B, 14 has also long been recognized" as a foot, though until a few years since no such perfect picture had been found as that in an inscription published by Scheil (Délégation en Perse, II, 130).

Class C represents animals. No. 1 was probably the picture of a donkey, as in proto-Elamitic, or a donkey's head and neck, as apparently in the Hoffman tablet. Delitzsch's explanation (op. cit., 149), seems unnatural in comparison. The meanings 'ass' and 'horse' confirm this origin. C, 2 was evidently the picture of a pig. This the one ideographic meaning, 'swine,' confirms.

In Class D, No. 1 is the picture of the tuft of the tail of some animal, as a cow or lion. Our form comes from the time of Sargon, however, and what the first perpendicular sign represents it is impossible to tell. As an ideogram it means 'tail,' 'part of an animal or human body,' and possibly 'fly'-meanings easily suggested by the picture. D, 2 represents a dressed animal hung up by the hind legs and cut open in front, such as may be seen both in the East and West where meat is dressed upon farms. It means 'flesh.' D, 3, 4, and 5 represent teats. Possibly D 5 is that of a human breast. This origin most satisfactorily accounts for all their meanings. This origin proposed for D 3 and 5 is not new,16 but so far as I know D 4 has not been so explained; but the forms and the meanings ('fat,' 'oil,' 'bright,' 'full,' 'satisfied,' etc.) combine to prove this. D, 6 and 7 are pictures of the head of an ox, differing only in that one represents the eyes and the other does not.

Class E contains pictures of birds. Nos. 1 and 2 are too clear

¹⁴ See Oppert, EM, II, 108, and Delitzsch, UKZ, 16, 28.

to need comment.¹⁶ No. 3 is a bird and an egg. This had apparently never been suspected until the researches of Thureau-Dangin brought to light the pictorial form. This form satisfactorily accounts for the ideographic meanings, 'to bear,' 'a son which is borne,' 'some sexual organ' (possibly 'clitoris'), 'kin' or 'family,' 'womb' or 'inclosure.' By a natural psychological process, 'impetuous,' 'strong,' and 'to fear' became attached to it also. E, 4, which means 'raven' and 'bird,' is shown by analogy with the developed forms of E, 1, as well as by the meanings, to have been originally the picture of a bird also. E, 5 has long been a puzzle. Its meanings: 'young offspring,' 'young ox,' (or 'child'), 'cattle,' 'kid,' 'gazelle,' are all derivable from a single idea. Delitzsch (op. cit., 160) holds that it is compounded of , 'gazelle,' plus , 'crowd.' When, however, we compare this sign with the egg in E, 3, and with the way in which the bird forms (E, 1, 2, and 3) developed in Babylonian writing, it becomes clear that this sign was the picture of a young bird in process of being hatched from an egg. This view, when natural psychological association is taken into consideration, would account for all the meanings. It stood for young bird and then was used to signify other young animals.

Class F includes pictures of fishes. F, 1 is evidently the diagram of a fish. This would account for the meanings: 'fish,' 'to peel' (on account of preparing a fish for eating), 'the god Ea,' because he was represented in the form of a fish; then from the greatness of Ea it came to stand for 'prince,' 'great,' and 'very much.' F, 2 and 3 have long been recognized as fishes, though Delitzsch (op. cit., 63 ff.) follows the Babylonian scribes in regarding No. 3 as a gunu of No. 2. The meanings 'monster,' 'broad,' 'fat,' are equally explained on the supposition that the picture represented a larger fish with a dorsal fin.

¹⁶ On E, 1 see Hommel, Sum. Lex., No. 67; Hilprecht, OBI, Pt. II, 26, n. 4; Ball, PSBA, XIII, 378 and XX, 16 ff.; also Barton, JAOS, XXII, 121. On E, 2 cf. Oppert, EM, II, 108, and Houghton, TSBA, VI, 464.

¹⁷ Sayee, quoted by Houghton, TSBA. VI, 470, explained it as a scepter which a prince carried; Jensen. Kosmologie, 343, regards it as originally a weapon; while Delitssch, UKZ, 161 ff., compounds it of ______, 'man,' plus the gunu signs.

¹⁸ See Barton, Semitic Origins, pp. 91 and 196.

¹⁹ See Oppert, EM, II, p. 108, and Delitssch, UKZ, 70 ff.

In Class G we have placed trees and plants. G, 1 (unless the sign has been written the other end up from the usual method) is a potted plant. If reversed, it may be the picture of a pine Its chief meanings are 'garden' and 'cypress' or or cypress. 'pine.' G, 2 represents two plants growing in a pot. Its two clear meanings are 'plant' and 'garment.' The latter meaning was probably attached to the sign through the use of flax as material for clothing. G, 3 Delitzsch has rightly said is a plant or tree growing in (or by) water. G, 4 and 6 are reeds; G, 5 two trees growing. All the meanings of these signs have grown out of ideas suggested by these pictures. G, 7, as has long been recognized, represents two heads of grain.22 G, 8, representing a palm tree, in early times was expressed through variant pictures. The picture which survived, as Professor Hommel suggested to me in a private letter after reading Semitic Origins, pp. 105 ff., was the picture of a palm tree growing in the midst of irrigating ditches, the tops of which were blowing in the wind as shown in the following sketch:"

K

Under H are grouped water and canals. H, 1, the wavy lines for water, resembles both the early Chinese²⁴ (\simeq) and the Egyptian²⁶ (\simeq) characters. A common psychological impulse underlies the mode of expression in these widely different centers of evolution. H, 2 represents the little irrigating ditches by which gardens are irrigated. One sees them everywhere in the East.²⁶ H, 3 is not so certain. Hommel has suggested (see Delitzsch, Nachwort, p. 19) that it is the picture of a leathern bottle, and so suggested 'desert.' It seems to me more probable that it is a rude outline of the lower Mesopotamian valley with its two great rivers and (in early times) occasional sections of irrigated and so fertile land. That would account for the meanings 'plain,' 'lands,' etc. By an extension of the latter meaning it came to signify 'desert,' 'elevated country,' and then 'back.'

²⁰ Op. cit., p. 181 ff.

²² Cf. Houghton, TSBA, VI, 475; Ball, PSBA, XX, 19; and Delitssch, UKZ, 125 ff. Ball and Delitssch are not so specific as Houghton.

Class I includes houses and their parts. I, 1 is probably lattice-work to suggest a reed house. I, 3, 4, and 5 are perhaps reed houses built on stilts. One of them represents the river in overflow, as the fish in the lower story shows. Possibly Nos. 3 and 4 were intended to represent the common reed hut of the country with a band about it to hold it together. I, 2 is clearly a picture of an oriental door. One sees them in many places closely resembling this, with a door socket at the bottom, the revolving post standing in it, and the door considerably raised above the threshold.

Class J includes implements. Nos. 1, 2, and 3 are clearly Hilprecht (OBI, Pt. II, p. 35) is much more nearly right than Delitzsch as to the origin of J, 2. J, 4, 5, 6, and 7 are different forms of nets. J, 4 was shaped somewhat like a modern insect net and is represented as held by the two hands. This view is confirmed by the meanings. The concrete meanings are a 'net' and 'pit'(?). These are just the objective meanings from which the others can be psychologically derived or suggested, e.g., 'throw down, 'remove,' 'to storm,' 'to take,' 'to spoil,' etc. By variation and extension of these the sign was used to express 'to bring,' 'to think,' 'to protect,' 'to love,' and the 'goddess Ishtar.' The last meaning was probably attached to it because the goddess ensnared men; then 'to love' was associated with it because of the goddess. J, 5 and 7 Delitzsch correctly recognized as nets, though as the oldest form of J, 6 had not come to light when Delitzsch wrote he went astray in explaining that sign.* It is in reality a net reversed, and as J, 5 naturally expresses 'overthrow,' 'curse,' 'cord,' 'rope,' 'sinew,' so No. 6, 'a snare rendered impotent,' suggested by the fact that it was a snare, 'fear,' 'be afraid;' then, from its position 'to wash' and 'anoint,' washing and anointing having such a prominent part to play in removing spells; then, as a special extension of this line of meanings it denoted a class of priests who attended to such matters.

The group J, 8-J, 14 consists of pictures derived from various forms of pottery.³¹ J, 8 is a clay bowl for measuring, having a round bottom such that it could be easily held in the hand." J, 9 is probably a jar with a pointed bottom, such as one often sees in the East, though the meanings in this case are too uncertain to help in identifying the picture. J, 10 is shown by analogy with the other signs derived from pictures of jars to be derived from the representation of such an object. Here as in other cases the jar is made to stand for some special thing that a jar could contain. Possibly they had a special type of jar for honey. At all events this ideogram was ultimately limited, as appears from our present information, to 'honey' and 'good.' J, 11 is a common drinkingjug, similar to those one sees often in the East, set on a rude stool, such as may be found today. It signified 'a vessel,' then, 'abundance,' then, possibly because of its pressure on the base, it expressed 'oppression,' and 'distress.' J, 12 and 13 are variant pictures of the same kind of drinking-jar as that pictured in No. 11, though without the stool or base. The only real difference is that one has a line of ornamentation on the side and the other In usage the ornamented one was used to suggest 'strong drink,' then, by a natural process of association, 'speak,' and 'approach,' while the plain one signified simply 'vessel' or 'pot.' J, 14 was a jar of a different form. The one or two lines of ornamentation on it were transformed by the later scribes into the sign for water. This fact indicates that we should be cautious in assuming, except in the presence of very early epigraphic evidence, that a sign is composed by putting together two others.

³¹ See de Morgan's pottery series of proto-Elamite signs, in Recueil de travaux, XXVII, 237 ff.

³² First identified by Barton, JAOS, XXIII, 24.

 $^{^{22}}$ In JAOS, XXIII, 24 I made a tentative guess at the original of this—a bee entering a hive—which I now abandon.

²⁴ One ought, perhaps, to compare such bases for holding jars as are pictured in Bensinger's Heb. Archaeologie, pp. 252 ff.

³⁵ Delitzsch, UKZ, 168 ff., makes this inference.

J, 15 is the picture of a covered and probably a steaming pot. It therefore represented 'rejoicing,' 'exulting,' 'bursting forth,' and probably on account of its heat, the opposite idea of 'be afraid' (galadu).

Under K, I have classed signs which I regard as originally representations of articles of clothing, although I am aware that my opinion in the case of one of them rests on uncertain evidence. K, 1 I regard as a picture of some article of clothing of a priest, and K, 2 the headdress of a sheik or king. It is true that the oldest forms of K, 1 known to us do not resemble anything closely enough to be certainly identified. It seems clear, however, that two different pictures have been blended in the sign." In order to form an opinion as to the origin, we must call in the assistance They are 'a cistern'(?) or 'precious stone' of the meanings. (alallu), 'road' or 'progress' (alaktu), 'to make sweet,' 'man' or 'lord,' 'wool,' an 'offering,' 'gift' or 'almoner,' 'a seal,' 'to count,' 'number,' 'a kind of tree,' 'god Marduk,' 'to cut off,' 'an officer,' 'a jar,' 'a signet,' and 'a priest.' Such a list appears at first to be a hopeless mixture. As Thureau-Dangin has noted, however, the meanings, 'water-holder' and 'jar'" have been attached to this sign through a mixture with J, 14. Of the other meanings, 'wool' is an objective and primitive one, and I suspect that the picture represented some priestly breastplate or headdress, made of that material, that the sign came to stand accordingly for 'priest,' and that the other meanings were gradually associated with the sign in consequence of the duties of a priest. Of course, however, the discovery of an earlier text may show that this view is mistaken.36

K, 2 has already been treated above under A, 2. I believe it was the headdress of a sheik or a king, and for that reason came to be the symbol for 'great.' Its occurrence in one text separated from the head of the king," when one considers the freedom of treatment which the ancient scribes allowed themselves, does not disprove that view.

L, 1 is a primitive bowl into which two tinder sticks are inserted to ignite them by friction. It stood accordingly for 'fire,' 'smith,' etc. L, 2, meaning 'brightness,' 'new,' 'shining,' was a representation of a torch. 'Pour out' is a meaning attached to it by psychological association.

JUDGMENT UPON MOAB AND AMMON, 2:8-11

- I 8 I have heard the reproach of Moab and the revilings of the sons of Ammon With which they reproach my people, and magnify themselves against my border.
- II 9 Therefore, as I live, oracle of Yahweh of Hosts, God of Israel, Surely Moab shall become like Sodom, and the sons of Ammon like Gomorrah;
- III A possession (?) of nettles and a place sown with salt, yea, a desolation forever;

 The remnant of my people shall plunder them, and the remainder of my nation shall inherit them.
 - 10 This shall they have for their pride, because they have reproached and magnified themselves against the people of Yahweh of Hosts.
 - 11 Yahweh will be terrible unto them for he will scatter all the gods of the earth and all the lands of the nations shall worship him each from his sanctuary.
- v 12 Ye Ethiopians also shall be slain by my sword;
 And I will turn my hand toward the north and destroy Assyria;
- vi And I will make Nineveh a desolation, parched as the wilderness.
 - 14 And all gregarious animals will lie down in her midst in flocks.
- VII Both the pelican and the porcupine shall lodge in the capitals thereof,
 - Owls shall hoot in the windows, ravens on the thresholds.*

AN OMEN SCHOOL TEXT

MORRIS JASTROW, JR.

The better knowledge that we now have of the remarkable collection made by King Ašurbanapal (668-626 B. C.) in his royal palace at Nineveh, thanks largely to Bezold's monumental work,1 has brought out the significant fact that a considerable proportion of the specifically Babylonian section consists of texts that formed part of the equipment of the temple schools of Babylonia and more particularly of the school attached to Marduk's temple in This applies not merely to the distinctively school texts, such as sign lists, syllabaries, word lists, grammatical and lexicographical exercises, but also to the literary productions and practice tablets based on such productions; to the ritual texts which served as a means of instructing the young aspirants to the priesthood in the complicated ritual* for the various occasions when the services of the priests were required, and to the collections of omens of all kinds—constituting one of the largest sections in the royal library. Such texts, while they may also be regarded as guides and reference works for full-fledged priests in the interpretation of omens observed, appear to have been prepared primarily for the purposes of the temple schools.' The same is true of the mathematical and metrological tablets, and it is probably an accident that among the fragments of the Nineveh collection this section is not more largely represented. One is inclined to place in the category of school texts also the bilingual literary texts in Ašurbanapal's library, such as the numerous prayers and myths, hymns and incantations, including both those in which the Sumerian represents the original, and those in which the Sumerian is a translation from the Semitic original. In the former case,

*E. g., IV R. 37, and Besold, loc. cit., Index, p. 2111. Specimens of Babylonian originals of mathematical calculations also in CT, IX, 8-13 and 14-15. See Weber, loc. cit., p. 299. See, however, Pinches, JRAS, 1907, p. 707, from which it would appear that the British Museum has among its unpublished treasures more tablets of this class. At Sippar, Scheil found quite a number of such metrological and mathematical tablets (Une suison de fouilles à Sippar, Cairo, 1908) which are treated by him in chap. iii of his work under the proper designation of "L'École à Sippar" (pp. 30-54). At Nippur, Peters and Haynes found exactly the same kind of mathematical and metrological tablets, only in larger numbers, so that our knowledge of this subdivision of the Babylonian school texts is considerably increased through the recent publication of forty-six tablets and fragments by Hilprecht. The title of the publication, however, Mathematical, Metrological and Chronological Tablets from the Temple Library of Nippur (Philadelphia, 1906) is a misnomer. A glance at the texts in this volume suffices to show that all except the last—a chronological list that may have formed part of a private archive or of a temple business archive—are school texts pure and simple. Three of them, for example, contain on the one side syllabaries (Nos. 23, 24, 37) and on the other multiplication tables and measures of capacity — the certain ear-marks of school exercises. Again, on one (No. 20) the exercise is written in one column by the teacher and in a second repeated by the pupil. Mixed and repeated exercises appear on some (e.g., Nos. 20, 21, rev.), while practice strokes are to be seen on others (e. g., Nos. 10, 32, 40). Hilprecht is obliged to admit (p. x) that these are "textbooks," but converts them into "temple library" texts by the assertion that they were "afterwards deposited in the Temple Library"! When "afterwards"? Apart from the fact that there is not a particle of evidence for this gratuitous supposition, it assumes the existence of a sufficient number of distinctively "literary" texts to warrant us in speaking of a "temple library." Since, however, the evidence for this assumption hitherto presented turns out to be elusive — being based on tablets that were not excavated at Nippur, and such objects as were not found on the site of the supposed "temple library"—an earnest protest must be entered against the unwarranted use of the words "temple library" in the title of the volume in question which is calculated only to make scholars more determined in their uncompromising attitude toward methods that involve, as has recently been said, "a disregard of the simplest ethical standards." Before scholars can be convinced that the temple at Nippur harbored a great library collection comparable to that which Asurbanapal gathered in his palace—not in a temple - unimpeachable evidence must be furnished for the existence of a sufficient number of hymns, prayers, incantations, omens, and myths, as well as medical and astronomical texts and such as are not school texts—to justify the use of so well-defined a term as "library." If, however, after waiting patiently for more than seven years nothing but school texts and administrative archives, valuable though these are, are laid before us, the question must perforce be raised whether the temple at Nippur ever possessed extensive literary treasures. As a working hypothesis we are forced to assume that the temple archives in Babylonia were limited as a rule to collections of business records and to school texts of a miscellaneous character, among which we should of course expect to find the ritual texts used in connection with the cult-not, however, a large collection gathered as was Aiurbanapal's library from a variety of sources. See - in addition to the writer's paper "Did the Babylonian Temple have Libraries?"—Besold's remarks in the Literarisches Centralbl., 1907, p. 483, for additional reasons against regarding the tablets found by Peters and Haynes at Nippur as a "temple library" and also Ungnad's strictures on the term "Temple Library" in the Zeits. d. Deutsch. morg. Gesell., Vol. 61, pp. 705-06.

the Semitic translation is added to initiate the pupil into an understanding of the older sacred tongue; in the latter, the Semitic original is added to insure the correct understanding of the Sumerian translation. The medical texts of which specimens have recently been published by Küchler may also have been prepared for purposes of instruction in prescribing the remedies to be applied in connection with the incantation rites for releasing sufferers from the grasp of the demons who were regarded as the ultimate source of physical suffering, though, at the same time, these texts no doubt served, like the collections of omens, as guides for those who, as priests in active service, were called upon to administer to the sick. Further investigation of this class of texts will probably show that we must distinguish between medical handbooks and medical school texts based on these handbooks, just as in the case of omens, we have, as will be shown presently, "official" as well as "school" editions of the collections of omens compiled by bara-priests.

The school texts in the royal library at Nineveh, reverting to originals that once formed part of the equipment of the schools attached to the temples in the south,10 thus assume large dimensions. They throw an interesting light on the pedagogical methods pursued in Babylonia, which no doubt were closely followed in Assyria, and we must be prepared to find all manner of helps that were devised to facilitate the understanding of the various branches of the religious literature of Babylonia—and that literature is largely, if not almost exclusively, religious—by means of which the temple pupils were enabled to penetrate into the intricacies of the cult, and into the very essence of the lore which was an outcome of the religious beliefs and tendencies prevailing in the Euphrates valley. Already, we may distinguish a considerable variety of such helps among the textbook division of Ašurbanapal's library. The grammatical and phrase exercises appear to have been prepared chiefly for training pupils in draw-

¹⁰ A proof of the continued existence of these schools at Borsippa, Babylon, and Sippar to very late days is furnished by syllabaries and lexicographical lists dated in the reigns of Persian kings (e.g., CT, XII, 3, 7, 9, 17, 37) and by such a collection as Reisner's Sumerisch-babylonische Hymnen aus griechischer Zeit. ing up business and legal documents." The list of gods and stars were drawn, presumably, as helps for the study of astronomy in connection with omen-texts; the elaborate lists of names of plants have been prepared in connection with the study of incantations and medical remedies, and so forth, for other branches of study. For the elucidation of literary texts, we have, besides the bilinguals,12 commentaries arranged on the principle of picking out difficult terms and phrases and explaining them by such as were in more common use.14 In the case of the commentaries to the story of creation, King has found no less than three differ-Again, at times glosses were merely introduced into the texts themselves.16 All this warrants the conclusion that the helps varied according to the class of texts selected for study. Correspondingly, for each class certain kinds of helps were developed that were best adapted for the character of the class and for the purpose or purposes aimed at.

The interpretation of omens constituting one of the most important functions of the priests, it is not surprising that a variety of devices were developed, which were calculated to illustrate both the method followed in the interpretation of omens and the two fundamental theses underlying the science of divination, namely (1) that occurrences on earth were paralleled by accompanying phenomena in the heavens, leading to omens based on the observation of the sun, moon, planets, and stars, and (2) that through the liver of the sacrificial animal—usually a sheep—as the seat of the soul—and therefore as the divine organ—coming events could be divined, leading to an elaborate system of hepatoscopy."

¹⁷ For details the reader is referred to the writer's Religion Babyloniens and Assyriens (referred to in this article as Jastrow, Religion), chap. xx (Lieferingen 10, 11, and 12). I szelude the large class of "signs and portents" (birth-portents, dreams, all kinds of unusual occurrences, accidents, and so forth) which should be differentiated from "omens" proper.

Confining ourselves to the second class of omens, attention has already been drawn to glosses in the text which show distinctly that they were drawn up primarily for instruction and elucidation in the temple schools. A second device was the use of illustrations of parts of the liver introduced in the texts, or of phenomena on the liver. Of these quite a number are known and of special significance is the clay model of a sheep's liver (CT, VI, 1) showing the chief parts of the liver and covered with omens designed to illustrate the system followed in the interpretation. A third species of helps is represented by an interesting text that might be designated as an "Introduction to the study of the principles of Hepatoscopy," since its main purpose is to illustrate the connection between the signs observed on the liver of a sacrificial animal and the interpretation assigned to it.

The general character of this text as a help in the elucidation of the methods followed in the interpretation of omens was recognized many years ago by Delitzsch, though it was not possible for him, because of the imperfect state of our knowledge of this branch of the Babylonian-Assyrian literature, to determine at the time what is now clear, that the omens referred to are specifically such as are derived from the inspection of the liver of the sacrificial animal. Moreover, Delitzsch had at his disposal merely a fragment of the text and he was naturally misled into regarding Cols. I and II as containing synonyms. It was equally natural that he was followed in this view by Muss-Arnolt who in his invaluable Assyrian Dictionary (1905) enters the words of these two columns, as Delitzsch did in his Assyrisches Handwörterbuch (1896), as synonyms. A duplicate fragment of the text was published in 1594 by Boissier²² but it was not until 1904 that by a combination of six fragments representing at least three independent copies, a more complete edition of this important text was issued through which it was possible to determine definitely its more precise character.²²

Unfortunately, the text is still far from complete. It consisted originally of six columns, three on the obverse, and three on the reverse: those on the obverse consisting of some forty lines each and those on the reverse of thirty-two lines each, so that in its complete form the tablet covered at least two hundred and twenty lines, and probably close to two hundred and fifty lines. According to the colophon attached to one of the fragments, the tablet is the first of a series known as summa multabiltum. We are fortunate in possessing a list of the opening lines of the seventeen tablets of which the series consisted and which show that the entire series was devoted to hepatoscopy. Parts of the second, third, fourth, twelfth, and thirteenth tablets of this series have also been published by Mr. R. C. Thompson, and from these it follows that Besold's supposition (Cufaloyse, p. 437) that K. 2263 may form part of the tablet in question to which K. 2255 belongs can now be corrected, since it turns out that the tablet belongs to another series. A fragment of a neo-Babylonian duplicate (K. 4432) is also included in CT.

28 The line probably to be completed according to K. 3837 (Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 45. 1° of which K.E. 2434, 7828, and 8239 are duplicates (cf. also K. 4613) and K.K. 1999 (Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 118) as follows: 8 um ma mult a bilt um ungurati nibé unit bil a na pâni-ka, i.e., "when the designs of the clubs and the edges; ?) are brought to thee." From other sources we know that the markings on the liver were drawn on a tablet and brought to the bârû or 'diviner' for interpretation. In order to account for the discrepancy between the name of the series and the fact that the first line of the first tablet does not, as is customary, begin with these words (cf. CT, XX, 1, 15) we must assume that the list of seventeen tablets indicated on K. 1332 (CT, XX, 1, 15-32) represents not the text itself, but the commentary to it drawn up for school purposes, or, as we might also put it, the "school edition" of the text, which, in accordance with the purpose served by it, does not follow the plan of the text and presumably does not furnish the whole of it. The existence of two distinct editions of the series is also shown by the other fragments belonging to the series. See the following note.

²⁷ KK. 3945 and 3951 (CT, XX, 43-48) forming Tablets 2 and 3 of the series. The colophon at the bottom of the of Pl. 48 states that this is the end of the third tablet of the series mult abilt um and furnishes the opening line of the fourth tablet in agreement with CT, XX, 1, 18. The third tablet is therefore included and it is clear from a comparison of Pl. 45, 21 and 46, rev. 5 with CT, XX, 1, 17 that the school edition of the second tablet ends with Pl. 45, 20. According to Bezold (Catalogue, p. 579) K. 3951 is a duplicate of K. 3945 and K. 3966 belongs to K. 3945. Portions of the second and third tablets are also represented by KK. 10681, 10960. 11713, and 12315, and 82, 3-23, 5215 which together with K. 6297 have been "joined" to K. 3945 (Bezold, loc. cit.; Vol. IV, p. viii). K. 10805 (CT, XX, 50) appears to furnish the colophon also the series covered a wide range, extending, indeed, to every part of the liver which had a significance in divination, and furnishing the interpretation for an almost endless number of variations observed in the character of the different parts and of their relation to one another, as well as of the markings and other signs noted on the liver surface.²⁸

Confining ourselves to the school edition of the first tablet of the series, mention should be made of an attempted translation of the text by Dr. Stephen H. Langdon²⁰ which, however, because of the author's failure to recognize the fundamental principle underlying divination through the sacrificial animal, namely, that the one organ on which the attention of the diviner was concentrated was the liver, was not successful. Since the correct interpretation and understanding of the text rest upon this thesis, Langdon's rendering is erroneous throughout and it is needless, therefore, to stop at every point and to indicate wherein the translation here given differs from that of Langdon. Credit is due to Langdon, however, for having correctly determined that Cols. I and II of the text are not synonymous.²⁰ He has also seen that the words in Col. I furnish what he calls the "salient feature" of the "condifor the third tablet of the series and would thus represent another copy. The tenth tablet is represented by K. 3963 published in CT, XX, 49, the opening line of which is to be completed according to CT, XX, 1, 25 and it is to be noted that K. 5151 (CT, XX, 7) also represents the beginning of this tablet. While both copies are unfortunately badly preserved, it seems quite clear that the two texts are not duplicates and the question again arises whether the one (K. 5151) may not represent a portion of the "official" edition and the other belong to the "school" edition. The thirteenth tablet is represented by 83, 1-18, 411 published CT, XX, 50, but the fact that the colophon and the opening line of the thirteenth tablet (CT, XX. 1, 28) appear within this text (obv. 7, 8) shows that here also two tablets (the twelfth and thirteenth) have been combined. That this text merely represents an extract from these two tablets may perhaps be concluded from the statement in connection with the colophon that fifty-three "signs" are noted. At all events an indication of this kind, taken together with the unusual circumstance of a colophon within a text and as a heading to what follows, may be regarded as satisfactory evidence that Ašurbanapal's scribes have, in this instance certainly, copied a school text and perhaps merely a school exercise based on the twelfth and thirteenth tablets of the multabiltum series. Portions of the seventh tablet of the series, finally, are represented by the unpublished fragment K. 6292, according to the indications in Besold's Catalogue, p. 777, and by D.T. 49 (with the colophon of the eighth tablet) published by Boissier, Documents, pp. 248-50, and the same author's Choix de Textes, pp. 65-70 with attempted translation. Langdon (JAOS, XXVII, p. 88) apparently does not know of Boissier's two editions of this text.

tional clause" in Col. III, and the words in Col. II the "salient feature" of the "result clause." The text, however, does not embody, as he supposes, a series of "rules" for the interpretatiou of omens nor does the third column furnish the "whole rule" from which the scribe, as Langdon supposes, has made an extract or an abbreviated The purpose of the tablet is, as already intimated, to illustrate the principles and the method followed in the interpretation of omens derived from an inspection of the liver of the sacrificial To this end, the text is divided into three parallel The third column furnishes the sign noted on the liver columns. and the interpretation given to it. In the first column the "catchword" of the sign is entered, which forms the basis of the interpretation, while in the second, the "catch-word" or "catch-words" of the interpretation are added to illustrate the connection between the sign and the meaning given to it. The real difficulty in the text to be overcome is the determination of the terms introduced, which according to the thesis here maintained, all describe parts of the liver or phenomena to be observed on the liver. While some of the terms are still obscure, I believe that I am justified in thinking that most of them have been correctly determined by my investigations. The final test rests naturally in the ability to give a satisfactory meaning to both the signs observed and to the interpretation based on the signs.

In order to assist the reader in following the rendition of the text, a diagram of a sheep's liver is added to this article on which the chief parts are indicated by letters and elucidated by the addition (a) of the Latin names, and (b) of the equivalent terms used in the Babylonian omen texts (cf. p. 326). It is impossible in this article to enter into a discussion of all details and for our purposes it suffices to recall the general theory on which Babylonian hepatoscopy is based, namely, that the liver was regarded as the center of life and the seat of the soul, and that therefore, in the case of the sacrificial animal, the liver was the organ through which the will and intention of the gods as the givers and source of all life could be ascertained. The two deities more specifically associated with divination in general are Samaš and Adad, who are known as bêlê bîri, "lords of inspection," and who in the omen tablets in Ašurbanapal's library are invariably mentioned instead of Nebo and Tašmit of the other classes of the collection." The striking character of the organ in question, so much more complicated than, e. g., the heart and lungs, was no doubt a factor in the association of the liver with the seat of life. On opening an animal the liver is seen as the most prominent organ. To its peculiar appearance is added the fact that it is filled with blood—naturally associated even by primitive man with life.20 The phenomena that it presents through the gall-bladder terminating in a long duct (ductus cysticus) which again passes into a duct running across the liver (ductus hepaticus) that sends its branches into the various lobes of the liver (lobus dexter, lobus sinister, lobus quadratus, and lobus caudatus) are rendered still more striking by the large portal or hepatic vein (vena portae) which, like the hepatic duct, sends its offshoots, as subsidiary veins throughout the entire liver. To the layman, the markings of various kinds appearing as lines, indentures, and curves on the liver surface, due largely to the traces of the subsidiary hepatic and vein ducts, furnish another feature that arrests attention, and since no two livers are exactly alike in respect of these markings—as little as the marking on two leaves of a tree—it will be seen that a wide field over which fanciful imagination may roam at will is thus opened up. Lastly, there is besides the large vein (vena cava or vena cava caudalis), the transverse fissure or liver gate (porta hepatis) separating the upper lobe (lobus caudatus) from the three lower lobes. At one end of the pyramidal lobe is a finger-shaped appendix, known as the processus pyramidalis constantly varying in form, and presenting all manner of curious features. This lobe plays so significant a rôle in Greek and Roman hepatoscopy—based on the older Etruscan rites —that it was called by the Greeks ὁ λοβός, i. e., the lobe par excellence, and by the Romans caput jecoris, "head of the liver." At the other end of the pyramidal lobe, there is a second appendix known as the processus papillaris, which varying in size and at times extremely small, also plays a part in hepatoscopy though a much less prominent one than the processus pyramidalis.

To all these parts and phenomena of the liver the attention of the bart priests was directed; and by the application chiefly of two principles, one based on the association of ideas, the other on the association of words, an elaborate and complicated system of interpretation was developed, the influence of which may be gauged when it is considered that the system furnished a guide to the rulers and individuals of Babylonia and Assyria from before the days of Sargon (ca. 3000 B. C.) to the days of Nabonidus—the last king of the neo-Babylonian empire (555–539 B. C.). No expedition was undertaken, no battle was risked, no building begun and no important official act entered upon without calling in the aid of the bart priests to examine the sacrificial animal—generally a sheep and frequently more than one—and on the basis of a report on the condition of the liver to render a decision that was regarded as indicative of the divine will or intent.

The task thus cut out both for the full-fledged priest on whom the obligation rested to interpret the omens derived from the inspection of the liver, as well as for those who were being trained for the service, was clearly defined. The position and character of all the various parts of the liver had to be carefully noted, all peculiarities recorded and the form of the markings, their number, and outlines closely observed. It would appear that all these phenomena were written down on memoranda tablets; and in an actual record of a liver inspection from the days of Nabonidus, taken on an occasion when the king wished to restore the statue of Sin and other gods to the rebuilt temple of the moon-god at Harran, no less than seventeen signs are set down and the meaning of each defined. It was for the purpose of securing a correct interpretation of the signs observed that the collections of omens, based no doubt in part on past experience and in part on the application of the principles developed by the priests in the unfolding of their system, were made, and which, deposited in the temple archives or more probably in the schools attached to the temples could be consulted as guides and reference works. occasions on which recourse was had to divination through the liver being primarily of an official and public character, the interpretations generally bear on affairs of state and on public eventswar, conquest, crops, the army, the rulers, and the royal house-It is only occasionally that matters of concern to the ordinary individual are introduced. It was, however, a comparatively simple matter to extend the application to more personal affairs. The main object was to determine whether a particular sign was favorable or unfavorable. If the former, the interpretation was not limited to the particular case set down, but could be applied to any other situation that arose." Hence in the omens introduced into the inscriptions of Nabonidus as well as in the earlier documents and in official reports of various periods, the interpretations attached to the omens, copied evidently from some collection serving as a guide, do not necessarily bear upon the question to be answered through the liver inspection. The interpretation is added, primarily, as an indication whether the sign is favorable or unfavorable. In other words, the interpretation serves merely as an example illustrative of the favorable or unfavorable character of the sign in question. With this determined, the answer to the inquiry depended either upon the summary of all the signs noted or upon the application of the illustrative interpretation of the specific case under consideration. These same collections of omens with the interpretations also served as the basis of instruction in the temple schools, but in addition, as already suggested, special school editions of the collections in whole or in part were prepared, adapted for illustrating the method to be followed in the system of interpretation and containing all manner of explanations to facilitate the task of instructing the pupils in the science of hepatoscopy.

Our text furnishes a particularly valuable example of the pedagogical plan adopted, and, both for this reason and because of its intrinsic value, justifies detailed treatment. As already pointed out, it consists of three columns on each side, the third containing the omen noted with the interpretation, while the first and second are added in order to illustrate the connection between the sign and the interpretation. The proper method of treating the text is, therefore, first to set down the entry in the third column, and then to take up the remaining two.

The first line of the third column reads:

šumma na o erik -ma niptū [ikru] rubū ina harrāni illiku ikašad.

"If the biliary duct is long and the hepatic duct is short, the ruler in the expedition which he undertakes will conquer."

To this omen the first and second columns read:

a-rik-tum "length" ka-šit-tum "conquest" which means that the 'length' of the biliary duct forms the basis for the interpretation of the sign as 'conquest.' No special reference is made to the 'shortness' of the hepatic duct, the favorable character of this sign being either assumed as known or regarded as of secondary consideration. From other sources we know that a long cystic duct was a favorable sign, e. g., V R. 63, II, 10 and 23, where it is interpreted as pointing to the 'long life' of the ruler."

⁴⁰ For Ma=biliary duct (ductus cysticus), see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 234, n. 13. The phonetic reading is unknown.

⁴¹ Written GID-DA. Cf. Brunnow, Nos. 7511 and 7562.

⁴²GIR to be read nipta,—the sign for the hepatic duct (ductus hepaticus). See Jastrow, ibid. and p, 242, n. 1.

⁴³Read GUD-DA to be interpreted as ikru, for which compare CT, XX, 1, 28 where GID-DA and GUDDA occur in contrast, while the phonetic reading ik-ru for the latter is shown by CT, XX, 31, 13, 14 where GIDDA and ik-ru are contrasted. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 253, n. 6, and Langdon, JAOS, XXVIII, p. 147, n. 2.

⁴⁴ Written DU with the phonetic complement $k \mathbf{u}$.

⁴⁵ Kur(ad) to be read therefore ik as ad. Cf. Brünnow, No. 7393.

⁴⁶ Other examples, Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 252, n. 8.

The second line reads:

šumma irru sahirūti47 al-ku-[u]47a kašittum.48

"If the 'network' is continuous—conquest."

To this omen—briefly expressed—the first and second columns read:

a-lik-tum

ka-šit-tum "conquest"

i. e., the 'continuous' course of the network of markings on the liver is the basis of the interpretation as 'conquest.' The term translated 'network' refers to the grouping of markings more specifically on the left lobe of the liver, where the traces of the subsidiary hepatic and vein ducts produce a varying number of little curves and lines, forming all manner of patterns." The peculiar nature of the sign here noted seems to be that the markings either form a continuous series, suggestive, therefore, of an unbroken course of victory, or that they all run in one direction, pointing to the continuous onward march of the king's army. The third line, presenting both in the sign noted and in the interpretation a more complicated character, reads:

šumma martu⁵⁰ ištu imitti ana šumėli dakšat⁵¹-ma di-ki-[is]-sa⁵² uššur⁵³ bėl limutti⁵⁴-ka ša idku⁵⁵ ķāt-ka ikašad.⁵⁶

"If the gall-bladder is pierced from the right to left and its 'split' is loose, thy hand will overcome thy enemy who advances (againt thee)."

47 ŠA-NIGIN. For the reading and interpretation see Jastrow, II, p. 256, n. 4.

^{67a}Cf. la al-kam 'not continuous,' i. e., broken up and divided (Knudtson, Assyrische Gebete, No. 107, rev. 16), and šalhu 'torn,' i. e., 'broken up' (Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 293, n. 5), the contrast to alku.

⁴⁸ KUE(tum)—kašittum. For many examples of omens thus briefly indicated see Jastrow, loc. cit., pp. 258, 259.

See Boissier, Choix de Textes relatifs à la Divination, pp. 89 and 93 and CT, XX, 46, 54-56;
48, 30, etc., where the network is put down as consisting of from six to seventeen distinct bits.
SI=martu 'gall-bladder.' Cf. Brünnow, No. 4196 and Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 229, n. 3.

51 The phonetic reading for IT-MU (5 at) is furnished by the parallel line K. 134, 1 (Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 78). See Jastrow, Beligion, Vol. II, p. 336, n. 11 for a fuller discussion of the term and of other passages in which it occurs.

⁵⁵ Di-ki-sa in text, but probably an error for di-ki-is-sa as throughout K. 134. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 336, n. 1.

SBAR (ur)=ussur (Brünnow, No. 1814). For the meaning 'loose' or 'detached' cf. Haupt, ASKT, 85, 40 where ussuru is used of a woman whose womb has prolapsed, i. e., become detached. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 305, n. 6. Note the synonyms in the lexicographical list II R. 39, No. 1, obv. 4-5 på pitå "open mouth' and på ussuru 'loosened mouth' for both of which phrases the signs are KA-BAR(RA).

54 Cf. Brannow, No. 10958.

55 ZI(ku) = idku (Brūnnow, No. 2308) (with overlapping vowel) from dikū—the common verb to indicate the advance of an army. See Muss-Arnolt, Assyrian Dictionary, pp. 245b f. 56 Kur(ad)=ikašad as in the first line.

Cols. I and II read:

uš-šur-tum
"looseness"

ka-šit-tum "conquest"

i. e., the fact that the pierced gall-bladder is detached or 'loose' points in this case again to 'conquest.' The 'split' runs to the left, and the 'looseness' is therefore a bad sign for the enemy's host."

L. 4 reads:

šumma ina kap-pi¹⁶ kabitti¹⁶ ša imitti padanu¹⁶ ina kap-pi kabitti ša šumėli naptartu¹¹ šu-šur¹² pū¹⁶ nipti ina eli šibi¹⁶(?) illik, nakru-ka itti ili¹⁶ ka-mi u suh-hur.

57 See above p. 291.

MWe have here in the word kappu 'wing' the very appropriate term for a liver 'lobe,' and it is interesting to note that the right and left lobe (lobus dexier, lobus sinister) were distinguished precisely as in modern anatomical nomenclature. A special designation is also found for the lobus caudatus namely unemurum = kabittu kablitu (or perhaps kabal kabitti) 'the middle liver'—which is likewise appropriate since the lobus caudatus lies approximately in the middle of the liver; see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 231. Whether the right lobe was still further divided into two sections, as in modern nomenclature, by the groove in which the gall-bladder rests into (a) lobus quadratus to the left and (b) lobus dexter to the right I have not yet been able to determine, though the groove itself was distinguished. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 325, n. 5.

WFor UE (-kabittu), the most common sign of the liver, see Jastrow, Beligion, Vol. II, p. 213, n. 2; for other names and signs, see the writer's article, "Signs and Names of the Liver in Babylonia" (ZA, XX, pp. 105-29). It is possible that in omen texts haid as in the omen report (Jastrow, II, p. 276, n. 7) was the designation of the liver and not kabittu.

61(jam, the common meaning of which is paţāru 'open' (Brünnow, No. 4488), and which is of very frequent occurrence in omen texts as a verb, e.g., GAB(at) = paţrat (CT, XX, 1, 6, and 14, 6, or without a phonetic complement, ll. 8, 27 of Pl. 1; Pl. 7 (K. 5151), 4-11; 15, 2-39; 26 rev. and 28 rev., with plural sign, Pl. 14, 13, but also as a noun, Pl. 48, 19. In our passage the noun is evidently intended, hence the suggested reading. Under 'splits' the fissures frequently to be observed on the surface of the liver or on such parts as the gall-bladder, the cystic duct, and the hepatic duct, etc., are meant. In the Sargon omens (IV R. 34, No. 1) as many as seven such fissures in the gall-bladder are instanced; cf. Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 238. The phonetic reading šu-šur suggests that the combination GAB-US, which is also of frequent occurrence, e.g., CT, XX, 1, 17, with the phonetic complement tum (also Boissier, Choix de Textes, pp. 57, 59) and with the plural sign (CT, XX, 45, 21) is to be explained as GAB='split' and US (Brünnow, No. 5033) = 'straight' while the phonetic ending tum suggests the reading napṭartum. GAB-US would therefore be a fuller form for the noun to indicate, as in our text, 'a straight fissure;' see further, Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 337, n. 9.

42 III, I, from a ā ā r u 'to be straight;' cf. ā u - ā u r in the interpretation of an omen in an inscription of Nabonidus (Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 253, n. 2).

42 Written MA. The 'mouth' of the hepatic duct is the one end of this part.

64 Tu appears to be one of the designations for the 'edge of the liver.' For the reading $\frac{1}{2}$ ib i offered tentatively see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 240 (note), and p. 325, n. 5. I take it that the sign is intended to represent the case in which the hepatic duct is unusually long so that it appears to fall over the liver edge.

⁶⁸ For itti ili in the sense of 'with the help of a god' see V R. 63, II, 11 (Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 253).

"If on the right lobe of the liver there is a 'road,' on the left lobe a straight fissure (and) the mouth of the hepatic extends over the edge(?), thy enemy with the help of a god will be captured and surrounded."

To this omen, the adjoining two columns read:

šu-šur-tum sa-kap nakri "straightness" "overthrow of the enemy"

i. e., the 'straightness' of the fissure and of the 'road' (the straightness of which is implied in the term used) forms the basis for the interpretation that the ruler will proceed directly against the enemy and subjugate him. The secondary sign of the extent of the hepatic duct is not specifically referred to, its favorable character, being again assumed as known or not calling for any special comment.

L. 5:

šumma как-т1⁶⁶ ša imitti ištēnit⁶⁷ at-rat ummāni šum damiķti⁶⁶ ileķi.⁶⁹

"If of the KAK-TI, the one to the right is abnormal, my army will acquire a good name."

To this sign, the two columns read:

a-tar-tum za-kar šu-mu⁷⁰
"excessive" "fame"

i. e., the abnormally large character of the KAK-TI suggests by a natural association of ideas great renown.

šumma rēš na zu-ķur⁷¹ mu-sag⁷² rubi⁷³ ummāni šum damiķti ileķi.

"If the top of the biliary duct is elevated, supremacy of the ruler, my army will acquire renown."

⁶³ Sal-Sig (Brünnow, No. 10955)—the contrast to Sal-Hul (l. 3). For the reading and other passages see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 336, n. 11.

Tr(ki) = ileki (Brūnnow, No. 1700).

70 Cf. the proper name En-lil-sa-kar-šu-mi (▼ R. 44, III, 41).

71 Variant: suk-kur II, 1, from sakāru 'to be high.' See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 327, n. 9.

⁷² Mu-sag, i. e., mu = n i š (CT, XII, 8, 8a) and sag = r ē š u, literally therefore, 'raising of head,' for which see Hunger, Becherwahrsagung, Text A, 69. A parallel expression is discussed, Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 355, n. 12.

78 Nun = ruba.

Our text furnishes a particularly valuable example of the pedagogical plan adopted, and, both for this reason and because of its intrinsic value, justifies detailed treatment. As already pointed out, it consists of three columns on each side, the third containing the omen noted with the interpretation, while the first and second are added in order to illustrate the connection between the sign and the interpretation. The proper method of treating the text is, therefore, first to set down the entry in the third column, and then to take up the remaining two.

The first line of the third column reads:

"If the biliary duct is long and the hepatic duct is short, the ruler in the expedition which he undertakes will conquer."

To this omen the first and second columns read:

⁴¹ Written GID-DA. Cf. Brunnow, Nos. 7511 and 7562.

 $^{^{42}}$ GIR to be read niptû,—the sign for the hepatic dust (ductus Aspaticus). See Jastrow, ibid. and p, 242, n. 1.

See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 253, n. 6, and Langdon, JAOS, XXVIII, p. 147, n. 2.

⁴⁴ Written DU with the phonetic complement ku.

⁴⁵ Kur(ad) to be read therefore ikašad. Cf. Brünnow, No. 7393.

⁴⁶ Other examples, Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 252, n. 8.

The second line reads:

šumma irru sahirūti47 al-ku-[u]47a kašittum.48

"If the 'network' is continuous—conquest."

To this omen—briefly expressed—the first and second columns read:

When here here in the word kappu 'wing' the very appropriate term for a liver live,' and it is interesting to note that the right and left lobe (lobus dexter, lobus seasor were distinguished precisely as in modern anatomical nonneclature. A special designation is also found for the lobus condatus namely un-nursum = kabittu kabittu kabittu verperhape kabal kabitti) 'the middle liver'—which is likewise appropriate aince the lives can take lies approximately in the middle of the liver; see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 22. Weather the right lobe was still further divided into two sections, as in modern momenciature, by the groove in which the gall-bladder rests into (a) lobus quadratus to the left and 3 hours distinguished. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 325, n. 5.

M For TR: = kabiltu, the most common sign of the liver, see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II. p. 212, n. 2; for other names and signs, see the writer's article, "Signs and Names of the Liver in Rabylonia" (ZA, XI, pp. 165-29). It is possible that in omen texts hadd as in the owner report (Jastrow, II, p. 276, n. 7) was the designation of the liver and not a hittu.

"Gin = padanu Brünnow. No. 9191) 'road.' the designation of a certain kind of markings on the liver. The term padanu (see the phonetic writing pa-da-na-am, CT, W. 34 387 2' indicates that it had the form of a continuous line; see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. 11, p. 33', note' and p. 233, n. 2.

which is of very frequent occurrence in omen texts as a verb, e.g., GAB (at) = patrat (CT, VL. & and 14, & or without a phonetic complement, II. 8, 27 of Pl. 1; Pl. 7 (K. 5151), Vl. & and 14, & or without a phonetic complement, II. 8, 27 of Pl. 1; Pl. 7 (K. 5151), In our passage the noun is evidently intended, hence the suggested reading. In the Sargon omens (IV R. 54, No. 1) as many as seven such fiscares in the gall-bladder are instanced; cf. Jastrow, No. 10, 11, p. 28. The phonetic reading $u-$ur suggests that the combination of Pl. which is also of frequent occurrence, e.g., CT, XX, 1, 17, with the phonetic complement turn laber Russier, (Nour de Terfes, pp. 57, 39) and with the plural sign (CT, XX, 45, 21) is to be caplained as $4.9 = 'split' and 12 (Brannow, No. 5033) = 'straight' while the phonetic conding turn suggests the reading naptartum. Gab-Us would therefore be a fuller form for the noun to indicate, as in our text, 'a straight fissure;' see further, Jastrow, Noisses, Vol. 11, p. 37, n. 9.

"111. I. from a $ a ru 'to be straight;' cf. $ u - $ u r in the interpretation of an omen in an inversption of Nabonidus (Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 233, n. 2).

"If on the right lobe of the liver there is a 'road,' on the left lobe a straight fissure (and) the mouth of the hepatic extends over the edge(?), thy enemy with the help of a god will be captured and surrounded."

To this omen, the adjoining two columns read:

šu-šur-tum sa-kap nakri "straightness" "overthrow of the enemy"

i. e., the 'straightness' of the fissure and of the 'road' (the straightness of which is implied in the term used) forms the basis for the interpretation that the ruler will proceed directly against the enemy and subjugate him. The secondary sign of the extent of the hepatic duct is not specifically referred to, its favorable character, being again assumed as known or not calling for any special comment.

L. 5:

šumma как-ті⁶⁶ ša imitti ištēnit⁶⁷ at-rat ummāni šum damiķti⁶⁶ ileķi.⁶⁹

"If of the KAK-TI, the one to the right is abnormal, my army will acquire a good name."

To this sign, the two columns read:

a-tar-tum za-kar šu-mu¹⁰
"excessive" "fame"

i. e., the abnormally large character of the KAK-TI suggests by a natural association of ideas great renown.

šumma rėš na zu-ķur⁷¹ mv-sag⁷² rub!⁷² ummāni šum damiķti ileķi.

"If the top of the biliary duct is elevated, supremacy of the ruler, my army will acquire renown."

65 SAL-SIG (Brünnow, No. 10955)—the contrast to SAL-HUL (1.3). For the reading and other passages see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 336, n. 11.

Tr(ki)=ileki (Brannow, No. 1700).

70 Cf. the proper name En-lil-sa-kar-šu-mi (▼ R. 44, III, 41).

 71 Variant: suk-kur II, 1, from sakaru 'to be high.' See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 327, n. 9.

⁷² MU-SAG, i. e., MU = n i š (CT, XII, 8, 8a) and SAG = r 6 š u, literally therefore, 'raising of head,' for which see Hunger, Becherwahrsagung, Text A, 69. A parallel expression is discussed, Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 355, n. 12.

78 Nun = ruba.

Cols. I and II read:

zuk-kur-tum za-kar šu-mu
"elevation" "renown"

The 'elevated' biliary duct points to the heightening of the fame of the ruler and of his army. Note the play between zukkur and zakar šumi.

L. 7:

šummu elânu¹⁴ danni¹⁵ štru kima sikkati¹⁶ izziz¹⁷ zibu¹⁷a šarri kênu¹⁵ ummân šarri mâhira¹⁵ la ibaši.²⁰

"If above the portal vein, the flesh stands out like a plug, the king's 'club' (or weapon) will endure, the army of the king will be without a rival."

The first two columns read:

sik-ka-tum li-ķi-e li-ti
"plug" "acquiring glory"

i. e., the fact that the flesh at the point indicated stands out like a plug, barring, as it were, the progress of the enemy, is the basis for the interpretation that the arms and army of the king will stand firm against all attacks.

L. 8:

šumma šapal⁸¹ marti ka-bar māru⁸² eli abi-šu ikabit.⁸⁸

"If the base of the gall-bladder is swollen, the son will be mightier than his father."

74 Similarly we read, CT, XX, 37, 9, 'if the liver gate above the hepatic duct (ana elani nipt1) is depressed,' etc.

75 DAN probably to be read dannu 'strong' and the designation for the vena portae or great vein of the liver lying at the side of the hepatic duct. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 240, n. 2.

 76 (Gis) NAK = sikkatu (Brūnnow, No. 5267) — a reading that is confirmed by the word sik-ka-tum in the first column.

77 GUB (iz) = izziz; cf. Brannow, No. 4893.

77a For the reading zibu of the sign (giš) ku in the omen texts instead of kakku and the meaning 'club' assigned to zibu see below, p. 312, n. 161.

78 GI-NA.

79 GAB(ri) = mahiru (Brūnnow, No. 4502), or to be read phonetically gab-ri.

80 Tuk (ši) = ibaši (cf. Brannow, No. 11237).

Si Sig (Brünnow, No. 11873) contrasted in 79, 7-8, 129, 11, 4-5 (Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 43) to sag = ½ a½ ½ a du 'head' of the gall-bladder. It is therefore a synonym of the usual sug = i š du (Brünnow, No. 4811) used in the omen texts for the 'base,' or what we should call the upper portion of any of the parts of the liver, only that as 11. 1-3 of the text just quoted show, it represents the extreme end of the gall-bladder, whereas sug can be used with the plural sign in the general sense of 'lower parts.' Although I have adopted the reading š a plu it is possible that the sign is to be read i š du just like sug.

82 TUR-NITAH.

83 DUGUD(it) = ikabit (Brūnnow, No. 9228). Cf. CT, XX, 31, 19-20 i-kab-bu-ut.

To which line the adjoining columns read:

ka-bar-tum

e-mu-ku "power"

i. e., the 'swelling' of the lower part of the gall-bladder points to 'power,' while the fact that the swelling is 'below' indicates that the one who is 'lower'—therefore a son in contrast to a father—will be the mightier. The parts of the liver are always reckoned from below. Thus of the three divisions into which any part is divided (see Jastrow, II, p. 254, n. 3) the 'head' is the lowest and the 'base' is at what we would call the upper end. The gall-bladder is generally thicker at the 'head' and grows thinner as we reach the 'base' or 'lower' part. If, therefore, a liver shows the reverse order, it is an indication that the natural order will be reversed—the son will be stronger than his father.

L. 9:

šumma kirbannu⁸ imitti pū-šu ki-ma kur-sin-ni⁸ rapiš⁸ zibu šarri kēnu ummān šarri i-dan-nin-ma māhira la ibaši.

"If the mouth of the inner surface to the right is broad like an anklebone, the 'club' (or weapon) of the king will be firm, the king's host will be strong and without a rival."

To this sign Cols. I and II read:

ra-pa-aš-tum "breadth" me-til-lu-tums "sovereignty"

The association of ideas between 'breadth' and 'extension' of rulership is obvious. The double interpretation—not infrequent in omen texts⁸⁸—represents an alternative as in ll. 6-7, so that the sign in question may be interpreted with reference to the ruler or to his army according to the occasion of the inquiry.

³⁴ Lag = kirbannu (Brünnow, No. 5951). This reading is suggested by the phonetic reading ki-ri-ba-an-na 'the inner part' (CT, XX, 15, 27 and Pl. 48, 17). Another Lag with the plural sign added occurs in connection with the hepatic duct (CT, XX, 45, 26), the portal vein (l. 31), the gall-bladder (l. 36) and the 'net-work' (Pl. 46, 57) and is to be read minātu (Brünnow, No. 5973). The part in question is larger (rabi) than 'its interior surface.' See Jastrow, II, p. 298, n. 12 for a full discussion of both terms.

⁸⁶ Cf. CT, XX, 25, 18; 27, 5; 29, 6.

⁸⁷ See Muss-Arnolt, Assyrian Dictionary, p. 623.

⁸⁸ See examples in Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 253, n. 4.

šumma maš^m ma-la ubāni im-ta-ṣi^m ardu ma-la bēli-šu i-ma-aṣ-ṣi u-lu amtu bēli-ša i-ram-ši-ma ma-la bēlti-ša i-ma-aṣ-ṣi.

"If the papillary appendix in comparison with the pyramidal appendix is large, the servant in comparison with his master will be large, or in the case of a maid, her master will love her, and in comparison with her mistress she will be large."

The first two columns read:

ra-bu-u "large" ma-şu-u "broad"91

The papillary appendix figured on the picture of a liver, CT, VI, 1, it will be observed, is quite small in comparison with the finger-shaped pyramidal appendix. At times, indeed, the form is so tiny as to be scarcely visible, and not infrequently on sheep's livers that I have seen it appeared to be entirely wanting. The circumstance of its being 'large' is therefore unusual, and it is consequently taken as a sign that the one who is small will become great. The contrast between the 'servant' and the 'master,' or the maid and her mistress represents the contrast between 89 The sign MAS (Brünnow, No. 2024) designates the processus papillaris—the smaller appendix attached to the caudate lobe. See Jastrow. Religion. Vol. II, p. 255, n. 4, where the reading BIE (corrected p. 267, n. 3) is an error for MAS (see Streck, Oriental. Litteraturseit., Vol. X, Sp. 72). Niru which at one time I took to be the phonetic reading turns out to be the reading for ME-NI 'the common bile duct' (ductus choledochus). See Jastrow, II, p. 326, n. 5.

91 The juxtaposition of rabû with maşû is at first sight somewhat puzzling because of the apparently double meaning attached to mast as either 'small' or 'large' (see preceding note). That a contrast is intended between the appearance of the usually very small processus papillaris and the ordinarily much larger processus pyramidalis is of course obvious, the former being represented as more fully developed than usual in comparison with the latter; and since the verb maşû is used to express this idea, it follows that this verb must also be intended in the second column, and not mast 'small.' The two terms rabû and masû are therefore meant to explain this condition, prognosticating the 'fulness' of the servant and maid as against the master and mistress. The word rab û in the first column is introduced as a synonym of maşû in order to show the justification of interpreting the omen as pointing to breadth or enlargement. The pupil is in this way taught that the fact that the ordinarily small papillary appendix is 'large' is the basis for the interpretation that servant and maid-instead of the master and mistress-are to be 'large,' or in other words the topsy-turvy character of the two appendices points to a reversion of the natural order—the small will be large and the large will become small. For the preposition mala or mal used to express a comparison see Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 540b.

the two appendices, and the unusual condition of the larger appendix being compressed is looked upon as a confirmation of the interpretation that the inferior shall assert himself (or herself) against the superior.

L. 12:

šumma šumēli marti şa-mid šēpu-ka sa-ad nakri.™

"If the left side of the gall-bladder is firm, through thee, destruction of the enemy."

The two explanatory columns read:

$a-mit-tum
"firmness"

išdān⁹⁸ kināti⁹⁴
"secure bases"

L. 13

šumma kabittu imittu ub-bu-uk⁸⁶ išd-a-an kināti.⁸⁶
"If the liver to the right is secure—secure bases."

⁹²A complete parallel to this line is found in one of the omens attached to an inscription of Nabonidus (V R. 63, II, 28) which may be taken as a proof that the interpretations of the omens in a report such as the priests of the king furnished, are taken from collections like ours, compiled as reference works and as guides. See for the line Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 261, n. 5. On sa-ad from sâdu 'destroy' see Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 747a.

Written SUB = is-du (Brûnnow, No. 4811) with the complement a-an to indicate the plural or possibly the dual (see Ungnad, Assyr. Gram., § 22) and Lajciak, Plural-und Dualendungen an semitische Nomen [Leipzig, 1903], pp. 48-55). The use of is-du'support,' foundation' is introduced in view of šēpu 'foot' in the interpretation, and if išdân be taken as a dual, the reference would be to the legs as 'supports,' just as in the Targum to I Kings 10:19 the same word KITTEM 'supports' is the rendering for [777].

94 GI-MA with the plural sign.

*II, 1 from abaku which is another Assyrian verb that like maşû (see above, p. 298, n. 90) has two meanings the one contrary to the other (1) 'endure,' 'cling to,' etc. (cf. Arabic and (2) 'throw off,' 'overthrow,' etc. The context—by the association with išdan kināti—shows clearly that the former sense is here meant, whereas in other passages it is found in the sense of 'remove, misplaced': ub-bu-kat (CT, XX, 32, 77, 78) āu-ta-bak-ka (Clay, Cassite Archives, XIV, No. 4, 6, etc.). See Jastrow, II, p. 220, n. 8. Besold, Catalogue, p. 1774 (81, 2-4, 227) āum ma kabittu i mittu e-bi-ik furnishes a parallel to our passage. Delitssch (HWB, p. 115a) is hardly justified in assuming a stem PDN, but at the most PDN by the side of PDN though the two are probably identical as Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 6a, regards them.

96 Written as in the second column of the preceding line.

The first two columns read:

e-pi-ik-tum "security" išd-a-an kināti "secure bases"

The association of ideas is obvious and the circumstance that it is the right side of the liver which exhibits compactness adds to the favorable character of the sign.

L. 14:

šumma maš [e-]ba-at^{er} ebûr mâti îšir.

"If the papillary appendix is inclosed, the produce of the land will thrive."

The explanatory columns read:

"inclosure"

šubtu^{se} ne-eh-tum "peaceful dwelling"

The interpretation of good crops as 'security' is an interesting association of ideas. In times of disturbance, the even course of things is interfered with and vice-versa, bad crops lead to internal disorders.

L. 15 reads:

šumma martu panatu-ša¹⁰⁰ ana imitti šaknū ta-a-a-rat ili ana amēli šarru māt-su i-ram-ma.

"If the edges of the gall-bladder lie toward the right, reconciliation of god with man, the king will be gracious to his land." 101

⁹⁸SI-DI(ir) = 1 šir from išāru (Brūnnow, No. 3461). The phrase occurs frequently in astrological omens, e. g., Craig, Astrological-Astronomical Texts, p. 57, obv. 4; 60 (K. 3002), 11-16; 10 (la 1 šir); 68, obv. 9, etc., etc.

% KI-KU = å u bt u (Brūnnow, No. 9824). The phrase is of frequent occurrence in historical texts (see the passages in Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., pp. 662b ff.) as well as in omen texts, e. g., CT, XX, 4 (K. 6689), 11; 34, 6 šu bt u ne-e h-ti i ša b, etc. Cf. Jastrow, II, p. 280, n. 7.

 $^{100}\,\text{Igi}(\text{Meš})-\text{the points}$ or edges of the gall-bladder, perhaps to be read a mer a ti See below, p. 801, n. 101*.

101 Literally 'will love.' The two interpretations are to be regarded as alternatives according to prevailing conditions or to the nature of the inquiry.

Unfortunately the first column to this line is injured. The second column reads:

ta-a-a-ra-tum "reconciliation"

We are therefore left in doubt as to the exact feature of the sign noted which suggests the return of god to man, and the love of the king for his land, which is likewise viewed as a reconciliation on his part. A fuller form of such an interpretation is found in the omens attached to a text of Nabonidus. A parallel to the sign noted is found in this inscription (Col. XI, 23) where it is interpreted as piķittu 'appointment,' i. e., pointing to a favorable answer to the inquiry whether such and such a one is to be intrusted with some official service. 100

šumma kakkad na ka-bi-is ummāni-ka ina reš ēķli-šu namra¹⁰⁴ ikkal.¹⁰⁵

"If the head of the biliary duct is depressed, thy army will, out of the best of his (sc. the enemy's) land, acquire glory."

The two explanatory columns read:

[ki-ib]su¹⁰⁶

a-kal nam-ra¹⁰⁷ "acquiring glory"

101a Perhaps to be restored a [me-ru-ti] in the sense of 'edges,' corresponding to IGI(MES) in Col. III (Brūnnow, Nos. 9267 and 9325). See Meissner, Supplement, p. 10a and IV R.3 I*, Col. III, 1-2. IGI-GAB-A(MES)—a-me-ru-ti.

102 Inschrift der Stele Nabu'naids (ed. Messerschmidt), Col. XI, 14-21. "Those who hated will love (ir-ta-a-mu same verb as in our passage). In a land of hostility there will be reconciliation (su-lum-ma-a), Sin, and Samaš will walk at my army's side and overthrow the enemy, the angered gods will be at peace (8 a lmu) with man." Cf. Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 268.

103 On the custom of consulting omens through a liver inspection in the case of appointments to office, see Jastrow, Beligion, Vol. II, p. 268, n. 10 and the references there given.

104 HA-LA-zittu or namru. See Jastrow, "Notes on Omen Texts" (ASJL, XXIII, pp. 100 ff.) where this passage and parallels are fully treated.

105 K_U =a kalu (Brūnnow, No. 882). On a kalu as a synonym of kašādu and the phrase here used see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 254, n. 8, as well as the article quoted in the preceding note.

106 The correct restoration suggested by Hunger, Beckerwahrsagung bei den Babyloniern, p. 37.

107 Two words suggest the reading namru for HA-LA in the third column and ikkal for Mu. Instead of namra, however, mittam as a synonym is possible. See for the interpretation of this line with a full discussion of numerous parallel passages, Jastrow "Notes on Omen Texts," AJSL, XXIII, pp. 97-103.

The fact that the biliary duct is deeply set points to the firm footing that the king's army will secure in the enemy's territory.

šumma na kima azkari e ana šaplānu e māt nakri şal-ta e ilamt."

"If the biliary duct is like a crescent at the lower end, the enemy's land will be surrounded with hostility."

The two explanatory columns read:

šap-liš ka-na-šu¹¹²

kašitti¹¹⁸ ķātā "conquest"

i. e., the circumstance that the 'lower' part of the biliary duct is curved so as to resemble a crescent, points to the 'humiliation' of the enemy's land or, in other words, to its conquest. It will be observed that the sign involves a twofold association of ideas—the 'curving' and the fact that the curving is 'below'—both suggesting a lowering and a bending to superior power.

L 18:

šumma nu reš kabitti¹¹⁶ ša imitti ul-lu-uș¹¹⁸ ul-lu-uș lib-bi ummăni.¹¹⁶

164 Up-sakar=askaru 'new-moon' and then the crescent of the moon as so frequently depicted on seal cylinders (Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 25a). The biliary duct appears as crescent-shaped, e.g., on the clay model of a liver (CT, VI, 1).

100 KI-TA(nu)=šaplānu (Brūnnow, No. 9673)—the contrast to clānu in l. 7. The direction of the parts of the liver being, as already indicated (see above p. 297), from below upward or from right to left, the 'lower end' of the biliary duct refers to what we would call the 'upper' or 'left' end.

110 Cf. Boissor, Documents Assyriens, p. 226, 11; CT, XX, 12 (K. 9218), 7, etc.

111 NI-GIN(mi)=ilami (cf. Brunnow, No. 10334).

112 The contrast e-liš ka-na-šu with the explanation u-šur-tum 'defeat' is found in the lexicographical list Rm. 131, 7 (Meissner, Supplement Texts, p. 20), which appears to be likewise devoted to an explanation of terms occurring in divination texts, arranged on the same principle as ours. See below p. 310, n. 147.

113 Kur(ti)=kašitti.

114 MU-SAG-UE frequently used in association with U-SAG-UE, e.g., CT, XX, 1, obv. 4-5, Boissier, Doruments Assyriens, p. 38, col. I, rev. 14, etc. Inasmuch as in Roman hepatoscopy the 'head of the liver' caput jecoris (see above p. 239) is the designation of the processus pyramidalis, I am inclined to take SAG-UE=res kabitti 'head of the Liver' as the point of this appendix. Therefore MU-SAG-UE = the 'upper' surface of the point and U-SAG-UE the 'under' surface. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 229, n. 1. U-SAG-UE is to be read kubšu (Brūnnow, No. 5864), the reading of MU-SAG is still unknown. The element UE is often omitted in the case of both of these designations, e.g., CT, XX, 14, 12; 15, 28, etc.

 $^{115}\,\mathrm{H}_{2}$ 1 of alaşu, the context suggests 'enlarge' as the fundamental meaning of alaşu.

116 For other examples of this phrase, see CT, XX, 31, 13, 14; Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 8, rev. 12 and 14, etc., and in the complete parallel to our line in the Inschrift der Stele Nabu'nuids (Messerschmidt), Col. XI, 38. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 271.

"If the upper part of the liver to the right is enlarged, rejoicing of heart of my army."

To this line, the adjoining two columns read:

ul-şu "enlargement" ul-şu-um-ma "rejoicing"

Here we have, as in the following line, the direct play upon words as the basis for the association of ideas, the 'enlargment' of the point of the processus pyramidalis suggesting the 'enlargement' of the spirits of the army.

L. 19:

šumma gi-biš imitti marti uktabir¹¹⁷ gi-biš ummāni ana māt nakri.

"If the bag of the gall-bladder to the right is swollen, (advance of) my forces to the enemy's country."

The two explanatory columns read:

gi-ib-šu "swelling" gi-ib-šum-ma "amassing"

As in the previous line, the word to the right indicates the verbal noun, and to the left the substantive form proper—distinguished by the emphatic ending m.

L. 20:

šumma ina imitti marti zibu¹¹⁸ šakin¹¹⁹-ma šapliš immar¹²⁰ zibu ma-ag-ša-ru zibu Šamaš.¹²¹

"If to the right of the gall-bladder there is a 'club' seen below, the club (or weapon) will be powerful—it is the club of Šamaš." ¹²¹

117 HU-SI=uktabir. See Jastrow, II, p. 269, n. 3.

118 (GIS) KU to be read as above p. 296, n. 77s, pointed out to be xi-bu, when used to designate some phenomenon on the liver, is of very frequent—indeed constant—occurrence in divination texts. It is the name given to certain markings on the liver that were fantastically viewed as 'weapons' and associated with the weapons of various gods, according to their varying forms. These markings are particularly prominent in the case of livers of sheep raised in marshy districts and are in part at least pathological in character. See Thulin, Die etwekische Disciplin, Vol. II, pp. 38, 39. For a full discussion of these markings see Jastrow, "Notes on Omen Texts" (II. "The Weapon of the Gods"), AJSL, XXIII, pp. 108-5.

119 GAR to be read 5 & kin, the phonetic complement in being frequently added, e.g., CT, XX, 31, 1, 5, 7, 9, 11, etc., or for the plural nu as above, p. 300, l. 15.

¹²⁰ IGI to be read im-mar as passages with the phonetic complement mar added show, e.g., CT, XX, 32, 77; Boissier, Documents Assyriens, pp. 52, 17; 69, 12.

 $^{121}\mathrm{An}$ explanatory note added to specify the particular kind of marking meant. See Jastrow, AJSL, XXIII, 113,

The two explanatory columns read:

mag-sa-ru da-na-nu
"power" "strong"

The underlying stem gašāru signifying 'to be strong,' the meaning of the noun form cannot be doubtful; its explanation as dananu 'strong' is a further aid to the determination of its meaning. In this case, there is a deviation from the principles to be observed in the relationship of the two explanatory columns to each other, inasmuch as dananu does not actually occur in the interpretation, but is added as an explanation of magšaru. For this reason, as well as because of other considerations set forth elsewhere. I take magšaru as the actual designation of the club (or weapon) of the sun-god with which the particular form of 'club' observed is compared. The interpretation, concisely put, is intended to suggest that since the 'club' is a magšaru, the sign points to the 'strength' of the weapons of the ruler.

šumma iş-ri^m imitti inammir^m ul-lu-uş lib-bi ummani.

"If the border to the right is resplendent, rejoicing of the heart of my army."

The two explanatory columns read:

nu-um-ru hu-ud lib-bi "brilliancy" "joy of the heart"

i. e., the 'brilliancy' of the border of the liver suggests the 'joy' of the army. The word in the first column thus offers a confirmation of the reading inammir, while the second column furnishes a synonym to ulluş libbi.

šumma kabittu imitti atar¹³⁶ dannu¹³⁸ ul-lu-uş lib-bi ummāni.

122 I ş-ri is clearly the designation of the border (or circumference) of the liver.

¹²³ Written Lah (ir) = in a m m ir (cf. Brūnnow, No. 3145). On the color of the liver see below p. 306.

124 DIRIG = ataru (Brannow, No. 3729).

128 Written GAR-KALAG according to Brūnnow (No. 12088), like KALAG (Brūnnow, No. 6194) alone. The reading of the first column at a r n a m - r u suggests that GAR-KALAG may be read n a m r u. On the basis of this passage alone, however, it is hazardous to assume this value, since the first column frequently suggests a synonym in preference to the word used in the omen. At all events the meaning is perfectly clear and the difference between d a n n u and n a m r u is not of any moment in this instance.

"If the liver to the right is very firm, rejoicing of the heart of my army."

The explanatory columns read:

atar nam-ru hu-ud lib-bi "very shining" "joy of heart"

The interesting text from this point on is unfortunately defective, and while some of the lines can be partially restored, we are unable to carry on the analysis for the rest of the text in the same complete manner as we have done hitherto. However, even in its defective condition, the text furnishes some further elucidations of the principles of Babylonian hepatoscopy and of the application of these principles to specific signs observed on the liver. It is worth while, therefore, to attempt an interpretation.

L. 24 reads:

šumma как-ті^{за} ša imitti u[šumēli halķā(?)¹³⁷] ši-lim-tum.¹³⁸
"If the как-ті to the right and [left are destroyed], annihilation."

The two explanatory columns read:

ummanāte ma'dūti¹³⁹ zu-ķu-ru-ti ašaridi¹³⁰ "supremacy of my general"

The connection between the first column and the sign observed is obscure, and must remain so till the reading and exact meaning of KAK(ti) can be determined.

L. 25 reads:

šumma ina ķaķķad marti di-hu nadī-ma [hud lib-bi zanān šamē].

"If at the head of the gall-bladder there is a hole and [joy of heart, plentiful rain]."

The explanatory columns enabling us to restore the end of the line from the faint traces read:

127 Read MA-A (with plural sign) = h alka, like CT, XX, 45, 18. Cf. also Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 298, n. 7.

128 Of frequent occurrence in omen texts, e.g., CT, XX, 2, rev. 6; 6, 9-11; 7, 19-21; Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 47, 15; 12, 16, etc. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 299, n. 14.

129 Erim with plural sign (Brūnnow, No. 8170) followed by zum with plural sign (Brūnnow, No. 8623). Read, therefore, ummanāte ma'dūti.

130 SAG-KALAG with MU as suffix of first person = asaridi (Brūnnow, No. 3619).

di-hu lib-bu "hole inside"

hu-ud lib-bi zanānⁱⁿ šamē "joy of heart, plentiful rain"

L. 25:

šumma kabittu imitti i-haš-[ši-šu¹²⁵ ul-lu-uş lib-bi ummāni].

"If the liver to the right [is resplendent, rejoicing of the heart of my army]."

The explanatory columns read:

hi-iš-ša-tum "resplendency" ul-lu-uş lib-bi "rejoicing of the heart"

The association of ideas is the same as in ll. 21-22, and also in the following line, where the 'brilliant,' 'shining' color of the part of the liver singled out suggests enlargement and success. The color of the liver, as is well known, varies considerably according to pathological conditions in the sacrificial animal, and it is interesting to note that in Greek and Roman hepatoscopy likewise the color of the liver enters into the interpretation of the signs observed. Aeschylus, is for example, in describing the benefits conferred on mankind by Prometheus includes therein his teaching mankind to derive omens from the inspection of the entrails, is specifying the doctrine as follows:

"The smoothness of the entrails, having what color would be pleasing to the deities, the well-formed and variegated character of the gall-bladder and lobe."

131 SUR (an) = sanân; cf. Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 59, 7, where we find the phonetic writing sa-na-an šamē. The combination SUR AN-E frequently occurs in the astrological texts, e. g., Craig, Astrological-Astronomical Texts, Pl. 27 (81, 2-4, 206), rev. 21. Virolleaud's reading (L'Astrologic Chaldéene, fasc. 8, p. 11, 10) isannun šamē is to be corrected accordingly.

122 From hašāšu for which the ideogram is HI-LI (V R. 39, 8g) and which is therefore a synonym of kusbu, ulşu, šullulu (from alālu)—all having the meaning of 'splendor,' 'enlargement,' 'joy,' and the like. See Brūnnow, Nos. 8244—48.

123 Prometheus, Il. 495-97. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 350.

134 Σπλάγχνα 'entrails' which by the side of iερά 'sacred parts' or iερεῖα 'victims' is the term used by Greek writers and never ηπαρ, just as the Latin writers speak of the exta and not of jecur when they refer to hepatoscopy in general. Such a usage no doubt points to the inclusion of other organs — as lungs, heart, and entrails — in divination rites, and yet it is noteworthy that when in Greek or Latin writers specific details of the inspection of an animal for divination purposes are given, the organ in all except a very few cases specified is the liver, and all specific signs observed are such as are found on the liver, showing, therefore, that here, too, it is the liver which is par excellence the organ of revelation. See the passages in Blecher, De Extispicio, pp. 3–32. Indeed, according to Thulin, Die etruskische Dieciplin, Vol. II, pp. 44, 45, other organs outside of the liver are rarely referred to and appear to have been consulted only when showing abnormal phenomena, whereas in ordinary cases the examination was limited to the liver. See also Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 216.

L. 26:

šumma martu nam-ba-[ţa-at kima(?)...ul-lu-uş lib-bi ummāni].

"If the gall-bladder shines like (?) . . . rejoicing of the heart of my army."

The adjoining two columns reading nam-ba-ţu

"brilliant"

ul-lu-uş lib-bi "joy of heart" require no further comment.

L. 27:

šumma martu šīru [libū¹⁸⁶ rubū libbu duhudšu ikašad(?)].¹⁸⁸

"If the flesh of the gall-bladder [is fatty, the ruler through his strength will conquer (?)]."

Cols. I and II to this line read:

li-bu-u "fat" dub-du "abundance"

The fatty gall-bladder or its fatty appearance is interpreted as pointing to prosperity and abundance.

L. 28:

šumma ina imitti pantī¹⁸⁷ šul-[ul-lu ebūr māti maḥīra napša ibašši].¹⁸⁸

"If to the right the liver surface is [resplendent—the produce of the land will be high-priced]."

125 Read $AL-LU which according to Craig, Assyr. Relig. Texts, Vol. II, Pl. II, obv. 13 is to be read li-bu-u 'fat'—precisely as the explanatory column has it. See Meissner, Supplement, p. 105; and Zimmern, Beitrage, p. 172 (No. 57, n. 6). The word occurs frequently in incantation and ritual texts.

136 The word duhdu 'abundance' in Col. II of this line suggests the restoration of this line according to CT, XX, 50, 17, and Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 95, 10. Practically the same phrase is found also CT, XX, 2, rev. 8: 49, rev. 32 (also to be restored Pl. 6 [Rm 86] 6) Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 8, rev. 13. See also the omen in the Inscription of Nabonidus, VR. 63, Col. II, 18 and the comment in Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 257, n. 2, and p. 327, n. 5. The restoration would appear in the text as

NUN ŠA SI-SI-KI-(šu) KUR (ad)

187 Ba=panta, the name of the liver surface on which the gall-bladder, the biliary, and hepatic ducts are found, and all the other parts and chief phenomena of the liver, but which, according to modern anatomical nomenclature is the hind or inferior surface, whereas the Babylonians, because this surface was first seen upon opening a sheep, called it the "upper" surface or "face" of the liver, and the other side the "back." The word panta from being the chief side of the liver came to be used in a general way for the liver. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 227, n. 2, and the writer's article, "Signs and Names of the Liver in Babylonia," ZA, XX, pp. 112-27.

128 The restoration suggested by the reading in Col. II and the passages III R. 54, No. 3, 1-3, though of course a variant phrase like 1.3 mahira ina-pu-uš (cf. III R. 60, 73) is also possible. See a similar passage in our text Pl. 41, Col. V, 15, na-pa-aš mahiri.

Cols. I and II read:

šul-ul-lu¹⁸⁶ "resplendent" mahiru¹³ nap-šu "high price"

The sign again refers to the high coloring of the liver or, more precisely, of the surface of the liver, which is explained as pointing to commercial prosperity. High prices in ancient Babylonia appear to have been indicative of "good times"—a financial boom.

L. 29:

šumma kabal niptī ana[elānu larū¹ ibaši rubū ina barrāni illiku ikašad].¹¹¹

"If in the middle of the hepatic duct above there is a branch, the ruler on his expedition will conquer]."

Cols. I and II read:

la-ru-u ki-šit-tum "conquest"

" branch "

The association of ideas appears to rest on the fact that the subsidiary duct branches out from the middle of the hepatic duct on the 'upper' side—'middle' and 'upper' prognosticating a favorable issue.

134 The ideogram of this word being, according to Brünnow, No. 8248, FI-LI (see above p. 306. n. 132), there can be no doubt as to its general meaning, as 'shining' and the like. Kramples of verbal forms of alalu in the same sense CT, XX, 5, 13, 22-25 (i-tal-la-lu-šii-tal-lu-ka.etc.), Knudtson, Assyrische Gebete, No. 8, rev. 11.

 $^{139}\,\mathrm{Ki-i.Am},$ the common ideogram for mahiru (Brünnow, No. 9803) so constantly occurring in business documents.

For napau and forms of the verb in combination with mahiru see Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 710b. In omen texts we find as interpretations also (a) mahiru işahir, Craig, Astron. Astron. Texts, Pl. 2, 25, 27, 40, etc., and (b) mahira mātu inapuš, Craig, Pl. 21, 16: III R. 6h. 73.

140 In view of passages like CT, XX, 11 (K. 6393) 7; 11 (K. 6724) 18-19; 18 (K. 12471) 3; 24 (K. 3676), obv. 4-5; 25,5-6; 25, 2, 6, there can be no doubt of the restoration of analy-ta-(nu)[=elanu-] PA TUK ($i).

What a PA looks like is shown by the diagram CT, XX, 28, which, besides furnishing a proof that GIR is the hepatic duct, makes it clear that PA is a subsidiary hepatic duct. The diagram illustrates a variety of such subsidiary ducts branching out to the right, in the middle and at the base of the hepatic duct, both above (elân u) and below (ŝaplân u). One of the common equivalents of PA is hat tu 'scepter.' From this to some such meaning as 'branch' is only a short step, while the reading larâ in the first column may reasonably be taken to be the phonetic value of PA when applied to subsidiary duct. See Jastrow, II, p. 287, n. 1. The word in question is found here for the first time, and it is therefore idle to speculate as to its fundamental meaning. We may provisionally enter it as 'branch'—to fit the context. The omen texts furnish quite a number of words not found elsewhere, as e.g., sibu 'club,' dihu 'hole,' kaskasu 'fluke,' nip tâ hepatic duct, nir u common bile duct, etc., so that it is not surprising to come across another.

šumma maš kima [ku-ul-ti....ul-lu-us lib-bi ummāni].

"If the papillary appendix is like [a kultu... rejoicing of the heart of my army]."

Cols. I and II:

ku-ul-tu142

ul-lu-uş lib-bi ummani "rejoicing of heart in my army."

For the next eleven lines the third column is lacking altogether and there is not much to be made of Cols. I and II, which are likewise badly broken.

L. 31, Cols. I and II:

li-[me]-tum¹⁴⁸
"surrounding"

ašibūte-šu ippaţarū (?) 6-tir14 ili

"its inhabitants will be freed through the protection of a god"

For ll. 32-35 only the second column remains:

[li-me(?)]-tum bar-ri-e¹⁶ bit ameli "superabundance of the house of man" la ka-šit-tum

"no conquest"
la ka-šit-tum
"no conquest"
sa-kip-tum lumun libbi¹⁶
"overthrow, misfortune"

142 Without the third column, it is impossible to determine the meaning of this word which I have not met with as yet elsewhere in the omen texts. Langdon, JAOS, XXVII, p. 97, n. 3, thinks it may be some object of wood. This is possible, though his supposition that the comparisons in these texts are usually with such objects is erroneous, cf. Boissier, Choix de Textes, pp. 79, 85, 103, etc. The comparison is very frequently with small animals or with parts of animals or with fruits, or, in fact, with almost anything.

143 Limetum points to a verb ilami in the first part of the line devoted to the description of the sign. The catch-words of the interpretation begin with the following EU-A with plural sign, perhaps to be read a š ibū te. Note that the duplicate Rm 2, 466 has GAB-MES=paţrū.

144 KAR (ir) pointing to the reading etir ili; cf. Brūnnow, No. 7739. The verb eteru occurs not infrequently in omen texts, e.g., CT, XX, 14, 8-27, 9, where eteru with ekemu, satik and kabasu all are entered as synonyms and as possible readings for EAR.

145 Cf. i-bir-ri as the interpretation of an omen, Boissier, Documents Assyriens, 88, 17 and 94, rev. 6; also ub-bir (l. 4), ub-bir-šu (l. 5).

14 SA-HUL=lumun libbi. The two expressions sakiptum and lumun libbi are of course introduced as alternatives. Langdon (JAOS, XXVII, p. 97); who misses the point here as in other instances, attempts to combine them.

Cols. I and II of ll. 36 and 37 are too fragmentary to be considered.

L. 39:

[si-(?)-si-il-tum]¹⁴⁷

L. 40:

ša-[lab-]tum¹⁴⁸

"tear"

a-ru-ur-tum
"curse"

maš-la-'a-tum¹⁴⁹
"capture"

With the help of various passages in omen texts, to the third column can be restored with great probability as follows:

šumma [irru sahirūti imitti šal-hu maš-la-'a-ti ummāni].
"If the network is torn apart, capture of my army."

147 Restored from Rm 131, 5 (published by Meissner. Supplement, p. 20 of Texts). This fragment is part of a text much like ours, so that here, too, we must beware of taking the words of the two columns as synonyms, as has hitherto been done. They represent the catch-word of the sign noted and of the interpretation of liver omens respectively, belonging to a lost third column. Whether the entire text was a duplicate is doubtful, even though several lines (36-42=Rm 131, 2-9) agree. There is no agreement between this fragment and any of the lines preserved on the reverse of our text. I hope to treat this fragment more fully on some other occasion. No doubt further investigation will show that there are other lexicographical texts, hitherto regarded as furnishing synonymous expressions, which belong to the same category. Note that in Rm 131, 5 the first sign si is missing, but the restoration suggested by Delitzsch, HWB, p. 5005 seems plausible. I suspect that si (?)-sil-t um represents a term with which a comparison was instituted in the first part of the corresponding line of Col. III, devoted to the description of the signs noted.

148 To be restored according to Rm 131, 6. That the second sign (Brünnow, No. 7766) is to be read lab and not par as Meissner, Supplement, p. 97b, proposed (who was followed by Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 1093b), or bir as Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 89, assumed, may be concluded from the omen report K. 1523 (S. A. Smith, Keitschrifttexte Asurbanapals, Vol. III, Pl. 26), sum ma irru sabirâti sal-bu mas-la-'a-ti rubi nidâti um-mani, i.e., "if the network is torn, capture of the chief (or king), overthrow of my army." The word in the first column having reference to the sign observed, the association is no doubt in our text also between some form of the verb šalābu and a noun šalabtum. That the sign is an unfavorable one is distinctly stated in the summary of the signs K. 1523, 15, 16; cf. Jastrow, II, p. 293, n. 6.

149 Occurring a number of times as the interpretation of an omen, e.g., CT, XX, 31, 31, 32 (maš-la-'a-ti ummāni and maš-la-'a-ti ummān nakri); 16, (K. 6848), 4, 5, where no doubt ummān and ummān nakri are also to be supplied besides K. 1523, just referred to. These passages show conclusively that the word has some such sense as 'capture' and since we have a word šallu 'captive' (Muss-Arnolt, loc. cit., p. 1035b), well vouched for, we need not hesitate to assign the force of 'capture' to mašlā'tum. The association of šalāḥu with mašlā'tum embodies, therefore, a play upon words as well as upon ideas.

150 See the previous note and compare also K. 4045, 10 (Boissier, loc. cit.), δ u m m a i r r u sa hirûti imitti parsû u δ al-hu, 'if the network to the right is divided and torn.' Ll. 42-44 began with δ A-NIGIN so that it is permissible from this circumstance also to restore the same signs in ll. 40, 41 and perhaps also in l. 39. The verb, it is to be noted, occurs in the case of other parts of the liver as, e. g., with the porta δ Aepatis, CT, XX, 31, 31, 32 (δ al-hat). In the case of the 'network' the sign indicates that the group of lines and curves are broken up instead of being continuous (alkû as in l. 2), see above p. 293, n. 472.

L. 41, Cols. I and II:

e-[liš]¹⁵¹ ka-na-šu u-šur-tum¹⁵²
"bent above" "defeat"

L. 42, Cols. I and II:

[li-me-]tum¹⁵⁸ u-šur-tum "surrounding" "defeat"

L. 43, Cols. I and II:

[si-hi-ir-tu]¹⁶⁴ [šanė temi]¹⁸⁵
"surrounding" "loss of reason"

The reverse of the tablet which we have now reached comprising Cols. IV to VI is also in a most lamentable condition, without a single line complete for all three columns.¹⁵⁶

For ll. 1-10 the third column is missing entirely and for the first line also Cols. V and VI¹⁰⁷ of the explanatory columns. Ll. 2-10 read so far as preserved as follows:

- 2. tal-lu
- 3, nim-ru "shining"
- 4. ia-ar-tum¹⁵⁸ zanân[šamê]¹⁵⁰
 "flow" (?) "rain from heaven"

151 According to Rm 181, 7. Contrast to Saplis kanasu (above Col. I, l. 18).

152 Cf. Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 51, 15; matuu-sur-ti ramani-sa işabat as a distinctly unfavorable omen as shown by 1. 13 where for a similar omen we find matu busabbu immar "the land will see famine." Usurtu is therefore to be derived from asaru 'to humble,' 'lower,' and the like.

168 Rm 131, 8.

184 Rm 131, 9, which adds as a synonym li-me-tum—an indication that in the third column an ideograph was used—probably Brünnow, No. 10328—which could be read either as lamü (No. 10334) or saḥāru (No. 10339) as, e. g., Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 92, 13.

186 Rm 131, 9 reads san-e Uš-[Uš]=ţo-e-mi as Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 47, 2, compared with the parallel passages CT, XX, 10, 4 and 12, 14 [K. 9213] (sa-niţe-me) 27, 11. The third column is perhaps to be restored on the basis of Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 92, 13, in combination with CT, XX, 10, 4 as follows:

šumma irru sahirūti ištēnit(?) issahirū nu-kur mil-kišanē ţe-e-mi ina harrāni illik taķ-pu-da,

i. e., "if the network is altogether (?) surrounded, perverted judgment, (and) loss of reason in the expedition that thou plannest"—but this cannot of course be regarded as certain. See Jastrow, II, pp. 295 f., n. 6.

156 How far Rm 181 ran parallel with our text it is impossible to say, but presumably not very far since there is no correspondence between Rm 181 and any portions of Cols. V and VI of the reverse of K. 2235 etc.

158 Cf. CT, XX, 15 (K. 6848), 6 [m 6] a - a r - t i from & r u (Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 3b, and see Jastrow, II, p. 339, n. 5.

159 Cf. above, p. 306, n. 131.

5. e-rim-ma-tum e-rim-ma-tum (?)

6. (giš)ku zi-[bu]¹⁶¹
"weapon" "club"

7. ekimtum¹⁶² ekimtu¹⁶² [ummāni]
"misplacement" "taking away [of my army]"

8. kamtum 164 ekimtum 165 da-şa[-tum] 166
"inclosure misplaced" "distress"

9. kamtum şalmat¹⁶⁷ u kanšat¹⁶⁸ erū¹⁶⁹ nakru ušēşi-šu "inclosure black and bent" "the enemy will drive out the strong one"

100 See the passages in Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 162b. Presumably in the third column the comparison was made between a part or some sign on the liver and a 'chain.'

161 (Giš) MU, as already indicated above p. 205, n. 115, is the most common sign for a marking on the liver which, however, is not to be read k a k ku, but s i bu as Boissier recognized. See the author's full note on the subject (Jastrow, II, p. 235, n. 6) The si[bu] in Col. V is not to be taken as the equivalent of (giš) MU as Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 74, proposed, but as the catch-word of the interpretation, based on the fact that (giš) MU = s b u 'club.' The omen, no doubt, read to the effect that if at such a part of the liver there was a s ib u, through the 'club.' i. e., in war, the king or his army or the enemy— as the case may be—would triumph. This play between a marking designated as a kind of weapon, and the 'weapons' of kings and soldiers as the symbol of warfare, is constant in omen texts, e. g., CT, XX, 3, 11; 10, 2-3; etc., etc. The occurrence of si-bu in the column furnishing the catch-word of the interpretation points to the reading sibu and not kakku in the interpretation of the omens as well as in the designation of markings. I therefore adopt this reading for (giš) MU everywhere in the omen texts.

162 KAR (tum) = ekimtum; cf. Brannow, No. 1740.

163 Kar (tu) = e kim tu. The stem e kê m u 'remove,' 'misplace' is of very frequent occurrence in the omen texts and is generally expressed by the same sign as here, namely, Kar. The reading is established by the phonetic element im which is often added, e. g., CT, XX, 15, 30; 30, 13, etc., etc., while the noun is indicated by the addition of tum (CT, XX, 15, rev. 11), tu (CT, XX, 13, rev. 14; 33, 111, 112: 25, obv. 17), ti (CT, XX, 1, 27). Note also the gloss e-ke-mu to Kar (CT, XX, 14, 8 and 27, 9). In the third column no doubt the interpretation was ekim tu um mân nakri "capture of the enemy's army" as CT, XX, 29, rev. 9, and 33, 112; also to be supplied 13 rev. 13 or um mân i 'my army' as CT, XX, 33, 111; 25, obv. 17. The verb ekê mu is used of various parts of the liver (a) of the biliary duct (NA), e. g., CT, XX, 1, 25; (b) of the hepatic duct (GIR), e. g., Pl. 18 (Sm. 1520), rev. 12; 1 (33, 1-18, 433), 11-12; (c) of the X-DUG(GA) e. g., ibid, l. 13; (d) of the hepatic vein (DAN), ibid, l. 14; (e) of the ductus cholodochus (ME-XI) ibid, l. 16, etc., etc.

164 Kam tu which occurs in this and the following lines must be the designation of a species of markings on the liver, not unlike a dihu 'hole.' See Jastrow, II, p. 312, n. 9. I take it from the stem kamā 'inclose.'

166 KAR (tum) as in the preceding line.

166 So also restored by Langdon, JAOS, XXVII, p. 99.

167 MI (at) which occurs also CT, XX, 27, 13 and 33, 99-101 and 103, 104 in connection with the hepatic duct is to be read a a l m at 'dark.' Note that CT, XX, obv. 29, 14 we find p i a u 'white 'said of the hepatic duct, and a r u u 'green' said of a hole in the 'network' inclosure (Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 87, 1 (K. 8272 and also K. 3827). See Jastrow II, p. 341, n. 7.

188 GAM (at) for which the reading kanšat is suggested by the occurrence of kanšāu in our text (CT, XX, 39, 17 and 40, 41) as well as the phonetic complement iš to GAM (CT, XX, 26, 4 and 32, 58). See Brūnnow, No. 7522 and see also CT, XX, 18 (K. 1520), 5 where we must no doubt read GAM (at) as in our passage. For other occurrences of GAM see Jastrow II, p. 334, n. 2.

188 AT-HAL contrasted (Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 8, 2-3) to enst 'weak,' and

10. kamtum hur-ru-ur-tum¹⁷⁰
"inclosure hollowed out"

kišitti kati¹⁷¹
"conquest"

L. 11:

kam-tum eli kamti

kamāte u-a kamāte-šunu ikkamū(?)¹⁷²

"inclosure" over "inclosure"

"with inclosures of woe are their inclosures inclosed"

From here on the fourth column is partially preserved, and with the help of the fifth and sixth columns, and of parallel passages, the lines can to a certain extent be completed:

L. 12, Col. IV, reads:

šumma ina imitti [niptû bu-bu-'u-tum nadat dimtu ana māt šarri ērub].178

"If on the right side of [the hepatic duct there flows serum, sorrow will enter the land of the ruler]."

To this line Cols. V and IV read:

bu-bu-'u-tum¹⁷⁴
"serum"

di-im-tum
"tear"

The association of ideas rests on the play between bubutum as a 'flowing' of some kind and tears, while the other meaning of bubutu 'hunger' and distress in general no doubt also enters as a factor.

therefore to be read er a according to Brūnnow, No. 4168; it is found combined with the same verb as here in Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 6, 13; 96, 19 (with phonetic complement $i); 219, 14, etc.

170 Cf. ha-ri-ir CT, XX, 50, 5, 6 of the processus pyramidalis.

171 Corresponding, no doubt, to kat-su ikasad in the interpretation as, e.g., CT, XX, 47, 55.

172 LAL-MES u-a LAL-MES-Su-nu LAL-MES. An exceedingly difficult line for which see CT, XX, 21 (83, 1-18, 433), 7, and Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 124. Only so much may be regarded as certain, that LAL, occurring three times, rests on the play between kamtum and the meaning kamā 'inclose' vouched for for the sign in question. Cf. Brūnnow, No. 10094. Cf. S. A. Smith, Miscellaneous Assyrian Texts, p. 22 (K. 258), 4. LAL(mu) ikkamu and l. 28 ina ka-ma-a-ti. In place of u-a the parallel CT, XX, 21 has the sign Brūnnow, No. 10251—the usual one for u-a 'alas,' 'woe,' etc.

 173 Completed according to CT, XX, 33, 101. Cf. also il. 102-5. Traces of GIR = niptû 'hepatic duct' are visible.

 $^{174}\, For\ b\, u\, b\, u\, 't\, u\,$ as the liquid—gall and other juices—in the gall-bladder and in the various ducts, see Jastrow, II, p. 334, n. 4.

L. 13, Col. IV, may be restored as follows:

šumma ina ķaķķad 💌 di-[hu šakin zunnu izanun šamtiina reš arhi ša-pi-ik].¹⁷⁸

"If at the head of the biliary duct [there is a hole, the heavens will cause rain to come down in abundance at the beginning of the month]."

Cols. V and VI to this line read:

di-hu¹⁷⁶ zu-un-nu¹⁷⁷
"hole" "rain"

L. 14, Col. IV:

šumma ina imitti pantî¹⁷⁸ sul[-lu¹⁷⁹ šakin aššat amôli a-ka-a ul-lad].¹⁸⁰

"If on the right side of the liver surface there is a 'street'(?), the wife of a man will give birth to a cripple."

Cols. V and VI:

sul-lu a-ku-u'i-al-lad "street" "cripple will be born"

L. 15, Col. IV:

šumma ina imitti pantī sul-[lu dag-šu^m šakin na-pa-aš mahīri ibaši].

"If on the right side of the liver surface [there is a pierced 'street'(?) prices will be high]."

175 For the restoration see the duplicate K. 4432, 3 in combination with Thompson, Reports of the Magicians and Astrologers, No. 139, rev. 3, and Craig, Astrological-Astronomical Texts, Pl. 68 (Rm. 104), obv. 12, etc.

176 A most common designation for a species of markings on the liver, for which the usual ideograph is BURU (Brünnow, No. 8632). For the proof that it is a hole see Jastrow, Religion, Vol? II, p. 237.

177 The neo-Babylonian duplicate K. 4432 reads:

su-un-[nu is-sa-nun] šamū ina reš arķi ša[-pi-ik]

"rain will be abundant, the heavens at the beginning of the month will pour down."

178 BA = panta 'liver surface.' See above p. 307, n. 137.

179 Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 118, discusses this term, but his conclusions are not satisfactory. The sullu of which K. 2000 furnishes a design is clearly again a species of markings on the liver, and in view of the fact that we have GIR = p ad a nu 'road' as the name of one kind of markings, I would suggest identifying the designation with the well-known sullu'street. See Muss-Arnolt, Assyr. Dict., p. 760a.

180 Restored according to K. 258 (S. A. Smith, Miscellaneous Assyrian Texts, p. 22), obv. 26; cf. Delitzsch, HWB, p. 52b, whose suggestion of a k $\hat{\mathbf{u}}$ 'cripple' I follow, though of course it is possible that some other bodily defect is intended.

181 Cf. above p. 293, n. 51.

Cols. V and VI:

sul-lu dak-šu "pierced street" na-pa-aš mahīri 182 "high price"

L. 16, Col. IV:

šumma ina išid sēri ubāni [. . . la itanpuh Adad irahiş u-lu aššat amēli zikara ul-lad]. 168

"If at the base of the back of the processus pyramidalis does not shine forth, Adad will cause an overflow, or the wife of a man will give birth to a male."

Cols. V and VI read:

la itanpuh 188a "not shining forth" ri-ih-şu¹⁸⁴ aššat amēli zikara ul-lad "overflow" (or) "the wife of a man gives birth to a male."

L. 17, Col. IV, can be partially restored as follows:

šumma irru sahirūti e-[bi-ma¹⁸⁶ di-ik-šu¹⁸⁶ kima zibi tuštap-pal zibė ummāni išakanū].

"If the network is inclosed and a point [like a club is set deep, the clubs of my army will prevail]."

 183 See above p. 308, n. 139. The neo-Babylonian duplicate has on the contrary EU (at) — n ad at mahiri 'low price.'

123 For the restoration see CT, XX, 8, 3 and 13; 32, 57; 33, 85, 97-98, RA (iṣ) which a passage like ours—explained in Col. VI as ri-iḥ-ṣu—shows is to be read iraḥiṣ. Cf. Brūnnow, No. 6361. The phrase Adad iraḥiṣ is also frequent in astrological-astronomical omens and reports, e. g., Craig, Astrological-Astronomical Texts, p. 63, 24-29, 57, 12; 60 (K. 851), 5; 44, obv. 10, 23, etc.; Thompson, Reports of Astrologers, etc., Nos. 24, 1 (RA [iṣ]) and 215 rev. 2 (i-ra-ḥi-iṣ) etc., etc.

183a KAR-KAR = i - t a n - p u - h u (Brünnow, No. 8188). Cf. CT, XX, 1, 1.

184 In the text this word appears in Col. VI, but it clearly is the catch-word of the interpretation Adad irahis and therefore belongs to Col. V, alongside with assat amelisikara ullad, which must be taken as referring to an alternative interpretation like CT, XX, 39, 10 (see above p. 298). In the neo-Babylonian duplicate the correct position of the word is clearly indicated by the omission of the dividing-line between the two columns. This duplicate also adds pû-su maşû with a large mouth. See III R. 65, 27, rev., where among birth portents we note a child born with a KA SI, i.e., KA = pû 'mouth,' and SI = maşû 'large' (see above p. 298, n. 90), according to Brûnnow, No. 3395, corresponding, therefore, to SIG = maşû (Brûnnow, No. 11872) in our text, though in both cases a form of the verb ensu 'weak' is also possible (Brûnnow, Nos. 3884 and 11870), and perhaps in view of II B. 27, 52 c-d SIG = en-sû sa us-ni, i.e., 'weak, said of the ear' in the sense of 'defective' is to be preferred.

185 For e-bi, compare the frequent occurrence in the omens attached to the prayers or rather the oracles published by Knudtzon (Assyrtsche Gebete an den Sonnengott), Nos. 1, rev. 14 and 16; 2, rev. 10; 29, rev. 16 and 19; 32, rev. 5: 33, rev. 10, etc. It is no doubt the same verb as underlies [e-] ba-at (CT, XX, 39, 14). See also above p. 300, n. 97, and Jastrow, II p. 305, n. 7.

 186 Di-ik-su suggested by the word in Col. VI, for which see above p. 293, n. 52. It is, of course, possible and even probable that instead of the noun a verbal form of the under-di-ik-šu zi-bu "split" "club"

Cols. V and VI:

L. 18:

šumma ina šapal marti ša imitti zi-[ik-tum¹⁶⁷ nadat bartum ina škalli ibaši].

"If at the lower part of the gall-bladder on the right there is a sharp point(?) . . . revolt of my army."

Cols. V and VI:

zi-iķ-tum bar-tum¹⁸⁸
"spur"(?) "revolt"

L. 19, Col. IV:

šumma martu ši-iķ-[și malat¹⁰⁰ a-su-u ana marși ķāt-su la ub-bal].¹⁰⁰

"If the gall-bladder [is full of impurity, the physician shall not apply his hand to the sick person]."

Cols. V and VI:

ši-iķ-şi mur-şu "sickness"

The association of ideas is clearly based on the sickly looking gall-bladder, and the passage incidentally helps us to specify the sense of the stem šaķāṣu which thus turns out to be a close parallel to the Hebrew YPU 'abomination.'

lying stem was used. Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 75, by taking dikšu and sibu erroneously as synonyms, though elsewhere (pp. 124, 125) he suspects that the two first columns on obverse and reverse of our text cannot embody synonyms in all cases, misses the point entirely.

For the conjectural restoration at the end of the line see Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 45, 6 and 8, and CT, XX, 2, rev. 4-5 and 7, 15. The term s i bu 'club' (see above p. 303, n. 118) shows at all events that $(gi \hat{s})$ XU = ka k k u or si bu occurred in the interpretation, while the use of si bu in Col. V adds further proof that $(gi \hat{s})$ XU, when occurring in omen texts, whether as designation of a species of markings in the description of the omen or in the interpretation, is to be read si bu and not k a k k u. See above p. 312, n. 161.

 $^{187}\,\mathrm{The\ sign}\ z\,\mathrm{i}$ still to be seen, so that the restoration, in view of the word in Col. $\forall I$ can hardly be doubtful.

188 For bar-tum 'revolt' see Jastrow, II, p. 339, n. 4.

189 Cf. III R. 65, No. 1, rev. 11, where among birth omens the case is mentioned of a newborn infant $\hat{s}i \cdot i \nmid -\hat{s}i \mod a \cdot li$.

190 Restored according to CT, XX, 10, 6, and Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 47, 5-6. See Jastrow, II, p. 296. As an alternative one might suggest marşu šuātu imāt 'that sick man will die,' like Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 67, 28.

L. 20:

šumma martu mu-un-[ta-ți-ra-at(?) Adad irahiș].191

"If the gall-bladder appears moist (?) Adad will cause an overflow."

Cols. V and VI:

me-iţ-ru¹⁹²
"moist"

ri-ib-su "overflow"

L. 21:

šumma irru sahirūti ešērit¹⁹⁸[ma kima um-ṣa-ti¹⁹⁴ ekimtu ummāni].¹⁹⁵

"If the network consists of ten (parts) [and is pointed (?) like a thorn (?) capture of my army]."

Cols. V and VI:

um-şa-tum

ekimtum¹⁹⁶ "capture"

There lurks in the association evidently a play of some kind upon umṣatu which is vouched for in the sense of 'distress, need,' and as the name of a sickness (Meissner, Supplement, p. 10a), but which is likewise the name of a plant (V R. 27, No. 7, 61). Since it is a synonym of rubatum and elpitum (see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 30, n. 4), it perhaps designates a thorn.

L. 22:

šumma dan 197 kima [kak-ku-tum 197a

"If the portal vein is like a kakkutu."

 $^{191}\mathrm{Suggested}$ again by the occurrence of rihşu as the catch-word of the interpretation as above, p. 315.

192 Cf. Muss-Arnolt. Assyr. Dict., p. 585c. Col. IV probably contained the participle, I, 2, of mataru, namely mu-un-ta-ti-ra-at (or muntatrat) for mumtatirat.

182 The 'network' consists of a varying number of curves and lines from five to as many as seventeen being mentioned in the texts. Cf. Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 93, where ll. 16-17, 'ten' parts as in our passage are indicated. The usual number seems to be fourteen. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 256, n. 4.

197 For DAN = dannu 'hepatic vein' see above p. 296, n. 75.

197a Comparisons of parts of the liver with all kinds of objects, instruments, vessels, animals, etc., are very frequent in omen texts. See, e. g., Boissier, Choix de Textes, pp. 79 (gall-bladder), 91 (network), 103 (xak-ti), 104 (Dan), 139, 8-9; 141, 2, 3, 5, 7, 9, 10, 12, 14, 16, etc., (xibu); CT, XX, 3, 23, 25; 7, 2-5; 10, 15 (hepatic duct), etc.

L. 25:

šumma ina libbi niri²⁰¹⁴ di[-hu libbu dihu nadi zunnė ina šamė ibašū].301

"If within the common bile duct [there is a hole within a hole, there will be rain from heaven]."

196 Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 95, 19, 20 (also to be restored CT, XX, 29, obv. 16), we have a verbal form it-ta-nap-šal from pašālu for which, since it is used in juxtaposition with ik-bi-is 'depressed,' Boissier suggests 'misplaced.' I am rather inclined to take it in the sense of 'deeply set.' For our word, however, this passage is of no avail. In a lamentation song (Haupt, Akkadisch-Sumerische Keilschrifttexte, No. 19, obv. 10) we have an expression aptašilki 'I touch thee' (Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 81, n. 3). Is pišlatum perhaps to be connected with this sense? Or has the first sign (Brünnow, No. 6926) also the value mas and are we to read masla't u 'capture' as above? Until we can determine the meaning of kak-ku-tum it is idle to speculate any farther. Is this perhaps also the designation of some prickly or bristling plant suggested by the 'bristling' appearance of the portal vein?

200 Traces of și are to be seen. Cf. im-ta-și above, p. 298, n. 90.

201 Dihu MI. See above, p. 312, n. 167, and for further uses of MI = şalmu ef. Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 70, 1-2 (with the kisad kabitti 'neck of the liver'), 72, 12-13 di-hu nadi-maşalmu with the amartu kabitti 'edge of the liver') 67, 34, MI(at) = şalmat in connection with the head of the gall-bladder; 87, 2, di-hu salmu nad1 (with the 'network'), etc., etc.

201a For ME-NI = niru ductus choledochus, see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 354, n. 2. 202 For the restoration see the following note.

Cols. V and VI:

di-hu libbu di-hi

zunné ibašů²⁰⁸ "rainstorms will take place"

The last six lines of the tablet are taken up with the various forms of the markings on the liver that are fantastically compared with weapons and therefore called zibe 'clubs.' That these markings follow the three lines devoted to dibe 'holes' is an indication of a certain order observed in the arrangement of the tablet itself, since 'clubs' and 'holes' represent the two main divisions of the markings on the liver and therefore occur far more frequently than others like padanu 'road' sullu 'street' (?) dikšu 'point,' and the like. The lines in our text in connection with parallel passages from collections of omens furnish the definite proof as set forth in detail elsewhere in a special article by the writer, that these 'clubs' according to their shape were compared with the weapons of the gods, frequently mentioned in religious texts and pictured as symbols of the gods on the kudurru monuments or boundary stones.

Referring the reader for further details to the article in question, we may content ourselves with an enumeration of the weapons with brief explanatory remarks, all the more so since with one exception the important fourth column for these lines which should furnish the sign noted, and the interpretation, is wanting.

L. 26, Col. IV, can be restored as follows:

šumma ina bi-rit ni-ri u [nipt1²⁰⁰ KAK-SU-U zibu išītu ša En-lil šakin, En-lil išīta-šu ka-liš išakan u-lu Adad] māta i-ra-[hi-iṣ].²¹⁰

Stone of Nebuchadressar I from Nippur (Philadelphia, 1905), chap. i.

200 Read GIR = nipt 1, which is not the reading of Na as I erroneously held at the time of writing "Notes on Omen Texts," loc. cit., p. 112; see Jastrow, II, p. 279, n. 2. The traces of GIR are quite clear.

²¹⁰ Correct the restoration given in "Notes on Omen Texts" accordingly. On the basis of CT, XX, 3, 13, where we read: šumma GIR šinā-ma ina bi-ri-šu-nu KAK-SU-U

"If between the common bile duct and the hepatic duct [there is a KAK-SU-U, the club of destruction of Enlil, Enlil will bring about destruction everywhere, or Adad will cause an overflow in the land]."

To this line Cols. V and VI read:

EAR-SU-U zibu išttu^m ša En-lil "KAK-SU-U" "club of destruction of Enlil"

From a text published by Boissier (Choix de Textes) are where we read summa KAK-SU-U zibu isitu sa En-lil, it follows that KAK-SU-U is actually the designation of one of the weapons of Enlil, or at all events is associated with one of his weapons, just as elsewhere we learn of a zibu noted on the liver which is designated as the weapon of Istar (zibu Istar), and the specific name of which is given in a gloss as di-e-pi. In the passage in question KAK-SU-U¹¹⁴ is used without any further specification, precisely as elsewhere thmu saku 'mighty storm' is used šakin Nergal ikkal, Adad ira-hiş-ma En-lil amāta-šu ka-liš išakan, "If the hepatic duct is doubled and between the two there is a KAE-SU-U, Nergal will destroy, Adad will overflow, and Enlil's command will cause destruction everywhere," it is evident that the words to be seen in Col. IV, mata i-ra[hi-ia], refer to Adad. We must therefore assume here, as in other cases, an alternative interpretation (cf. CT, XX, 83, 97-98) or as in the line just quoted a double interpretation, referring to both Adad and Enlil, and it is possible that Nergal also was introduced. In justification of placing the words sibu isttu sa Enlil immediately after KAK-SU-U and taking them as the description and name of the marking known as KAK-SU-U, we may point to the fragment published by Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 118, referred to in the following note. Enlil also occurs with Nergal in Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 141, 11-12. In all these cases Enlil of Nippur is meant, as is indicated by the writing En-lil which, as Clay has conclusively shown in his article ("Ellil, the God of Nippur," in AJSL, XXIII, pp. 269 ff), always designates this deity whose name down to the latest period was pronounced Ellil (from En-lil). In Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 141, 12, we find him, however, designated as EN-E-KUE-RA, i. e., 'lord of Ekurra; which may, of course, be due to a late copyist. In CT, XX, 12 (K. 9213), 4-5, we find (ilu) Bel (Brünnow, No. 1497) which can, of course, stand for Marduk.

211 Cf. Brünnow, No. 11209, occurring also CT, XX, 7, 19-20 išitu ana ummāni imķut and išītu ana ummān nakri imķut as well as l. 21, išītu u saḥ-maš-tum (see Jastrow, Religion, II, p. 346, n. 10) 'destruction and uprising;' cf. CT, XX, 33, 97, 98. Adad ina māt[rubī] iraḥiş u-lu išītu ina māt rubī ibaši and Adad ina māt nakri iraḥiş u-lu išītu ina māt nakri ibaši—an alternative interpretation (a) either 'Adad will cause an overflow in the ruler's (or enemy's) land or (b) destruction in the ruler's (or enemy's) land will take place,' and where we may assume on the basis of CT, XX, 3, 13, that išītu refers to the act of Enlil, just as ilu ina māt rubī (or ina māt nakri ikkal) (CT, XX, 33, 99-100) refers, as in CT, XX, 3, 13, to Nergal.

212 Choix de Textes, p. 118 (K. 2089), 2. Cf. Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 46, rev. 4.

212 V R. 63, II, 29-30. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 261, n. 10, and "Notes on Omen Texts" (AJSL, XXIII, p. 105). A fuller name of the weapon da-'i-pu za-ai-ri 'overthrower of enemies' occurs as the weapon of Marduk in the Creation Epic (Tablet IV, 30, ed. King). A zi bu associated with Istar is also mentioned, CT, XX, 48, 39.

 214 CT, XX, 44, 51, KAE-SU-U appears qualified as ekimtum 'misplaced' (see above, p. 312), but occurring in a line which is chiefly devoted to different kinds of markings (see above, p. 319).

to describe a zibu, which, as we know from another passage, consists of a twofold zibu. Infortunately, we do not know the phonetic reading for KAK-SU-U nor of any of the four designations of zibê that follow, namely (Col. VI):

L. 28. PAL-BU-U.

L. 29. DI-DI-SU-U.

L. 30. (giš) ku peš(tuš).

L. 31. UT-DI-SU-U.

In the case of all these four designations the adjoining column (Col. V) has

while Col. IV begins in all four lines with the sign ša, which is followed after a break—that appears, however, to have been left blank—at the end of the line by the names of gods, of which only the last one is preserved, namely, Šamaś.

I am inclined to conjecture that the sa is an indication that the signs noted for these four lines, as also for the fifth and last one of the tablet, are the same as for l. 26, except that the *char*acter of the marking varies according to the indications given ²¹⁵ Inschrift der Stele Nabu'naids (ed. Messerschmidt), Col. XI, 11-13. See Jastrow, "Notes on Omen Texts," pp. 108-8, where other occurrences of û m u ä a k u are given.

216 Other occurrences of this sign GUGU(?) = i it u in omen texts are as follows: CT. XX. 7.21, pir i štu i šī tu u sah-maš-tum 'omen of destruction and uprising' to be taken as an abbreviated interpretation for some such phrase as is found CT, XX, 3, 13, Nergal ikkal, etc., or, as we have assumed for our passage. Enlil išītu kališ išakan, etc. Similarly CT, XX, 7, 19-20, išītu ana ummāni imķut and išītu ana ummān nakri the interpretation is given in an abbreviated form, the term isit u being regarded as sufficient to suggest the kind of 'destruction' that is meant: and the same is the case CT. XX. 33. 97-98, as well as CT, XX, 6 (Sm. 1412), 9-11, which are to be restored according to Pl. 7, 19-21, A further abbreviation occurs Sm. 674 (Besold, Catalogue, p. 1425), where we find (l. 4) simply isttu u sahmastum. In the text Rm 2, 105 (Besold, Catalogue, p. 1645) we encounter a sibu isttu as a part of the sign noted and which is therefore to be assumed as a term used in place of one of the six fuller designations in our text (CT. XX. 42, 26-32). though it is curious that no further specification of any deity is added. Since, however, in the preceding line the 'weapon of Samas' known as at-mu-u ki-e-nu 'just decree' is mentioned, we assume that sibu išītu, which thus turns out to be a very general term for a god's weapon, refers here to this same god, Samas. Note that sibu isitu is to be supplied also for the four following lines in Rm 2, 106, the purpose being to specify the different places near the hepatic duct where the zibu, associated with the weapon of Samas, appears, and according to which the interpretation varies. The omen collections are full of such abbreviations, just as are other religious texts prepared for school purposes. See, e. g., Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, pp. 17, 26, 27, 30-33, etc. I it u also occurs as part of the interpretation of an omen, e.g., Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 226, 15, and the verb (plural) CT, XV, 50, 1. See Langdon, JAOS, 28, 147, who has, however, not recognized the plural sign in the passage which he there discusses.

in Col. VI. Col. IV for ll. 28-32 if written out would therefore read:

28. šumma ina birit niri u niptī PAL-šu-v zibu išītu ša (ilu)....šakin, etc.

"If between the common bile duct and the hepatic duct there is a PAL-SU-U, the club of destruction of the god"

29. šumma ina birit niri u niptī pr-pr-su-u zibu išītu ša (ilu) šakin, etc.

"If between the common bile duct and the hepatic duct there is a pr-pr-sv-v, the club of destruction of the god "

30. [šumma ina birit niri u niptī zibu šalaltuš(?)²¹⁷ zibu išitu ša Ira(?)²¹⁸ šakin Ira ri-șu-ut ummāni illik].

"If between the common bile duct and the hepatic duct there is a 'triple' zibu, the club of destruction of Ira(?), Ira(?) to the help of my army will go."

31. šumma ina birit niri u niptī zibu ut-dī-su-u zibu išītu ša Šamaš²¹⁰ sakin, etc.

"If between the common bile duct and the hepatic duct there is a UT-DI-SU-U, the club of destruction of Šamaš. "

The name of the weapon in the last line (l. 32) written GAB-LAH (HA) is to be read sahmaštu 'uprising.' The first part of Col. IV is therefore to be read:

šumma ina birit niri u niptī sahmaštum zibu išītu ša Ea šakin, etc.

"If between the common bile duct and the hepatic duct there is an 'uprising' zibu, 'the club of destruction of Ea. '"

217 Written PES (Brünnow, No. 11878) the sign for three, and which, therefore, in view of the phonetic complement tuš (Brünnow, No. 10515), I propose to read šalaltuš literally 'three of it' in the sense of 'triple.' What a 'triple' zibu looks like may be seen in the illustration attached to the school text in Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 143. In view of CT XX, 48, 40, it is perhaps to be associated with Sin.

218 The traces point to the sign, Brūnnow, No. 258, the usual one for the god of pestilence, Ira, who is a form of Nergal, or rather is one of his manifestations. The god is also mentioned in the omen text—also a school text—published by Boissier, Choix de Textes, p. 141, 2, which passage, together with CT, XX, 28, obv. 4, suggests the conjectural restoration for the end of the line, though of course other phrases are possible, as, e.g., ri-şu-u-a 'my help' (Boissier, loc. cit., p. 143, 8), or ri-şu-āu ippalkitšu 'his helpers will desert him,' CT, XX, 13, obv. 11-12, etc.

219 Note at mû kênu as the name of the weapon of Šamaš in Rm 2, 106 (see above, p. 321, n. 216). A zi bu associated with Šamaš is also mentioned, CT, XX, 48, 36.

250 Compare Sm 674 (Besold, Catalogue, p. 1425) GUGU(†)U GAB-LAḤ (ḥu) with CT, XX, 7, 21, GUGU U saḥ-maš-tum from which we obtain the equation GAB-LAḤ (ḥa or ḥu) = saḥ maštum 'uprising.' GAB-LAḤ as the interpretation of signs noted on the liver is found outside of the passages above referred to under išitu (above, p. 321, n. 216), CT, XX, 31, 35, 36. GAB-LAḤ (= sah maštu) u mmān i 'uprising of my army' and GAB-LAḤ ummān nakri 'uprising of the enemy's army' (also to be supplied, CT, XX, 4 (K. 6689), 7, 8, and Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 220, 2, 3). See also Boissier, Documents Assyriens, p. 226, 16, 17, etc., etc.

In each of these lines we are furthermore justified in assuming at the end of the fourth column, an indication of what the gods referred to-Ira, Šamaš, and Ea, and the two whose names are not preserved 221 — would do. All this, however, it must be borne in mind, is not set forth but only tacitly assumed. purpose of the last five lines is to furnish the designations of various forms of 'clubs' observed on the liver and to specify the gods with whose weapons these markings are associated. Cols. V and VI, accordingly, in the case of these five lines, deviate in a measure from the general principle of this school text in supplying us with names of 'clubs' and the associations which they suggest, but not actually with catch-words of the sign and of the interpretation respectively, except in so far as the 'clubs' determine such interpretation. The same is the case with 1. 26 where although the sign noted, as well as the interpretation, is written out in full, Col. VI repeats the designation of the 'club,' while the adjoining fifth column gives the name of the god with whose weapon the form of the marking is associated. Considering for a moment the five unidentified names of 'clubs,' it will be observed that four of them end in su-u, which appears likewise as the name of a stone cocurring in religious texts and elsewhere. One of the common equivalents of su being erabu 'increase' (Brunnow, No. 166), it is reasonable to conclude that this element in the name specifies an 'excess' or large amount of some quality, somewhat like the Atar in such combinations as Atar-hasis or Hasis-atra, 'exceedingly wise.' Proceeding on this hypothesis, KAK-SU-U might mean 'excessive in deed,' 224 PAL-SU-U 'excessive in hostility,'256 DI-DI-SU-U 'excessive in conquest,'256 and UT-DI-²²¹ We should expect listar and Sin to be mentioned since both of these together with Samaš occur in the text CT, XX, 48, 35-39, several times referred to (above p. 320, n. 213). For listar's weapons see also above, p. 320, n. 213, and Sin is found (in combination with Almu Allamu), CT, XX, 23, obv. 11. If the 'club' UT-DI-SU-U should turn out to be the same as at m û kê n u, we might restore the line according to Rm 108. See Jastrow, "Notes on Omen Texts" (AJSL, XXIII, p. 102).

su-u 'storm excessive in perfection' — names that would all be appropriate as designations for the weapons of deities, and on a par with sahmaštum 'uprising' and di-e-pu 'overthrow,' û mu šahu 'mighty storm,' etc. The first line of the second tablet of the series preserved in the colophon continues the enumeration of various kinds of zibe, but the line also shows that in the second tablet a different plan was followed. We no longer have a setting forth of the principles underlying the system of hepatoscopy, but a continuous enumeration of signs noted with the interpretation directly attached. The colophon line reads as follows:

šumma zibu šu-šu-ru ša imitti marti, zibu šul-mu[ša šu-mēli marti zibu šarri(?) ša-]niš²²³ zibu ṣālilu.

"If an 'overthrow' zibu is to the right of the gall-bladder and a 'perfection' zibu to the left of the gall-bladder, the club of the ruler will overthrow (?) (or) the club will be a protection."

Among the omens connected with the campaigns of Sargon, we find an almost parallel sign noted, a šušuru club to the right of the gall-bladder and a suhuru 'inclosure' club to the left, and the interpretation involved is favorable, precisely as it is in our line. The colophon which has already been discussed offers nothing further of moment, except that as in the case of colophons attached to omen series and to rituals in which the consultation of the omen gods par excellence, Samaš and Adad, the bêlê bîri lords of inspection' is involved, these two gods, instead of Nebo and Tašmit are invoked as the ones who inspired Ašurbanapal 227 DI = $ulmu (Brūnnow, No. 9538), suggested also by CT, XX, 42, 33, where mention is made of a sibu DI (mu) = $ulmu. But for this, seeing that DI-SU-U is the name of the weapon of Samaš the 'judge' among the gods, one might have thought of DI = dInu 'judgment' (Brūnnow, No. 9526). For the remaining name the "triple" sibu see above, p. 327, n. 217, and compare the "double" sibu in the omens attached to the Stele der Inschrift Nabu'naids (ed. Messerschmidt), Col. XI, 11, probably intended as a description of Ninib's weapon. See Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 268, n. 4, and for the names of various other weapons associated with Ninib which bear much the same character as the interpretations here proposed, see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. I, p. 461.

The investigation of this important school text has, I trust, shed some further light on the interesting methods followed by Babylonian pedagogues in initiating their pupils into the mysteries of hepatoscopy. Were it fully preserved it would probably have solved most, if not all, of the difficulties that still remain to be cleared up in the study of these texts. Let us hope that some fortunate chance has in store for us the finding of the original from which the scribes of Ašurbanapal prepared their copies, or if not the original, which, as in the case of all the omen texts of the royal library, probably dates back to the days of Hammurabi, 250 a later copy prepared for the temple school at Babylon, or for one of the other schools attached to the temples in the south.

222 For other passages see Jastrow, Religion, Vol. II, p. 226, n. 1.

223 Indicated, e. g., by the frequent use of the sign şa (Brünnow, No. 11720) instead of sa (Brunnow, No. 3070) as the suffix of the third person feminine and which is characteristic of texts of the Hammurabi period. See also above, p. 820, n. 210. I owe this suggestion to Dr. Arno Poebel. The Assyrian copyists did not modernize their texts, but conscientiously followed the models before them. The absence of Marduk and the prominence given to Enlil in these omen texts of Ašurbanapal's library likewise point to their great antiquity. so that even the copies of Hammurabi's days would go back to a still earlier age, to a time when the chief god of Nippur was still at the head of the pantheon. We should expect, therefore, to find copies of omen texts like the one here investigated among the remains of the temple school at Nippur. If any such texts were found by Haynes at Nippur in 1900, it is not unreasonable to expect that after seven years' delay some specimens at least should be published; and it is perhaps not superfluous to emphasize that even literary texts, if they turn out to be school exercises or school copies, belong to a temple school and not to a hypothetical temple library. Progress in every science is marked by increasing and more clearly defined differentiations in the technical nomenclature. A failure to distinguish between "temple archives," "official reports," "temple school documents" and literary texts pure and simple, which alone, if occurring in large numbers, would justify us in assuming that they belong to a "temple library" falls necessarily at the present stage of Assyriological investigation under suspicion of being a strategic device to cover a retreat from an indefensible position. It is not a question of terms but of what we wish to convey when we use a certain term.

THE ORIGINAL LANGUAGE OF THE PARABLES OF ENOCH

NATHANIEL SCHMIDT

Guillaume Postel, who in Rome was shown a copy of the Ethiopic Book of Enoch by an Abyssinian priest and had its contents explained to him, seems to have regarded it as a genuine work of the patriarch with interpolations from a Book of Noah. It was his opinion, based partly on the testimony of Josephus concerning the two inscribed stelae erected by Seth, partly on general considerations, that Enoch wrote this book in Hebrew. The same view appears to have been held by Gilbert Génébrard.

Joseph Scaliger had no knowledge of the Ethiopic text, but he inferred from the character of the Greek fragments preserved in the Chronographia of Georgius Syncellus, which he published for the first time, that they were translated from the Hebrew. He deemed it necessary to apologize for introducing so tedious and indelicate a work on the ground that it was a translation from the Hebrew, possessed a high age, and had been quoted by Jude. Like Erasmus, Clarius, and Nicolas Zegers, he evidently looked upon it as an apocryphal writing. His statement, 'vetustissimus est liber' should be considered in the light of this estimate, and it is possible that 'ex hebraismo' should be interpreted as broadly as Jerome's 'ab hebraeo sermone' generally is.

Drusius may, at one time, have thought of the Aramaic, as he explained 'Venit Dominus' in Jude's quotation: 'id sonat in liugua Syrorum, Maranatha, extremum genus excommunicationis apud Ebraeos, quod et Samatha dicitur quasi KIN NEW.' But in emending 'cum sanctis millibus suis' into 'cum decem millibus sanctis suis,' he recurred to the Hebrew TUTP ," and in his last note he translated the whole passage into Hebrew. Scaliger's view was accepted by Louis Cappel. Grotius, also, looked for a Hebrew or Aramaic original, as he ascribed the apocryphon to the Rabbis, mentioned its quotation in Zohar, and repeated the linguistic explanations of Drusius. Less important was the defense of a Hebrew original by Jean Boulduc, Joachim Mader, and William Whiston, who believed in the Enochian authorship.

On the other hand, J. H. Hottinger maintained that the book was written in Greek by a Hellenistic Jew. This would explain both Hebraisms and Greek paronomasias, like Φαρμαρος (for Φαρμακος, Fabricius) εδιδαξεν Φαρμακειας, as well as the ignorance of Hebrew names in the passage mentioning Ναφηλειμ and Ελιονδ. He was followed by Heidegger, Morhof apparently, and Fabricius. The arguments could not easily be met as long as the patristic quotations and the Syncellus fragments were the only sources; and they undoubtedly influenced not only Hermann Witsius, who, following Cave and Dodwell, ascribed the work to some 'Hellenistic Cabbalist,' or Christian heretic of the second century, but also Richard Simon, John Toland, Jean Astruc, who declared 'j'avoue que les écrits attribuez aux anciens patriarches me paroissent supposez, and Johann Salomo Semler who held that 'die Beschreibungen in Briefe Juda und 2 Petri sind aus Apocryphis griechischer Juden.

In 1769, the Ethiopic Enoch which until then had apparently been seen by only three Europeans, Pico della Mirandola, Guillaume Postel, and Gilles de Loches, was discovered in Abyssinia by James Bruce. In harmony with local tradition, he seems to have looked upon the book as a part of the Scriptures possessed by the Jews in Abyssinia before the introduction of Christianity and translated by them from the Hebrew. He regarded it, in fact, as having been held in high authority even among the pagans, and identified it with the Sabaean book ascribed to Enoch, while distinguishing it from that quoted by Jude as well as from that possessed by the Rabbis. Nevertheless, he considered it a Gnostic work, and was so disgusted with it that he could at first read only a few chapters. J. G. Eichhorn, in commenting upon his account, suggested that Egyptian Jews may, in the time of the Ptolemies, have emigrated to Abyssinia, ³¹The neo-Platonic philosophers of Harran, surrounded on all sides by Christians, may very well have been familiar with Enoch, and identified him with Hermes, long before they were obliged to seek toleration as monotheists and 'people of a book' under the shelter of the name 'Sabaeans,' by which Muhammad had meant the Mandaeans. Chwolson, Die Senbier, 1856, I, 627 ff. exaggerates the wickedness of these pagan philosophers, leans too heavily upon his theory of craftiness and fraud, and underestimates the honest syncretism as well as the genuine theistic unitarianism of this movement.

and made a translation of the Alexandrian version into Geez. Ten years later, Sylvestre de Sacy* introduced some chapters of the book in a Latin translation. He was the first scholar clearly to express the opinion that it was originally written in Aramaic. In a review of Laurence's translation, he observed, 'je partage entièrement son opinion, pourvu qu'on prenne le nom de langue hébraique ici avec quelque latitude; car il se pourrait que l'original eût été écrit en chaldéen, ou dans l'idiome que parloient les habitans de la Palestine au temps de J. C. et des apôtres, et qui ne nous est que bien imparfaitement connu.'* Laurence had, indeed, himself stated that the lost Greek copy was 'perhaps nothing more than a mere translation from some Hebrew or Chaldee original;'* but the alternative did not seem to the French orientalist to be strongly enough emphasized.

Even after the publication of the English version, the arguments of Hottinger appeared to Lücke sufficient to warrant the assumption of a Greek original. Against this view, A. G. Hoffmann urged the Hebrew names of the angels and the quotations in Zohar, and maintained that the Greek book was translated from Hebrew or Aramaic. It is the merit of Edward Murray to have first presented the important reasons for a Semitic original found in the paronomasias of Enoch 77:1-3. This was subsequently recognized by Hoffmann, who added new arguments. Murray was forced by his untenable theories to think of Hebrew; some interpolations he ascribed to an Abyssinian author. Gfrörer was not familiar with Murray's arguments when he sided with Lücke. Bruno Bauer, who regarded the 'Son of Man' passages and 90:37 f. as of Christian origin, probably assumed that they were written in Greek. This was distinctly affirmed by Friedrich Böttcher" in regard to the Christian interpolations, while he deemed the earlier text to have been translated from Hebrew. His suggestion that the name of the sun 1-71 in 78:1 was in Aramaic 1725 should not have been overlooked by all exegetes. Less felicitous was his 727 = aliquid for 17C 'word' in 90:38, where Aram. N2N7 was transliterated $\rho\eta\mu a$."

August Dillmann decided that the original must have been either Hebrew or Aramaic. He criticized Laurence for not possessing the necessary qualifications 'properly to translate and nuderstand such a work translated from the Aramaic into the Greek and from the Greek into the Ethiopic. But even after the discovery of the Akhmim text, he did not absolutely commit himself beyond the statement that a 'Hebrew-Aramaic original' had been proved at least for chaps. 1–36. Jellinek maintained that the book was originally written in Hebrew; while Ewald held that it was a translation of an Aramaic or Hebrew original. The authority of these scholars did not, however, deter C. H. Weisse from considering the entire work as a Greek production; and even Köstlin thought it possible that the Parables were written in Greek. Hilgenfeld voted for Hebrew, Volkmar, Michel Nicolas, and Philippi for Greek.

A decided step forward was taken when Joseph Halévy^{ss} presented his suggestive essay on the subject. But in spite of his arguments, Maurice Vernes^{se} assumed an Aramaic origin for the groundwork, while he thought that the interpolations, to which he reckoned the Parables and about half of the work, were written in Greek. Subsequently he abandoned the latter theory, and left the question open between Hebrew or Aramaic. 41 Hausrath 42 followed Dillmann, as did also Schodde. Eugène de Faye" regarded the Parables as the work of a Hellenistic Jew with Christian interpolations, and consequently as written in Greek. Hebrew was favored by Lazarus Goldschmidt, who translated Dillmann's version into this language, with sometimes very valuable notes. In editing the Akhmim text, Adolphe Lods discussed the original language, but was not able to decide between Hebrew and Aramaic; and Dieterich still inclined to the Greek. Charles, however, strongly held that the author wrote in Hebrew, and often repeated this view. It is a significant fact that this scholar, to whom students of Enoch are so deeply indebted, has recently reached the conclusion that chaps. 6-36 and probably 72-82 were written in Aramaic, while 37-71, 83-104, and probably 1-5 were written in Hebrew.

Arguments in favor of an Aramaic original were drawn by Schurer from the presence in the Akhmim text of such words as φουκα = ΝΟΕ (18:8), Μανδοβαρα (28:1) and Βαβδηρα (29:1), corrupt for Ma $\delta \beta a \rho a = \Box \Box$. Israel Léviⁿ pointed out that any Jew would know the meaning of Hebrew words like Jared and Hermon, while only one speaking Aramaic would write מדברא, and ארקאל. B. D. Eerdmans added to these הלבונא (31:1) הלבונא (6:6), which would be preferable to Heb. in the 'Son of Man' passages; and he was fortified in his position by De Goeje, who called attention to the term το (βατους 10:19) in our oldest Aramaic inscription. In a paper presented to the Society for Biblical Literature in 1895, I expressed my conviction that the original was written in Aramaic. Hans Lietzmann reached the same conclusion. Wellhausen de quoted the plural χερουβιν (14:11, 18) and several cases of the status emphaticus in favor of an Aramaic original. Theodor Zahn" expressed his belief that Jude quoted, not from the Greek, but from the Hebrew or Aramaic Enoch. G. Beer¹⁸ thought of Hebrew or Aramaic, with an evident leaning toward the latter, strengthened by Pratorius," whose judgment is indicated by his suggestion that the Greek translator read דדינא for in 29:1. Paul Fiebig[®] and J. Van Loon[®] declared for the Aramaic. But Johannes Flemming was not ready to decide between Hebrew and Aramaic. Enno Littmanns favored the former, and François Martin,4 on the whole, thought Hebrew more probable. Finally, F. C. Burkitt drew from the analogy of war and inferences that seem to indicate that he regarded the author of the Parables as having written in Aramaic.

The view that the Parables of Enoch were originally written in Greek, held by Hottinger, Heidegger, Fabricius, Semler, Lücke, Gfrörer, Böttcher, Weisse, Köstlin, Volkmar, Nicolas, Philippi, Vernes, De Faye, and Dieterich, is not likely to be seriously defended again. Every competent scholar today recognizes that they must originally have been written in a Semitic language, and that none other than Hebrew or Aramaic can be considered, as was seen by Scaliger, Drusius, Grotius, Laurence, Hoffmann, Dillmann, Ewald, Hausrath, Schodde, Lods, Beer, and Flemming. But is it possible to go farther and to affirm that the author or authors wrote in Hebrew, as especially Whiston, Murray, Jellinek, Hilgenfeld, Halévy, Goldschmidt, Charles, Littmann, and Martin have done? Or can it be maintained that these chapters were written in Aramaic, as De Sacy, Schürer, Lévi, Eerdmans, De Goeje, Schmidt, Lietzmann, Wellhausen, Pratorius, Fiebig, Van Loon, and Burkitt seem to have done? The answer must depend upon the possibility of explaining by the Aramaic those peculiarities for which hitherto recourse was had to the Hebrew, and of discovering new indications of one language or the other behind the Ethiopic text.

Halévy⁵⁶ cited three instances from the Parables themselves (40:9; 51:3; and 62:16) and a large number from the interpolations (41:5, 44; 60:6, 14, 15; 65:8, 10a, b, 11; 67:13; 68:2, 3; and 69:1, 6, 8, 13), in which he deemed it necessary to assume a Hebrew original; Charles⁵⁷ called attention to five from the Parables (40:9; 45:3; 46:4b; 52:9; and 56:7) and five from the interpolations (65:10a, b, 11; 67:13; and 69:13), which seemed to him conclusively to point in the same direction.

To begin with the Parables, both of these scholars regarded the statement concerning Raphael (40:9) as containing a reference to the derivation of the name Raphael which is possible only in Hebrew—NET='to heal.'* But Noldeke declares that 'NET ist gemeinsemitisch' and refers to Ephr. Syr. II, 447 C, and the Palmyrene names and refers to Ephr. Syr. II, 447 C, and the Palmyrene names and refers to Ephr. Syr. II, 447 C, and the Palmyrene names and refers to Ephr. Syr. II, 447 C, and the Palmyrene names and refers to Ephr. Syr. II, 447 C, and the Palmyrene names are for the Aramaic." In 45:3 we should read: 'and he will try their works;' the Aramaic was probably and read: 'and he will try their works;' the Aramaic was probably as a dittograph of 46:4b. If the text has suffered expansion, it is more natural to suppose that Approx: Attractions: is a reminiscence of Luke 1:52, winter: Attractions: is a reminiscence of Luke 1:52, winter: Attractions. In 51:3 Halévy's instinct led him rightly to Micah 7:5. But The does not solve the riddle. For The has no such meaning as 'thought' or 'intellect' in Hebrew. The author probably wrote בלילות פונדה יintellect' in Hebrew. The author probably wrote בלילות פונדה 'the eloquence of his mouth.' But מלילות has the sense of 'rationality' as well as 'eloquence;' and the translator gave the Ethiopic equivalent for the latter, אריה הארץ, thus introducing 'the thoughts of his mouth' which have caused so much trouble.

A similar mistake was made by the translator in 52:9 where he rendered 'TRIT' by Lthat 'will be denied,' not observing that 1/100 also means 'destroy' and should have been so translated here. In 56:7 an excellent text is secured by itacising hrton, not found in g, and accepting the negative of t^2 (LLha). The hahho of the older group of MSS has removed the occasion for Halévy's speculations in 62:16.

None of these passages shows that the Parables were written in Hebrew. In fact, the difficulties for which Halévy and Charles have resorted to Hebrew can in some instances be met only on the theory that the work was written in Aramaic.

As the Apocalypse of Noah seems to have been translated from the Greek, and parts of it were probably interpolated in the Parables by the Ethiopic editor, there is, indeed, no necessity a priori for supposing that it was originally written in the same language as the Enoch books. But a consideration of the passages quoted from the interpolations points even here to the It is not certain that 41:3-8; 44, belonged to the Apocalypse of Noah, but the secondary character is unmistakable, and the ultimate source of these verses may quite probably have been the apocalyptic writing quoted elsewhere in the Parables. According to Halévy's conjecture, nond: Hink in 41:5 goes back to בשבוע שעבדו בה which in the dialect of the Mishna signifies 'to be bound by an oath.' If this is so, an Aramaic speaking Jew may have known and used the phrase, and 324: might be due to a confusion of עבר and עבר, 'to dwell.' Unfortunately, Halévy quotes no instance of this usage. Charles thinks of שכנו being mistaken for שכנו . This would be possible also in Aramaic; but the mistake is not very probable. Radermacher suggests a corruption of ωρκισθησαν into ωικισθησαν, but this would not explain the Ethiopic text. The text accepted by Flemming and Charles seems to be a compromise of two variants በነበ: ዘኃደሩ: and በመሰባ: ዘነብሩ: The former may represent יאחר דעמרו 'wherever their position may be,' the latter is probably a gloss suggested by אפרינותא דימנותא, הימנותא במומא, הימנותא 'because of the oath by which they were united.' In 44 the partitive 72 is as natural in Aramaic as in Hebrew. In 60:6 the MS u has the negative which was missed; hence there is no reason for thinking of a confusion of עבר with עבר. In 60:14 the Aramaic שורא would give the same sense as the Hebrew סדר; but the idea of 'pauses' (Aram. מדר) in the thunder is quite as plausible as 'arrangements' of the thunder; and this applies also to 60:15. In 65:8, there is no objection to the text LTARC='is pre-eminent.' Charles conjectures that ውኢድት ኃለት in 65: 10a goes back to a misreading of for יחשב. It is far more probable that the Aramaic יחשב 'will be withheld' was mistaken for יחמנא 'will be counted.'

[™] In Micah 7:5 Pesh. and Trg. both have כלר פומד.

⁹¹ The root MYD has the meaning of 'deny' in Afel, and probably also in Ittafel.

Halevy suggested that in 65:10b hours, 'months,' is a translation of הדשים, corrupted from הרשים, 'sorceries,' and Charles thinks that this alone 'restores sanity to the text.' In itself, it would not be impossible that the text read כל קבל דדרשיא, which became corrupted into, or was mistaken for, אודשרא, a word sometimes used by Aramaic-speaking Jews (Pal. Taanith iii, 69a) instead of the regular אירדיא. But would this really give an acceptable sense? Charles translates: "because of the sorceries which they have searched out, and through which they know that the earth and those who dwell upon it will be destroyed." It certainly is a strange idea that the terrible judgment of the flood would come because men had succeeded in discovering that the earth with its inhabitants would be destroyed. Scarcely less peculiar in this book would be the notion that men had themselves searched out such sorceries, and that they would use them to find out that they were to be severely punished. It seems to me probable that the Aramaic text read: כל קבל דחמסהון יחעבר דינהון ולא יתמנע מן סדמי בדיל דירחיא עד די אנון יבעון וידעון אדך תתאבד ארעא ויתבין בה: "because of their violence their judgment will be carried out, and will not be withheld by me, on account of the months during which they will inquire and learn how the earth and its inhahitants are to be destroyed." The 'months' may refer to the short period in the six hundredth year of Noah's life, when men learned through him how the earth was to perish, and enhanced their guilt by not repenting 'while the longsuffering of God waited."

To this interpretation it may be objected that the episode, in order to fall within the earthly life of Enoch, cannot have been thought of as occurring later than the one hundred and fortieth year of Noah's life (Charles). But why cannot this consultation have taken place after Enoch's translation? Before that event, there was no necessity of going to 'the ends of the earth' to consult him. As Martin[®] has pointed out, Gilgamesh also goes to the ends of the earth to visit Ut Napishtim. That is where paradise was. Noah has to cry three times for Enoch. Then an earthquake occurs, a voice is heard from heaven, and Enoch appears, asking why he has been called in this manner. Chapter 60 is dated in the five hundredth year of Noah (Enoch is corrupt for Noah). It is noticeable that there is no revelation at that time in regard to the flood. He hears that a judgment is coming, and learns some secrets concerning Leviathan, Behemoth, the winds and the thunder, but nothing about a deluge. Chapter 65 is consequently later. Now he hears of the angels coming to let loose the waters. This communication apparently came not long before the catastrophe. It is in harmony with this that the disclosures to Noah in Gen., chaps. 6 and 7, seem to be made in the six hundredth year of his life.

In 65:11 the translator rendered מהיובא by ምንባት, 'return,' instead of by ነሳሙ, 'repentance,' the Aramaic word having both meanings. Since שאלה means both 'prince' and 'angel,' there is no need, as Flemming has pointed out," of supposing a confusion of Heb. מלכים and מלכים and מלכים and מלכים and מלכים and הוא meaning 'punishment' and misunderstood 'inspiration,' in 68:2 is not convincing. In Gnostic thought, each spirit had its δύναμες (the Christ on the cross cries ἡ δύναμις μου, ἡ δύναμις μου, κατέλειψάς με, Ev. Petri, 19); the original ארגרול (ἡ δύναμις τοῦ πνεύματος) refers to this 'power.' Instead of 'irritates me,' ארגרונד' should have been rendered 'causes me to tremble.' The three words before the second מווי should be omitted with a; and we should read with b² שֹּגְבֵּלְּשִׁחְשָּׁת. The original of the latter phrase was probably 'without being destroyed,' איש meaning 'destructus est' in Ethpael, and 'liquefactus est' in Ethpeel.

A large number of MSS give the text in 68:3 'whose heart is not touched with pity?' (דמן לא יתרחם לבה) which is in harmony with the following 'and whose reins are not moved?' (ודמן לא יתדלחון כלינוהי). The author seems to have had in mind Ps. 73:21. The older group of MSS, however, reads ዘኢደረሰሕ, 'whose heart does not condemn him?' This phrase is clearly a reminiscence of I John 3:20, 'if our heart condemns us,' where the Ethiopic version uses the same term candal: And. This should serve as a warning against too much confidence in one group of our very young MSS. The end of the verse may have read: מן הדין פתגמא דנפק עליהון דמפיקין כמין 'on account of this sentence that has gone forth upon those who have brought forth such things.' The word אמנמא may at first have been translated $\mathcal{P}\Lambda$, while \mathcal{H} was later added to define the meaning; מביקין may have intentionally carried the suggestion of איזוב, 'fornicatores.' In 69:1 יארגיזדון was by a mistake translated 'he will exasperate them,' instead of 'he will cause them to tremble.' Halévy supposes the original of Gadreel in 69:6 to have been עדריאל, and in this he is probably right. In support of the meaning 'to fight' for the verb לדר, he appeals But the text is doubtful in both places; to I Chron. 12:33, 38. some Hebrew MSS have לעזר in the former and ידכר in the latter (Kennicott). The Aramaic שרר means 'to help,' probably also in Genza, left, p. 21, l. 21 (ed. Petermann), where אתאהדרלה no doubt represents אתעדרלה. If it ever had the shade of meaning of the Arabic غدر 'to become a traitor,' a name signifying 'God's helper' that also conveyed the suggestion of 'God's traitor' would be very suitable. Penemue(1) in 69:8 is, no doubt, from the same root as פנינגי, but 'the interior of God' is not a probable name. Panamu occurs as a name among the Aramaic-speaking kings of Zenjirli.

Halévy assumes that the original text in 69:13 had , which he thinks the translator took in the sense of 'number,' as in I Chron. 23:11, while he ought to have understood it to mean 'function, charge,' as in Num. 4:16. But שׁלְדָה in I Chron. 23:11 means 'class,' not 'number,' and there seems to be no other passage where it has this significance. It is not impossible that the Greek translator of the Noah apocalypse misunderstood אטמא, 'negotium,' as though it came from אטמ, 'to count,' or mistook ענינא for מנינא. But the whole context has manifestly suffered in transmission. I would suggest that the Ethiopic originally read: ወሳድስ:ስሙ:ተባዕት:ዝንቱ:ውእቱ:ጎልቀ:በሰን: ሳብዕ : ርአስ : ማሐሳ : ወስሙ : ሐቃኤ (ል), and was a rendering of ישתיתיא שומה טבעת הדין הוא רב ברובא שביעיא ריש דשבועתא דפרשה לקדישיא כד עמר הוא במרומא שביהא ושומה (ל) אסה 'and the sixth, his name was Teba'at: this one became a rebel in the tumult; and the seventh was the administrator of the oath which he revealed to the angels while he dwelt in heavenly glory, and his name was Hakael.' The 'son of the serpent' may be due to a reader who missed, in the catalogue of terms borrowed from Ps. 91, the companion of the serpent in vs. 6, ארוא בר אריון (Trg. בר אריא); ארוא may have become ארוא; ALCY is not found in q; when may have been misread walk; רב, like אל, means 'to rebel,' רובא, like איש, 'tumult;' חיש דשבועתא ; משל nay have become corrupted into חול א דשבועתא means 'keeper, administrator of the oath,' as אחרא means 'toparch,' ריש דירא 'abbot;' שבועתא may have been an intentional paronomasia on שביעא. The description, drawn indirectly from the Book of Enoch by Leon of Modena, that is quoted by Goldschmidt, is not so strange when 'the son of the serpent' has been removed. Halévy rightly maintains that as and and go back to אָקְאָל, and that this is the name of an angel, and not of an oath.

There are many indications of an Aramaic original beside the instances to which attention has been called where the difficulties are better explained by Aramaic than by Hebrew. The plurals Kiruben, Surafen, and Ophanin (61:10; 71:7), certainly represent the Aramaic כרובדן. The anticipatory pronominal suffix, which Charles rightly regards as showing dependence on the Aramaic in 9:8 and 19:2, is used very frequently in the Parables, and the prolepsis of object or adverbial clauses before the predicate occurs more often than in books originally written in Hebrew.

Of considerable importance is the peculiar use of מלבים or אשרבים. While in many passages it is employed like the Hebrew של סוד מושל, there are not a few instances in which the Aramaic שון לא אחדובח מן קדם מרא דרודיא. זרכמוא כדודא דומל אנא עד כאן לא אחדובח מן קדם מרא דרודיא, 'until now there has not been given by the Lord of Spirits wisdom such as this that I am receiving;' in 37:8, דער מון מון מוא דרודיא, 'thus it was determined concerning me by the Lord of Spirits;' in 47:4, שו מוא דורא דורודיא, 'the blood of the righteous will be avenged by the Lord of Spirits;' in 48:2, שומה אחקרא מן קדם מרא דרודיא, 'in that hour his name was called by the Lord of Spirits,' and similarly in 48:3; and in 48:6, 'therefore he was chosen and hidden by the Lord of Spirits.'

The verb שבל, which seems to have been used by the author, has been uniformly rendered 'deny' in the Ethiopic. But it also means 'scorn, despise, reject,' and one or another of these words should have been used at least in 45:1; 47:7; and 48:10. There is not the slightest evidence that the kings of the earth and the mighty lords who despise the name of the community of saints (45:1), believe in gods made with hands (46:7), persecute the believers (46:8), and scorn and reject the Lord of Spirits, are apostate Jews who have renounced the faith they once professed. In 46:7 דעברונון באדוון באד

The title מרא דרודיא only occurs elsewhere in II Macc. 3: 24: τῶν πνευμάτων κύριος (Syr. مخيط برّه but it is really an interpretation of יהוה צבאות, as 39:12 shows. It is more likely that such a translation should have been made in an Aramaic than in a Hebrew work in which the name אבאות would have been left unchanged. The free rendering 'he fills the earth with spirits' may be due to the Ethiopic translator who was influenced by the word £1t in the Ethiopic version of Isa. 6:3 (cf. Enoch 14:23 of ayıcı). The divine name CAA: - TO is probably a rendering of יוש יוניא, the natural meaning of which would be 'Lord of Days.' While it is not a translation of דתרם יוביא in Dan. 7:9, for that is and: apple , it must have been inspired by the title in Daniel, as the allusion to the 'hair white as wool' and the 'son of man' shows. The author, no doubt, was familiar with the name ריש יומיא, and preferred to designate God as the ruler of our days and of all time rather than as an old man. Against this view it may be urged that, according to 46:1 an 'old head' is meant, and that consequently, in 46: 2, the one like a man goes with 'the Old Head,' and, in 47:3 'the Old Head' sits down on a throne. But the present text in 46:1 is certainly corrupt. It cannot have read originally: 'there I saw to whom a head of days belonged,' but, in all probability: אמן הוא יומיא 'there I saw and behold! the Lord of Days.' When the title is rightly understood, there is no inappropriateness in its use either in the Noah Apocalypse or the appendix.

The names of the angels apparently refer to their condition and functions before the fall. The great majority of them are Aramaic. Thus, (1) Semyaza = NTH NUW, 'he sees the Name,

i. e., God,' or אווא הוא , 'he surveys the heavens,' as he reveals 'the revolution of the world' (8:1); (2) Arakib = ארכב, 'he causes to ride,' 'the charioteer;' (3) Arakiel = ארסאל, 'God's earth,' or הדקאל, 'God determines;' (4) Kokabiel = כוכבאל, 'God's star;' (5) Terael = מראאל, 'God gives,' or הרעאל, 'God's gate;' (6) Ramiel = רנאל, 'God is exalted;' (7) Daniel = דניאל, 'God's judge,' or 'God is judge;' (8) Hasakiel = השוֹקאל, 'God's sky;' (9) Barakiel = ברקאל, 'God's lightning;' (10) Azael or Azazel = לוואל or לוואל, 'God is strong;' (11) Armaros = חרם 77, 'he consecrates a mystery,' or 'he keeps a secret under ban;' (12) Batariel = בתראל, 'the hinder part of God;' (13) Samiel = סמאל (Sammael), 'the invisible things of God;' (14) Hanoniel = הנגאל, 'God is gracious;' (15) Rekael – רכאאל, 'God is king;' (16) Sampsiel = שמשאל, 'God's sun;' (17) Satarel = יתראל, 'God's side,' or Yetarel = יתראל, 'God excels;' (18) Tumael = תומאאל, 'God's perfection;' (19) Turiel = טוראל, 'God's mountain;' (20) Sariel = סהראל, 'God's moon.' Arakiel, Ramiel, Samiel, and Azael occur as names of angels in Oracula Sibyllina, ii, 215. On Sammael cf. Buxtorf, Lexicon s. v. Tera'= 'gate,' Utra = 'abundance, excellence,' and Tura = 'mountain,' are found in the Genza of the Mandaeans as names of demons.

While in 8:1 ff. seven of these angels, viz., Azazel, Semyaza, Armaros, Barakiel, Kokabiel, Tamiel and Sariel, are selected for special mention, the leaders in 69:4 ff. are not in the larger group. They are: (1) Yekon - יוֹדְרָאָל (?); (2) Asebel = אַבּעראָל, 'the thought of God,' or 'God gives heed;' (3) Gadreel - אַבְּעראָל, 'the helper of God;' (4) Penemue(1) = אַבּעראָל, 'face of God'(?); (5) Kasdeya = אַבעראָל, 'the archer,' 'sagittarius;' (6) Teba'at = מַבער , 'the circle,' the upper side of the Raķia'; (7) Ḥaķael = 'the law of God.' Yekon seduced the angels to reproduce their image and likeness. Ḥasbiel gave them evil counsel instead of strengthening them by good thoughts. Gadriel, or Adriel, who should have helped God, became a traitor teaching bloody warfare. Kasdeya, or Keshata, sent the arrows whose demonic effect Aramaic-speaking interpreters have suggested in the Targum to Ps. 91:6. Teba'at failed at his post when the angels descended. Hakael, ambitious for the power of the ineffable name, broke the order of nature himself, and was obliged to surrender to Michael the administration of the oath. When Yekon and Asbiel are said to lead astray 'all the children of the holy angels,' this is a false translation of אלהין בני אלהין. As בי אלהין בני אלהין. (Dan. 3:25), שלהין בני אלהין are 'angels,' and the phrase should have been rendered 'all the holy angels.' The Greek translator of the Noah Apocalypse may be responsible for this error by rendering אלהיי , דשׁν מֹץץ ἐλων, instead of τοῦ θεοῦ.

The most convincing evidence, however, of an Aramaic original is furnished by the Ethiopic translations of the term 'Son of Man.' They are: DAL: 11-11: 46:2, 3, 4; 48:2; 60:10; ወልደ: ብአቢ: 62:5 (some MSS have ወልደ: ብአቢት:); 69:29a, 29b (some MSS have @AL: AAAT:); 71:14, and @AL: \AA1: አመሕደው፡ 62:7, 9, 14; 63:11; 69:26, 27; 70:1; 71:17. Of these the last is the most peculiar. Literally, it means 'the son of the offspring of the mother of the living.' It is possible that እመ: ሕደው: was the title of some mother-goddess worshiped by the Geez people before their conversion to Christianity. One might think of Ta-urt 'the great one' who came to Egypt from Ethiopia and found her way back there again, or the otherwise unknown moon-goddess whom, according to Plutarch, the Egyptians called μήτηρ τοῦ κόσμου. But it remains most probable that Eve is meant, cf. Gen. 3:20. The meaning of APA: is 'embryo, foetus,' from the Semitic root , 'to roll, to wind in a circle;' and han: homber: is used both as a collective and of the individual, and is a rendering of οἱ ἀνθρώποι, οἱ υἱοὶ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, and especially of νίδς ἀνθρώπου (Num. 23: 19; Ps. 8: 5; Job 16: 21; Jer. 30:11).

It is a curious fact that when our Ethiopic translation of the New Testament was made, the ordinary method of rendering a noun definite by a prefixed $\omega \lambda T$: or WT: or WT: was not followed. Instead of $\omega \lambda T$: λT : λT : which we would nade a right to expect, we find uniformly ΦΑΡ: λ20: λΦολρω: and nowhere preceded by a demonstrative, as a rendering of δ νίὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου. There is only one natural explanation: the translation was made under the influence of the Aramaic אבר ברה של אווים של אווי

If the term oal: \alpha 10:\alpha \alpha \alpha \cdots \were uniformly used for 'son of man' in the Parables, it would be natural to suppose that the translator had before him the title ὁ νίδς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, and therefore employed the familiar New Testament title. This, however, is far from being the case. Before chap. 62 he uses no other term than שאב: חמא:, the equivalent of the Aramaic בר נשא. Later he employs four times the phrase DAL: and: which corresponds to the Aramaic, ברה דנברא, as Burkitt¹⁰⁰ recognizes. This title maintained itself long, in spite of its suggestion of a human paternity, and is found in the Palestinian Lectionary, the Curetonian fragments, and the Sinaitic text. It is scarcely conceivable that a translator having before him a Greek text in which the New Testament title ὁ υίὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου was uniformly used should have employed three distinct Ethiopic expressions, and these of such a nature as to correspond exactly to three different Aramaic terms. The conclusion seems inevitable that he translated directly from the Aramaic. Whether he found in his text as often as would appear from his version, must be left undecided; in 70:1 it is clearly an interpolation, and 71:18 is a late addition. If the Aramaic text contained such phrases as and ברה דנברא, it must have passed through Christian hands, and it is greatly to their credit that, in half a thousand years, they did not tamper with it more seriously than the keenest criticism has seen reason to suppose.

A study of the linguistic peculiarities leads to the conviction that this work was translated from Aramaic into Ethiopic. General considerations strengthen this conclusion. If the Parables of Enoch were translated from a Greek text, one would certainly expect to find somewhere a quotation from it, or reference to it, in early Christian literature. Books of Enoch are quoted, with indication of the source, in the Epistle of Jude and the Epistle of Barnabas, by Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Origen and Anatolius of Laodicea, in Pistis Sophia and the Apostolic Constitutions, by Jerome, Augustine, Nicephorus, and Georgius Syncellus. Beside these, a very large number of Christian writers in all parts of the church manifestly drew upon the Enoch books without mentioning the reputed author. But nowhere in ecclesiastical literature is there the slightest trace of acquaintance with this work on the part of apostolic fathers, heretics, or Catholic teachers, from New Testament times to the discovery of the Ethiopic translation.

Yet it is difficult to believe that men who reverently cited the Book of Enoch as 'Scripture,' or who eagerly sought in its revelations information concerning the angels, should have found nothing worthy even of passing notice in these remarkable Parables. Could it have been of no interest to them that the translated Enoch had himself seen the pre-existent Christ, heard his hidden name proclaimed, referred to him by the title which to them signified his incarnation as a man, and spoken of his revelation to a congregation of believers? Would there have been no comfort to them in Enoch's prophecy that the Son of Man would sit upon his throne of glory to judge angels and men, avenge the bloody persecution of his congregations of saints, and live with them for ever? Some explanation must be found of this extraordinary silence in regard to the Parables of Enoch. The exegetes have none to offer, and, in fact do not seem to be conscious of the problem.

Long and earnestly have I looked for traces of a Greek version of this document, but always in vain. At one time it seemed to me possible that the Christian interpolator of Test. XII Patr., Nephtalim 4, had in mind Enoch 46:3; 71:14. Might he not have thought of 'the man who has righteousness' or 'the man who is born for righteousness,' when he spoke of "the coming of the compassion of God, a man having righteousness and doing mercy to those afar off and to those who are near"? If so, the word ἀνθρωπος, rather than ὁ νίὸς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, would be significant. But the context suggests that δικαιοσύνη here has the same meaning as in Gen. 20:13, where it is the rendering of CN (Syr.); and the passage is apparently a free creation like Levi, chap. 16, being added in the Greek to that which the original author freely paraphrased from Enoch. Quite decisive is the fact that these Christian interpolations in Test. XII Patr. attach themselves to the most unlikely places in the rest of the work, but never to those passages in the Parables that have the strongest Christian affinity.

A reference to this part of Enoch also seemed to me possible in Tertullian's words: 'a Judaeis potest jam videri propterea rejecta, sicut et cetera fere quae Christum sonant.' May not the description of the 'Son of Man' have been just the part of the book that seemed to him to have reference to Christ? He does not appear to have known the Noachic apocalypse. But this would only show that the interpolations were absent in the Greek copy. Yet the very anxiety of Tertullian to prove to Christians the value of the book renders it improbable that he should have left unquoted the significant passages dealing with 'the Son of Man,' while he exerted himself on behalf of those reciting the errors of the angels. It is probable that 'the other things which had a reference to Christ' were the clumsier interpolations by Christian hands in Test. XII Patr., the Oracula Sibyllina, and other books.

Origen, indeed, seems to have been familiar with En. 67:6, 7, as his reference to thermal waters indicates.¹⁰² But this chapter belongs to the Noah apocalypse. A hymn in Paris Papyrus 3009, published by Dieterich,¹⁰² shows in one or two passages a certain similarity to Enoch 69:13 ff. Gaster thinks¹⁰⁴ that the author of this Logos Ebraikos actually quoted the Book of Enoch in the second century B. C. He misunderstands Dieterich's conclusions as regards the date. This Gnostic production, in which the name of Jesus occurs, belongs to the second century A. D., and the kinship of ideas is not such as to justify the assumption of acquaintance with the Book of Enoch.

A large number of passages have been quoted by Charles and Martin to show literary dependence upon this part of Enoch by various New Testament writers. Some of these have a certain resemblance without intimating a dependence, others show a similarity that may be due to the same milieu of ideas, while still others exhibit such a practical identity of language as suggests imitation. There is no direct quotation, however. The only New Testament writer of whom we are certain that he used the Book of Enoch is Jude. He quoted his source, but he drew nothing from the Parables, though his interest in Christ and in eschatology would have made it most natural for him to do so. His phrase, 'the seventh from Adam,'106 does not prove that he knew the Apocalypse of Noah. 100 If one could count that way, two could. As regards the expressions that really suggest dependence, it is certainly far more difficult to conceive of a Greek version of the Parables being used by several New Testament writers, without mention of the work, and then totally disappearing, while other parts of the Enoch literature, not thus honored, were preserved and highly prized, than that the present Ethiopic text has here and there received, in the course of transmission, a certain coloring by Christian hands. While a Greek translation of the Apocalyse of Noah may have been known to Origen,107 there seems, therefore, to be no evidence of a Greek version of the Parables. The disappearance of the Aramaic text can cause no sur-It is through translations, more or less faithful, and more or less interpolated, that we know such works as I Macc., Baruch, Judith, Tobit, Pss. DHIMMIS AND MOSLEMS IN EGYPT

RICHARD J. H. GOTTHEIL

The treatment of protected peoples—Jews, Christians and socalled Sabians—by Islamic rulers forms an interesting chapter in the history of the relations of the conquering Arabs with the peoples whom they subjected. In certain parts of Arabia itself both Jews and Christians were too powerful for Muhammad to antagonize in such manner as to turn them into open enemies. We know in detail the statutes laid down by the prophet for the Ansar, the Muhajirin and for the Jews in Medina. Almost from the very first one of the burning questions related to the churches and the synagogues which either existed before the coming of Islam or which had been built in after times. No authentic tradition has been forthcoming which could fix upon the founder of their religion the responsibility for the later prescripts of rulers and jurists. The only tradition of the prophet which can have reference to the subject is that found in the Kitāb al-Muwaffa' of Mālik to the effect "Two religions cannot exist together in Arabia;" which tradition is also handed down with a wider meaning as "There cannot be two Kiblas in one country." It

It is also cited from Abū Da'ūd's Sunan as a tradition of Ibn 'Abbās by Ibn Taimiyyah, REJ., XXXI, p. 215. See, also, Tabari, I, 1987, 13. Another tradition is more direct: اخرجوا المشركين من جزيرة العرب, al-Bukhārī, ed. Krehl, III, p. 295 (cf. al-Hindi, Kans al-'Ummal in Mumad, II, p. 311, margin). A further tradition is to the effect that Muhammad sent to the Jews in their المنابعة is true that in the fourteenth century a Shāfi'ite jurisconsult of some eminence in Egypt, one Muhammad ibn 'Alī ibn 'Abd al-Wāḥid al-Nakkāsh, in a fetwa that he wrote in the year 759 A. H. (1357-58 A.D.) relates a tradition of the prophet that "The building of churches in Moslem countries is forbidden, even the repairing of such as have fallen in ruins;" to which he adds a second one "No churches are to be allowed in Moslem countries." Unless he has reference to one of the traditions referred to above, his own is worthless, as it is not supported by any Isnād and falls within the category of those called by the traditionists Munkatiun. In fact, it is contravened in express terms by the well-reputed acts and sayings of Muhammad. In the Medina statutes it is expressly said that Jews are allowed to keep their religion; and to the leader of the new forces going to Yemen he sent word "Do not turn the Jews from their religion." The letter of Muhammad to the bishop of Najran, as well as that to the bishop of the Banū al-Hārith ibn Ka'b, assuring them of the possession of their churches and of the continuance of their services, may also be cited in evidence.10

A very similar course had been adopted by the other leaders and by the first caliphs; probably, it is true, for purely political reasons. In the treaty made with the inhabitants of Jerusalem at Jābia 17 A. H. (638 A. D.), Omar promised "security for their persons, their possessions, their churches, their crosses and for all things that concern their cult." The same was done at other places, e. g., at Tiberias.12 In the treaty which Abū 'Ubaidah made with the Syrians, it is expressly stated that churches and synagogues shall be left as they are and not touched; though regulations are attached to prevent the Dhimmis from hurting the sensibilities of the Moslems by the public exhibition of their worship and of their crosses.12 The same was the case at Al-'Anah and in the agreement made with the Catholikos of Al-Naķīb and al-Kawāthil.14 Abū Yūsuf adds that these conditions were faithfully carried out by Abū Bakr, Omar, Othman, and Ali. In some cases where a church building was needed for a mosque, a part of it was left for Christian worship; as at al-Anbar¹⁵ or at Damascus, where the Moslems and Christians shared the cathedral of St. John for a space of eighty years.16 Khālid, the Sword of God, had promised the patriarch security for the persons of the inhabitants, for their possessions, for their churches and for the wall of their city.17 Under Omar, the demand was made for the contravention of this agreement; but the caliph resolutely opposed it, as did also the Umayyads, Muāwiyah, and 'Abd al-Mālik. Walīd, however, took the whole church by force; and Omar II gave to the Christians in exchange all the churches in the Ghūtah that had been taken by force. Edessa surrendered to 'Iyadh ibn Ghanam on condition that the cathedral and other buildings should be reserved for the Christians; but the latter engaged not to build other churches than those which existed at the time of the conquest 18—a condition which had been implied in the agreement before mentioned, but which does not seem to have been specifically mentioned.

The conditions thus stipulated were in the nature of a compromise, and paved the way for trickery and for deceit upon both Upon the part of the Dhimmis it led to the falsification of documents which were to prove that a special arrangement or agreement had been made, assuring them the possession of one or the other religious edifice. The most noted example of such a falsification is the copy of the agreement said to have been made by Muhammad with the monks of Mt. Sinai and preserved there to this day.10 It is drawn up in the usual later documentary style and purports to have been made in the year 2 A. H.; being witnessed to by a goodly array of men: 'Alī ibn Abī Ţālib, Abū Bakr ibn Abī Kuḥāfah, Omar ibn al-Khattāb, Othmān ibn 'Affān, Abū Dardā'ī, Abū Hurairah, Abdallāh ibn Mas'ūd, al-'Abbās ibn 'Abd al-Muttalib, Fadl ibn 'Abbās, al-Zubair ibn al-'Awwām, and twelve more of Muhammad's entourage. The writing is claimed to be that of 'Alī and the copy to have been made from a copy of the copy of the copy of the original, as is stated in the colophon. Synagogues were usually disguised as private houses, or with false dates put with a bold front upon the outer part." The synagogue of the Palestinians in Fusțăț had a wooden tablet affixed, which bore a legend to the effect that it had been built in the year 336 of the Seleucid Era, forty-five years before the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem; and the tradition was spread abroad that the famous synagogue in Damwah had been erected forty years after the destruction of the first temple.

Upon the part of the Moslems, traditions were invented to prove the early age of various later restrictions; and in the interpretation of early procedure a door was opened for later fanatical casuists to incite the people to destroy the religious edifices of both Christians and Jews. The distinction was made between countries and places which had become Moslem by treaty and such as had been taken by force of arms; naturally a frequent subject of debate. It was a moot point whether such a building might be wholly rebuilt or only repaired; or whether new ones might be erected in villages and in places where there were no outward signs of Muḥammadan worship. And, finally, it was held to be a contravention for non-Moslem edifices to tower above those of Moslems. The history of Muḥammadan countries is full of incidents connected with this subject; and the orthodoxy of a ruler was at times measured by the zeal which he exhibited in taking the strictest view of these provisions.

¹⁹ I possess a photographic copy of it. The agreement came to light not earlier than the year 1517 A.D., and is on a line with a similar document stated to have been drawn up in the year 4 A. H. See Steinschneider, Polemische und apologetische Litteratur, p. 186. According to Suhrawardi (As. Quart. Rev., XIX, 1905, p. 156) this chart was published in 1630 by Gabriel Sionita. Similar agreements with Zoroastrians exist (ibid., p. 158).

The Fetwas and the decisions which have come down to us upon this subject are all based upon the supposed pact made by the Caliph Omar ibn al-Khaṭṭāb with the Dhimmis. Many scholars have doubted the later tradition which ascribes this famous pact to the first caliph of that name. The doubt seems in a large measure justified. According to al-Siūṭī, the earliest authorities to mention it are Ibn Zabr of Damascus who died in the year 164 A. H. (780/1 A. D.) and Abū 'Abdallāh ibn Isḥāk ibn Minda who died in 395 A. H. (1004 A. D.). We are so well acquainted with the life of the caliph, that so famous an instrument would undoubtedly have been mentioned by his biographers had they known of it. Of still greater force is the fact that its provisions show us a character that accords ill with the uprightness that shines through all the acts of his reign and with the simplicity and the truly religious character of his life. It is true that it was he who drove the Jews out of Khaibar and the Christians out of Najrān.²² Eminent reasons must have seemed to him necessary for this in the interests of the new state; for even in his testament, which has come down to us in two recensions, he is careful to demand consideration for the Dhimmis. "I recommend to your care the Dhimmis, for they enjoy the protection of the prophet; see that the agreement with them is kept, and that no greater burdens than they can carry are laid upon them."

As the Umayyad dynasty grew in importance, Omar's followers were not all as fine-minded or as far-seeing as he was. In the second Omar (99-101 A. H.) we have a prince very much after the pattern of the first Omar, pious and well intentioned, frugal and upright. It is customary to suppose that in his zeal for orthodoxy it was he who made his peace with the orthodox in Medina, and drew up the limitations imposed upon the Dhimmis and registered in the pact. But it is hard to imagine that a man of his generous nature would have allowed even his religious zeal to carry him as far as this. Was it not he who decreed that the Dhimmis who had come over to Islam should no longer be called upon to pay the capitulation tax, which meant a large loss to the treasuries of the state?" Is it not expressly stated that it was he who allowed the Christians and Jews to constitute Wakfs (mortmain) for churches and synagogues?" The only tradition of an unfavorable disposition in this respect that has come down to us is found in a letter sent by him to 'Abd al-Raḥmān ibn Nu'aim: "Do not destroy synagogues or churches or fire temples in regard to which we have made an agreement; but do not allow new churches or fire temples to be built."

It was really under Abbāsid rulers at Bagdād that the theologians completely gained the upper hand. Al-Mansūr removed all Dhimmis in the administration — a work continued by al-Mahdi and by Hārūn al-Rashīd, the one for whom Abū Yūsuf had written his Kitāb al-Kharāj. It was al-Mutawakkil who, privately living a life of riot but outwardly a most zealous man for all things Muḥammadan, increased the duress under which the Dhimmis lived, and who ordered all the churches and the synagogues that had been built in the time of Islam to be pulled down. It seems probable, therefore, that in this Abbāsid period

The attempt is evident in many subjects of later legislation to refer the beginnings of such legislation to the early heroes of Islām. At a very early time Omar II became a center around which traditions of all sorts gathered. See Becker, loc. cit., p, 1.

The retention of Christians in the administrations of Egypt, Syria, and Irāķ became a fruitful source of complaint. The Fetwa published by Belin (loc. ctt.) gives a number of instances; but they were needed, especially in the earlier times. In Egypt, the Copts have always been well represented in the government offices. For the earlier times see Carl H. the so-called Pact of Omar was drawn up; and that in order to invest it with greater authority it was foisted upon Omar, the First. 44

All this was, of course, meat for the legislators and the codifiers of Muhammadan law. The chief authorities differed in minor points and the traditions vary in themselves. For this reason it was easy to raise the whole question from time to time and to harass the Dhimmis upon minor points of procedure. Abū Hanifah seems to have held a more liberal opinion. In the Hidayah of al-Marghinani (d. 593 A. H. = 1197 A. D.) he is said. to hold that, though it is unlawful to construct churches and synagogues in Muhammadan territory, those already existing can be repaired if they have been destroyed or have fallen into decay; though they must not be removed from one place to another. Places of prayer may be built in private houses, and such places of prayer may be turned into a Wakf and handed down as such." In villages and hamlets, churches and synagogues may be erected, since the tokens of Islam do not appear there. The Shāfi'ite view, as represented by al-Shirāzī (1061 A. D.), holds that in places taken by force, no new houses of prayer may be erected by Dhimmis; but opinion differs, he says, in regard to the permissibility of repairing them. If a special treaty has been made, even the building of new synagogues and temples is allowed. Al-Nawawi (631-76 A. H. = 1233-78 A. D.) holds a stricter view. a place has been taken by assault, infidels must abstain not only from building new churches but also from employing the edifices already existing. Dhimmis in regard to their place of worship depends upon the conditions made; if the Dhimmis are to remain proprietors of the soil, they may even build new places of worship. Mālik holds that in places taken by force, new houses of worship may be erected and old ones repaired only when a stipulation to that effect has been made in the treaty. Where the inhabitants have capitulated, new edifices may be erected and portions of the property may be sold. In countries Moslem in their origin, no new churches are to be built.

The severest view seems to have been held by Ibn Hanbal (164-241 A. H.=780-855 A. D.); even in the neighborhood of Muḥammadan cities such houses of prayer cannot be erected, nor can they be restored when damaged or ruined. Minor authorities went still further in making all manner of subtle distinctions. Thus, according to Abū Sa'īd al-Istakhrī (d. 320 A. H.=932 A. D.) a wall might be repaired on the inside but not on the outside; though al-Ramlī (d. 1596 A. D.) would prohibit even this. In general it was stipulated that such buildings could be as high as those of the Moslems but not higher; though this was not the view of all the legal authorities. That theoretically at least these restrictions applied, may be seen from what follows as well as from the fact that they are expressly mentioned in the diploma which it was customary to give to the Ra'īs al-Yahūd as cited by Shihāb al-Dīn al-'Umarī and in the Kitāb al-Inshā. These provisions are

In view of what has preceded we can readily understand why the question was so largely debated whether the Moslems had become possessed of Egypt by treaty or by force. Al-Maķrīzī has a whole chapter on the taking of Fusṭāṭ from this point of view, and so has al-Siyūṭī. The doubts that really existed as regards the first and the second capture of the fortress of Babylon paved the way for lengthy disputes. In Egypt, for the most part, an express stipulation, though vague in its terms, was entered into. In the treaty made with the Copts in October, 640, the it was stated: this is the security which Amr ibn al-Asī gave to the people of Egypt, "for themselves, their religious bodies, their possessions, their churches and their crosses." The bishop John of Nikiu is the best witness to the statesmanship that guided these pioneers of the new régime. He says expressly that as long as Omar lived he preserved the churches from pillage.

In regard to Fustāt, the preliminary negotiations guaranteed safety only for those in the fortress and for their possessions. But this was a military and not a political convention, and no mention was made of churches or synagogues.

In respect to the City of Cairo itself no real doubt could exist. It was in every way a Muhammadan foundation; and all the schools and all the legists were in accord that no house of prayer could be built there by the Dhimmis. Yet, in spite of the distinct provisions, there can be no doubt that the regulation was honored very often in the breach. The Copts were too important a part of the population, and their assistance in the building-up of Muhammadan rule was too necessary to warrant any great interference with their church liberty. The Jews also were left in the enjoyment of their synagogues; and eyes were closed by considerations of policy even when the clearest provisions of the treaty were set at naught. Butler has called attention to the fact that the patriarch Benjamin received moneys for the purpose of building a church in Alexandria; that the patriarch John of Samanūd (680-89) did indeed build such a church; and that in 693 the ruler of Egypt, 'Abd al-'Azīz ibn Marwān actually gave orders that a church should be erected in the newly built city of Hulwān.⁵² In spite of the facts mentioned above, during the governorship of 'Ukbah ibn Muslim (104 A. H. = 722 A. D.), "the churches were destroyed and the crosses broken," upon the express order of the Caliph Yazīd.⁵² Abū Ṣāliḥ tells us that at some time between 775 and 779 the "Churches of Fusṭāṭ" had been destroyed; but that some time later they were restored again with the express permission of the governor, whose name, however, is not mentioned.⁵⁴

As time went on and the Muhammadan power grew stronger over Egypt, things changed for the worse. Every now and then the fanaticism of the rulers or of the populace called to the mind of both Christians and Jews that they were subject races. Abū Sālih tells us that in the year 725 a bake-house near to the church of St. Mennas was turned into a church of St. George; that much opposition to this change manifested itself upon the part of the populace, and that the Christians were forced to explain "that the bake-house rightfully belonged to this great church and was not a new building." In 169 A. H. (785 A. D.) the church of St. Mary in Fustat was pulled down by the Governor 'Alī ibn Sulaimān; but was rebuilt under Mūsa ibn 'Isa two years later. Mout the year 330 A. H. (942 A. D.) Abū Muḥammad ibn Tughi, the Ikhshid had the Melkite church in Tinnis closed. The mad al-Hākim did not, of course, spare the Dhimmis. In one of his momentary aberrations he ordered the church is Ibn Sa'id in his life of Ibn Tughj says that in the year 323 A. H. (935 A. D.) part of the church of Abū Shanūdah (Sinuthius) in Fusṭāṭ had fallen in. The Christians contributed money to repair it. The doctors of the law were asked whether this was permissible. The

He even caused the Adhan to be recited from the top of the church of Shenūdi in Fustāt and the Muallakah church in Kaşr al-Sham' to be walled in. The tale is told that between the years 403-5 A. H. more than 1,030 churches were thus destroyed in Egypt and in Syria.41 The Jews were treated with a similar harshness. Al-Hākim cleared out the whole Jaudariyyah quarter where the Jews dwelt, and turned their synagogue into a mosque. He did the same with the synagogue of the Karaites near the Hārat al-Rūm, named after Sām ibn Nūh. And yet, it is during this whole period that a number of churches and synagogues were built and rebuilt both in Fustat and in Cairo. orthodox al-Ghazālī was worried by this fact; and he accounts for it by saying that for nearly two hundred years Egypt was in Shāfi'ite Ibn Ḥaddād and the Mālikite Cadi were against the rebuilding; but Muḥammad ibn 'Alī held that permission might be accorded the Christians to rase the church and to rebuild it. The populace, however, strongly objected; and Ibn Tughj sent Ibn Ḥaddād with certain architects to see if the building was really in a ruinous state. It was found to be in a better condition than had been represented and it was allowed to remain as it was. See Kitab al-Mughrib, Book IV, ed. Tallqvist, Leyden, 1899, p. 63. During the period which saw Saladin and his family in possession of Egypt (564-650 A. H. = 1169-1252 A. D.) we have no record of any annoyance having been caused to the Dhimmis in this respect. Only occasionally were churches pillaged by the mob; as the church of the angel Gabriel in 564 A. H. (1168-69 A. D.), the church of St. Mennas, of St. Onuphrius and the church of St. Mercurius at about the same time." It was especially during the Mameluke rule that the Dhimmis were many times seriously threatened, largely because of fanatic Ulamas and others whose hot words incited the dormant power to act. In the year 700 A. H. (1300 A. D.) during the reign of al-Malik al-Nāṣir, and largely upon the advice of a perferbid convert from Judaism, Sa'id ibn Hasan of Alexandria," the so-called pact of Omar was solemnly renewed by representatives of both Jews and Christians and in the presence of the chief cadis of the four rites; though not before a number of synagogues had been destroyed and others closed for a whole year." The matter was taken up by the Christian king of Barcelona who in the year 703 A. H. (1303-4 A.D.) sent an embassy to secure the reopening of the churches. Embassies with similar purposes in view came from Georgia and from Constantinople. Two of the confiscated

De Sacy (ibid., p. 401) has a note to the effect that al-Makrisi had read in the chronicles of the Christians how the Jacobite patriarch Michael had been forced by the exactions of Ahmad ibn Tülün (254-70 A. H.) to sell the Church al-Muallakah in the Kaşr al-Sham'. But the passage (Khiṭaṭ, I, p. 103 top) says only that he sold "the church sear to the Muallakah." This was probably the church of St. Michael; see Butler, Ascient Coptic Churches, p. 168. In the Paris MS of Severus ibn al-Mukaffah (Bibl. Nat., 302, p. 248) there is an account of the destruction of a number of churches in the year 808 of the Martyrs (= 1091-92), especially of the al-Zuhri and al-Hamrā churches. Professor Derenbourg, however, is inclined to emend the date to 880 (1163-64).

churches were now opened; but the severity of the edicts was not wholly relaxed until the year 710 A. H. (1310 A. D.).

To this period belongs the collection of Fetwas published by Ahmad ibn 'Abd al-Hakk and contained in MS Berlin No. 928 of the Landberg collection. From these Fetwas it appears that the synagogues had been closed at some time previous to this in Cairo. In order to circumvent the law, the Jews had held services in a large building which they used as a synagogue, although on the outside it had the appearance of a simple dwelling-place. Ibn al-Raf'ah had given a responsum to the effect that they should be closed; and so had the ill-famed Ibn Taimiyyah. The matter was brought before the vizier Sulaiman, on the charge that such reunions were equivalent to the building of new synagogues. We are not informed what the outcome of the affair was. A little later, in the year 720 A. H. (1320 A. D.) and under the rule of the same al-Nāṣir a number of churches were destroyed; but this was against the will and contrary to the wishes of the Sultan. On a Friday, the ninth of Rabi', the second, and evidently at a preconcerted signal, the cry "destroy the churches" was raised in the mosque of the citadel, in the Azhar and in other places. Not only did the churches Bumana, al-Zuhri, al-Hamra, al-Banāt, etc., suffer; but the cry was taken up at Alexandria, at Kūs, and at other places. It does not seem that the synagogue suffered at this time." In 752 A. H. (1351 A. D.) during the reign of Salih, some churches were again devastated.72 A few years later, in 755 A. H. (1354 A. D.) on account of the arrogant bearing of the Dhimmis (this at least is the Moslem account), the "pact" was once more solemnly affirmed in the presence of the representatives of these Dhimmis; which, however, did not stay the hands of the destroyer, many churches being destroyed not only in Fustāt and in Cairo but also in upper Egypt."

How slight an incident might lead the populace to a fanatical outburst was seen in the following century. In the year 823 the Jews had constructed a new lane in their quarter, and a wall around a number of houses that had formerly belonged to Moslems. The populace thought this to be an unwarranted assumption of rights, and prepared to destroy the synagogue near by. They were prevented from doing this by the strategy of the historian and writer Ahmad ibn Hajar who must already have occupied some judicial position, and who had the new construction pulled down secretly so as to do away with the cause of complaint. It was during the rule of Bars Bai 825-42 A. H. (1422-38 A.D.), known for his harshness against both Jews and Christians, that the various edicts against the Dhimmis were renewed." The Sinaitic Peninsula had from time immemorial been, as it were, an appanage of the Egyptian power; and the question of the churches and monasteries there had been raised from time to In the year 849 A. H. (1445 A. D.), the whole question regarding these religious edifices was brought to the notice of the Sultan Jakmak by the Hanafite Cadi Sharaf al-Dīn al-Kibānī and the Hanbalite preacher Shams al-Dīn ibn 'Alī Omar." Measures were then concerted to prevent further buildings of such nature being erected, and especial care was taken that none of them should be higher than were the mosques in their neighborhood.

A few years previous to this in 846 a. H. (1442 a. D.) the abovementioned Ibn Ḥajar" was concerned in a matter which has direct bearing upon the document published below.* It seems that a charge had been brought against the Karaites that a building known as the Dar Ibn Sumaikh, and situated in the Zuwailah quarter had been used for some time as a school-house and as a dwelling-place for children. This had been turned into a synagogue." The gate leading to this building on the western side faced the property of one Samau'al al-Naķīķ.* The title of the Karaites to the property was questioned before Afdal al-Dīn Muḥammad ibn Maḥmūd ibn Sirāj al-Dīn Omar al-Karmī, on the ground that Ibn Sumaikh had died without leaving any heirs, and that the property legally reverted to the fiscus. The Karaites had no document to validate their possession of the building, and on Muharram 12 a decree was rendered against them. The Sultan Jakmak intervened, ordered that the matter should be laid before him, and summoned Johannis, at the Jacobite patriarch, Philoteus, 22 the Melkite, 'Abd al-Laţīf, head of the Rabbinite Jews, Faraj Allāh, a Karaite sheikh, and Abraham, the head of the Samaritans. These, unfortunately, knew nothing at all about the "pact," which was solemnly renewed and its provisions affirmed. Jakmak was known as a scrupulous Moslem and in 851 A. H. (1447 A. destruction of the religious edifices of the Dhimmis. Under his direction the church in the Kasr al-Sham' was turned into a mosque; and his religious vengeance was wreaked upon the synagogues and churches both in Fustat and in Damwah. In the year 858 A. H. (1454 A. D.) certain repairs had been made by the Karaites to one of their synagogues. The permission requisite for this had been acquired from the authorities; but it was supposed that this permission was general in its character and applied equally to the churches of the Christians and to the synagogues of the Jews. The Christians therefore commenced to make the repairs needed in their churches. This general activity on the part of the Dhimmis seems to have angered the strict Moslems; and in the year 860 the matter was brought to the attention of the Sultan Ashraf Saif al-Din Inal. A careful examination was twice made, not only of the synagogue in question, but also of the religious edifices in Fustat. It was found that the Karaites had not exceeded the permission granted to them, but that the Christians had. The demand was made by the Moslems that all the churches should be torn down as an example; because the agreement entered into by the patriarch with the Moslems had not been observed. Judgment was given to the effect that only those parts of the churches should be torn down which had been repaired without the necessary permission from the authorities. The Karaites were confirmed in the possession of their synagogue, and the whole status of the Dhimmis was traversed; a document being drawn up giving an account of what had happened in the year 846 A. H., of the decisions that had been reached, of the renewal of the "pact" made at that time, and the action taken in the year 860.

A copy of this document has been preserved in the archives attached to the office of the Karaite Hakam Basha in Cairo, and is published in the following. It is written upon a paper scroll many yards in length and over a foot in breadth. The original, I suppose, was deposited in the state archives; but it has probably gone the way of most of such documents. Even this copy has been roughly handled and not carefully guarded, so that portions of it are illegible. How many lines are wanting at the beginning it is impossible to tell; but citations made in the body of the document show that a lengthy introduction preceded what has been preserved. A transcript was made for me by Abū Naṣr al-Nabulsī, one of the sheikhs of the Azhar.

In the translation I have followed the original somewhat slavishly. I have, however, in most cases omitted the honorific designations with which the official scribes were accustomed to adorn the names of dignitaries in such documents. In the case of rulers and sultans these designations have a direct value as indicating the possession or supposed possession of certain rights. But in the case of jurists and cadis, they are nothing more than ballast. The official style of the kātibs is perhaps no worse and no more crabbed than is the style usually found in our own legal documents; but it is difficult to translate into readable English, and if the thread is interrupted by long lists of titles, it becomes perfectly unintelligible.

of space, the letters being written in a large hand and the lines being far apart. Omar the first tried to remedy this; but without success (Becker, Papyri Schott-Reinhardt, I, p. 25). In later times the scribes became wasteful of words, and the documents attained unheard-of lengths. The form of such documents seems to be modeled upon the old Egyptian papyri.

*Titles of rulers and other officials have been studied with great care and with much profit by Van Berchem in his numerous publications on Arabic epigraphy; especially in his Corpus, pp. 441 ff. See also his "L'Épigraphie musulmane en Algérie," in La revue africaine, 1905, No. 257.

⁸⁶² Especially in Mameluke times great stress was laid upon such titles. The Divan al-Insha' (MS Paris. Arabe, 4439) contains much material upon the subject, and was written in Egypt about the time of our document.

87 According to Van Berchem (Corpus, p. 384) the title, if was given only to sultans and princes in early times. It was only in the fifteenth century that it commences to be used for functionaries and sheikhs. To say before before, as is here the case, is an Egyptian practice, dating from the time of Muhammad ibn Kala'un (1816, p. 386).

This evidently refers to Jakmak, whose title was al-Zähir Saif al-Dīn. The Mamelukes called themselves or their various parties according to the titles of the sultans to whom they belonged. They used the same designations for the reigns of the various princes. It will be seen that relative adjectives are frequently used here in place of proper names or of titles; these, according to Van Berchem (Corpus, pp. 443 ff.), are always addressed to a functionary and not to a sovereign. Al-Badri — Badr al-Din; Saifī = Saif al-Dīn; al-Sa'dī = Sa'd al-Dīn. If the person was a Mameluke, the relative may be derived from the name of the man's owner. A request concerning the matter was brought before our Lord and Master the Chief Cadi, the Sheikh al-Islām al-Sa'dī al-'Abbāsī al-Dairī the Hanafite afore mentioned; the substance of which is—after the Basmallah and after the enumeration of those who are mentioned in it: that in every house of prayer existing in Cairo and Fustat (May they be well guarded!") there were portions that had fallen into ruin. A general permission had been given to restore that which had become ruined in every house of prayer and a decree to this effect had been written by and given them signed by their lordships the chief Cadis, the Shāfi'ite and the Hanafite Sheikhs al-Islām. An order had come to the Chief Cadis, the Shāfi'ite and the Hanafite Sheikhs al-Islām to examine the matter. This was found to be well grounded in law. They asked also for an order that one of the judicial substitutes should examine the matter and see whether the repairs of the aforementioned place which had fallen into ruin had been made according to law and according to the decision of his court. The Mameluke 'Abd al-Ḥakk, Sheikh of the Karaite Jews and Ishāk, Ra'īs of the Karaite Jews¹⁰⁰ agreed to this restoration according to the aforementioned account and the pact above mentioned, the legal ordinance above mentioned and the attested legal permission reference to which has been made above.

All this was read out in the hearing of our Lord and Master, the Chief Cadi, the Ḥanafite Sheikh al-Islām. He looked into the matter as well as ¹⁰⁰ It is peculiar that we find here a Ra'ss for the Karaite Jews. In the documents and in the secretaries' manuals of the time, it is distinctly said that the Ra'ss of the Rabbinite Jews had jurisdiction over Rabbinites, Karaites and Samaritans, though a special form of commission to the Ra'ss of the Samaritans is also given. into the presentment of our Lord and Master the Chief Cadi, the Sheikh al-Islām, the Ḥāfiz Shihāb al-Dīn Abū al-'Abbās al-'Askalānī, in which he confirmed the Dhimmis in the pact mentioned above, the explanation of which occurs in it. He was of opinion that the presentment of Shihāb al-Dīn al-'Askalānī in regard to the aforementioned pact was a legal judgment. Al-Ķinānī al-Bulķīnī agreed with him in this—that the permission which issued from the sultan, the ruler al-Malik al-Ashraf who is mentioned by name above is a legal document; and that the decision of the Mālikite Chief Cadi Badr al-Dīn al-Tinnisī in regard to the testimony of the Dhimmis whose names are above mentioned (the explanation of which is in the document) does not contradict the edict above mentioned nor the judgment of the Ḥanafite judge nor the work permitted to be done by his opinion.

He has signed ¹⁰¹ the above account with his own hand, commissioning the Cadi Afḍal al-Dīn to consider the matter from the legal point of view, after having made a complete examination. This was put in the hands of Afḍal al-Dīn the Mufti, Abū al-Faḍl Maḥmūd ibn Sirāj al-Dīn, the Mufti, Abū Khafs Omar al-Karmī, ^{101a} the Ḥanafite the judicial substitute in Egypt. He attended to it at once; discussing the matter several times with his superior al-Sa'dī al-'Abbāsī al-Dairī the Ḥanafite. The latter ordered him to carry out the work in accordance with his decision and after the fullest investigation.

Then Afdal al-Din, together with the judicial scribes who were to put their signatures to the document and the architects proficient in building and ordering, in putting up and tearing down and who had been invited to do this work by the Court, went to where the houses of prayer in al-Kāhirah and in Fustāt were which belonged to the Karaite Jews. One of them was the synagogue in al-Kāhirah inside the Hārat Zuwailah they studied it carefully and acquired a knowledge that removes ignorance a side destroyed by one of the mob, its length was three hundred cubits In its 102 on the side already mentioned touching the west, are places which need examining for repairs below and above. On the inside of the court of the synagogue is a vestibule, through which one reaches the gate of the synagogue. In it (the vestibule) is a wall, the top part of which has been destroyed, and its gate has been taken out. At present, the aforementioned gate is to be found in the synagogue. The wall needs

One goes through the aforementioned gate to a place in which there are three broken basins, needing repairing and restoration at the bottom and at the top. And in the passage-way leading from it to the synagogue, both sides—right and left—need repairing all around above and below. In the aforementioned passage is a staircase by means of which one mounts to the upper part of the synagogue; to the right and to the left as one goes up is the door of a private room, ¹⁰⁶ the supports of which are in a broken condition. Opposite to it is a ruined wall resting upon a wooden foundation; this needs repairing. On the top part of the above-mentioned synagogue are overlaid woods and overlaid ¹⁰⁶ resting upon wooden supports. These need repairing as well as the wood which is between the two roofs.

In the upper part near to on the eastern side and resting upon the wooden supports. These need renovating and restoring. On the aforementioned staircase at the top there are repairs. In this there is a crenelated parapet, which needs renovating and repairing below and above. On the upper story of the synagogue there is a damaged roof that needs repairing. In the upper story toward the east and on the side mentioned is a fallen wall. On the top are ruined layers ¹⁰⁷ on the third story. These must be demolished and cleared of the rubbish in them in order to lighten the weight upon that which is below, and in order that the materials mentioned may be used for repairing whatsoever needs repairing.

The aforementioned synagogue is comprised within the following four bounds: The southern side borders on a waste place; the western side borders on a waste place also. On this side is the mosque mentioned above which needs repairing and renovating, as has also been aforementioned. The eastern side borders on a waste place. On this side is the gate to the synagogue aforementioned; and the gate of the court which is the property of the aforementioned synagogue called the Kā'at al-Jaban. The western side borders on a waste place; so that there is not near to this synagogue upon its four sides either building or dwelling-place. It stands today in the midst of waste places and of heaps of rubbish.

The result of the official examination here mentioned, together with what has been reported above, were verified before our Master Afdal al-Din in a lawful manner and with legal proof. The attestation of our Lord Shihāb al-Dīn Abū al-'Abbās Ahmad was attached to it in regard to his own person 106 in the matter of the proofs and the judgment in accordance with the warrant which issued from the Sultan 100 al-Malik al-Ashraf, according to the permission of the same referred to above. There was attached to it also the action taken by Shihāb al-Dīn al-'Askalānī, in regard to the aforementioned pact concerning the recognition by the Dhimmis of their duties and his confirming them in the privileges of the pact-in clear language and taking the place of a judgment, in accordance with the aforementioned permission, as has been stated above. There was attached to it also the judgment given by the Malikite Chief Cadi al-Badr ibn al-Zubair al-Tinnisi, which is recorded upon the margin of the pact above mentioned, together with the obligation recorded in a special section upon the margin of the pact mentioned. All this was brought before him in a perfectly legal manner, to be respected, satisfactory and with full legal proofs.

He (Afdal al-Dīn) gave permission to repair what was needed in the above-mentioned places of worship according to the decision explained above, i. e., more specifically the two synagogues mentioned above—to do as much as is sufficient to carry this out. He forbade them to do more than this; both the permission and the inhibition being perfect in law, and after note had been taken of what had been done contrary to this.¹¹⁰ He had his decision attested by witnesses, as well as the fact that both the permission and the inhibition explained above took the place of a judgment, together with the note of what had been done contrary to this, as this is explained in the document relating to the inquest which is dated Ramaḍān 27, 859, done in the handwriting of our Lord, the learned judge above mentioned, completed by the signatures of those who had been present at the aforementioned inquest in company of the judge aforementioned—signatories and architects.

This having happened and a long period having elapsed, displeasure having manifested itself against the Dhimmis because they had built their places of prayer and their convents in Fusțăt, contravening the law in this, the matter was brought to the attention of our Lord the Sultan Malik al-Ashraf. He ordered the convening of a Majlis in his own presence. Such a Majlis was convened in his presence, consisting of the Chief Cadis, the Sheikhs al-Islām of the four rites. There was much discussion and controversy between those present at the Majlis in regard to the above-mentioned pact, and in regard to the decision of the Mālikite Cadi Badr al-Dīn Abū al-Akhlāṣ Muḥammad ibn Zubair al-Tinnisī. The order was given to the Chief Cadis, the Sheikhs al-Islām, to betake themselves to the houses of prayer mentioned.

An order came from the Sultan 110a to the Chief Cadis, the Sheikhs al-Islām, to go upon an appointed day to Fustāt to examine the places of worship. Then the Chief Cadis, the Sheikhs al-Islam of the four rites, to wit: The Sheikh al-Islam Abū al-Thikah Şālih al-Kinānī al-Bulkīnī al-Shāfi'ī, the Sheikh al-Islām al-Sa'd ibn 'Abbās al-Dairī al-Hanafī, the Sheikh al-Islām Abū al-Bakā Muḥammad al-Kurashī al-Amawī¹¹¹ al-Māliki, Abū al-Barakāt Aḥmad al-Kinānī al-Ḥanafī, the procurators of justice in Egypt and in the rest of the Islamic countries; together with Abū Zakariyya Yaḥya al-'Aksarā'ī al-Ḥanafī, and all the honorable judicial substitutes in al-Kähirah and Fustät (May the two be well guarded!) went and an examination was made of the places of worship existing in Fustat. One of these was the Jewish synagogue in the Khatt al-Muṣāṣah¹¹² in the ruins of Fustāt. The inquest was made in the presence of the Sheikh al-Aksarā'ī al-Hanafī mentioned above, and a number of the judicial substitutes among whom was the Sheikh Afdal al-Din the Hanafite judge aforementioned, a number of judicial scribes, a number Tagri Bardī al-Bardabakī,116 al-Ḥājibī, and many of those attached to the Court in al-Kāhirah and Fustāt, among whom was the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn, went to Fustāt to examine a second time the places of worship mentioned there. A complete examination was made in the presence of the Sheikh Amīn al-Dīn al-Aksarā'ī and of the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn, of many of the Court procurators and the chamberlains 116a mentioned above, the Court attendants, the architects and a number of Muhammadans. In consequence, there was pulled down in the churches belonging to the Christians whatsoever had been done in excess of the work permitted: namely, they had built in the church known as Abū Jurj¹¹⁷ supports, and an arch had been built, instead of the sides the repair of which had been permitted. The head of that church Michael ibn Sergius made the request that this be permitted. But the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn, the senior judge mentioned in the above-cited writ, ordered the Christians aforementioned to be beaten severely and painfully in the presence of the Amīr Hājibs. He was beaten severely and painfully, and in a state of nudity, as a reprimand to himself and to those who were like him. He was carried around the streets as a criminal, and clapped into the Dailam prison 118 in al-Kāhirah for some days, as a punishment for that which had been reported about him in connection with the building that went beyond the permission and beyond the writ of the judge aforementioned, and because of the permission that he had given to those who had wrongly done this.

Some of those who had been present at the examination wished that all that had been repaired in the places of worship mentioned should be destroyed; basing this wish upon the testimony given in reference to the Dhimmis—i. e., Yuhannis and his followers—mentioned in that part of the testimony which is written upon the margin of the copy of the pact which issued in the days of the Zāhirite dynasty, the first part of which testimony was dated Ramaḍān 19, 840, and the last part of which was dated Shawwāl 6 of the aforementioned year 846. It contained the testimony indicated above written on the margin of the pact, the testimony of Yuhannis the Patriarch and his followers, as well as that of others whose names are not mentioned, which was to wit: that he put constraint upon himself in a manner legally binding not to restore anything in his

Should he contravene this or any part of it, or go beyond it or any part of it, his punishment should be that the Sultan al-Malik al-Zāhir should destroy all the churches, monasteries, cloisters, cells, and chapels in which such had been done; and that the Sultan mentioned above should act as he pleased in this matter. He accepted this as an obligation for his own person; annexing it to the conditions aforementioned to which he had bound himself previous to this, which are explained in the copy of the aforesaid pact, made in the days of the Zahirite dynasty according to his own request and for his own satisfaction; because he recognized that it would benefit and aid himself, Islam, and the Muhammadans, and after each party had understood the meaning of this agreement, and the additions that had been made in a legal manner and relying upon the responsum given by Badr al-Dīn Abū al-Akhlās Muḥammad al-Zubairī al-Tinnisī the Mālikite Chief Cadi relying upon all those mentioned above who had testified according to the personal testimony which each one had given for himself—a legal decision, asked for, fulfilling the legal provisions, in a case brought against them by a plaintiff whose case can be accepted; and after evidence had been given by him to the issue thereof, and he had been summoned to a sitting of the court aforementioned in clear language and in other ways compelling his attention, and after he had become acquainted with the consequences of contravening this, and with the fact that this pact prohibited the repairs of the religious edifices mentioned therein and in others, necessitating the demolition of the religious edifices mentioned.

A discussion was raised whether the demolition should be partial or complete; and if the judgment were that it must be partial, nothing should be done contrary to what the judgment calls for; also if any one, whosoever he might be, should take a lease of the ruins of a place of worship which was not his property, would such a lease be sound? The Court busied itself with this question and when rendering a decision heard the report of those who had been present in the committee of inquest mentioned in 120 a part of the testimony; heard also its decision in the matter and the examination to which attention has been called and noted in the decision of Mālikite judges. The question was asked, does the judgment 119 Text بالات القديمة 120 The word في seems to have dropped out. mentioned touch anyone who has not been actually summoned to appear in the matter?

Our Lord the Chief Cadi, the Sheikh al-Islām al-Sa'dī al-Badrī al-Ḥanafī took into consideration that which had issued from his substitute Afḍal al-Dīn in regard to the inquest mentioned. He found it to accord with the principles of his own rite, which stipulates that the Dhimmis might repair that which was ruined of their houses of prayer and their monasteries; that it agreed with that which had been assured to them by our Lord the Chief Cadi Sheikh al-Islām the Ḥāfiẓ al-Shihābī al-Shāfi'ī, in the pact which he had written with the Dhimmis in the days of the Zāhirite dynasty according to the order of the Sultan al-Malik al-Ṭāhir; and because, also, it agreed with the legal opinion in regard to the renewal of the pact with those of the Dhimmis who have been named; and further, because it agreed with the pact of Omar taken as authority for the case of the Dhimmis in the days of al-Naṣir.¹22

He opined that the action taken in this matter during the last eight hundred years, without any question having been raised as to its change, was the action that ought to be taken in this case; and that the judgment of our Lord the Chief Cadi al-Badrī al-Tinnisī the Mālikite, together with the obligation which had issued in the Zāhirite dynasty, did not contravene the permission given by the Sultan al-Malik al-Ashraf Abū Naṣr Ināl, as mentioned above, nor the judgment rendered by the Ḥanafite judge which permitted repairs to be made in the old places of worship, and which allowed that which had been repaired in them to be preserved. This is what ought to be done in this case.

Afdal al-Dīn Abū al-Faḍl Maḥmūd al-Karmī, the Ḥanafite judge, then intrusted to us to deal with the Dhimmis in the matter of their houses of prayer, their monasteries, their cells, and their dwellings in conformity with the decision of the law and according to the precepts of his court and to issue a writ in the matter in accordance with the precept of his rite.

Thereupon our Master Afdal al-Dīn went to where the above-mentioned places of prayer were, together with those of the court scribes whose duty it was to affix their signatures to the document dealing with the matter; also with the Master Sammāl Muḥammad ibn Aḥmad the architect known as al-Ķarāfī, 128 the Master Shihāb al-Dīn Aḥmad ibn Muḥammad, the architect known as Ibn al-Fākhūri 124—architects of al-Ķāhirah. They went to the place where stood the synagogue in the Ḥārat Zuwailah belonging to the Karaite Jews within the Karaite quarter of al-Kāhirah mentioned.¹³⁵ It was found, both according to the previous and the present description, to have been repaired according to the terms regarding it granted by the Hanafite judge who had been delegated for this purpose by his chief; as has been explained in the legal permit referred to above, and without anything beyond what the permit called for having been done.

The foregoing was attested before our Lord the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn in a legal manner with legal proofs witnessing to it and referring specifically to it. Whereupon the one whose right it was by law to make the request, i. e., 'Abd al-Ḥaḥḥ, Sheikh of the Karaite Jews, the relator above mentioned, asked our Lord the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn the Ḥanafite judge to respect that which had been repaired in the synagogue aforementioned according to the permission and the writ explained above, to prevent any opposition to this, as well as to permit the remaining repairs to be made which had been allowed in the religious building mentioned above, and finally to have his document properly witnessed to.

Our Lord the Judge asked the blessing of God, answered the questioner, and gave in the matter asked for a just, legal, complete and satisfactory judgment as demanded—its conditions satisfying the law and with a full cognizance of the dissenting opinion. He had his answer witnessed to. Then the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn, the Hanafite judge, returned to his chief our Lord the Chief Cadi al-Sa'dī al-'Abbāsī al-Dairi al-Ḥanafī, in order to transmit to him the judgment of the Sheikh Shihāb al-Dīn Abū al-'Abbās Aḥmad al-Burḥī 127 al-Shāfi'ī, the legal deputy in Egypt, according to the testimony dealing with the permission given by the Sultan al-Malik al-Ashraf; and in order to transmit the judgment arrived at by the regretted Chief Cadi Shihāb al-Dīn al-'Askalānī al-Shāfi'ī, in the form of a patent which is equivalent to the judgment, recorded in the pact mentioned above, the wording of which is specifically affixed to it. He recalled the terms laid down for them and against them—the text of the demand made by the Dhimmis being:

"We ask your protection for ourselves, our posterity, our possessions and our coreligionists. We covenant to you as regards our own persons, that we will not build in our city nor in its neighborhood any convent, church, cell, or hut for a monk nor will we rebuild them should they fall into ruin. We will not replace that which has been demolished in the quarters where Muḥammadans live. We will not prevent any Muḥammadans from entering our places of prayer or our convents by night or by day. We will open our doors for those that pass by and for the traveler. If a Muḥammadan traveler should take refuge in them we will

We will not seek to prevent any of our relatives from accepting Islām, if he should wish. We will show respect for Muhammadans. We will rise up from our seats when one of their prominent men wishes to sit down.¹²⁹ We will not copy them in their manner of riding and addressing -not even in their head-gear,100 their sandals, or in their way of parting the hair. We will not use their peculiar expressions of speech nor their surnames. We will not ride upon saddles, nor gird on swords, neither possess nor carry any weapons. We will not engrave in Arabic upon our seals. We will not further the sale of wine. We will shave the front part of our heads. Wherever we may be we will put a restraint upon ourselves. We will tighten the girdles about our loins.¹³¹ We will not exhibit our crosses and our holy books in any assembly 188 of Muhammadans, in their public places, or in their streets. We will not raise our voices while reading in our place of worship or elsewhere when Muhammadans are present. We will not go out in companies upon Palm Sunday nor on other festivals.188 We will not raise our voices in bewailing our dead, nor carry lights when accompanying them either in the streets where Muhammadans live or in their places. We will not bury our dead near to theirs. We will not take as slaves any that have fallen by lot to the Muhammadans nor look upon them from our dwellings.184 We will not strike a

122 The text in Sirāj al-Mulak and in the Kans al-'Ummāl (see, also, Arnold) adds here: "We will not harbor in our churches or our dwellings a robber, or conceal any enemy of the Muhammadans."

129 Sirāj al-Mulūk, Kans al-'Ummāl, Hamaker "We will rise up for them (in place of 'their prominent men'), when they wish to sit down."

120 The other texts have "in their dress, either in the cap, turban, etc."

¹³¹ Some texts add, "We will not show the cross upon our churches, and only strike the bells in our churches lightly."

132 The other texts, "in the streets of the Muhammadans or in their market-places."

123 Other texts, "we will not carry palm-branches or our images in procession."

124 Other texts, "nor spy into their houses." After this, Hamaker, Siraj and Kans al-'Ummāl and al-Siyūţī: "Now when I brought this letter to Omar ibn al-Khaţţāb, he added to it "And we will not strike any Muhammadan." The following clause is entirely omitted. Whether these omissions are due entirely to the scribe, or whether certain modifications were made in the original, it is impossible to decide. The earlier literature upon the "Pact" will be found in Steinschneider, Polemische und apologetische Litteratur, pp. 165 ff. I have also consulted the text published by H. A. Hamaker in his notes to Incerti auctoris liber de Expugnatione Memphidis et Alexandriae, Leyden, 1125, p. 165; Muhammad ibn Walid al-Turțüshī, Siraj al-Mulük, Cairo, 1319, p. 118; al-Siyüţī, Kans al-'Ummāl on the margin of Ahmad ibn Hanbal's Musnad, II, p. 310. Ahmad al-Abshahi, Kitāb al-Mustafraf, 1, 103. A translation of Hamaker's text is given in T. W. Arnold, The Preaching of Islam, p. 52; of the text according to Ibn Khaldun and others by Amari, Histoire des Musulmans de la Sicile, p. 477; of the text of Ibn Asakir by Von Kremer, Culturgeschichte des Islams, I, p. 102. The text in Ahmad ibn 'Ali al-Siyüti's Ithaf al-akhissa, is translated in James Reynolds, The History of the Temple of Jerusalem, London, 1836, but in a faulty manner (see Guy le Strange in JRAS., XIX, p. 247). The pact is also quoted with many explanations by Joseph ibn Isaac Sambari in his "Chronicle" (MS Alliance Isr. Universelle, Paris, pp. 12 ff.; omitted in Neubauer's ed., Mediaeval Jewish Chronicles, I).

Muḥammadan nor curse him. We will not buy anything from the captives of the Muḥammadans. We covenant this for our own persons and for our coreligionists. In exchange, we receive security that you will grant us the protection of Allāh and the protection of the Muḥammadans; that no one will be forced to do that which he is unable to fulfil, nor what is beyond that which is specified; that no one of us shall be wronged in his person, his family, his children, his followers, his possessions or in any of our places of worship. Should any one of us be wronged, it is the duty of the Muḥammadans to repel such wrong and to punish the evil-doers. Should any one of us violate this pact, he shall forfeit protection and pact; and you are permitted to treat him as enemies and rebels are treated."

The chief of the Dhimmis whose names are aforementioned to wit: Yuhannis and his council mentioned above, Philoteus, Patriarch of the Malkite Christians; 'Abd al-Laṭīf ibn Ibrāhīm ibn Shams, Ra'īs of the Rabbinite Jews; Faraj Allāh ibn Mūsa, one of the Sheikhs of the Karaite Jews; and Ibrāhīm ibn Salāmah ibn Ibrāhīm, chief of the Samaritans, asked the Chief Cadi al-Ḥāfiz Shihāb al-Dīn-'Askalānī the Shāfi'ite to confirm them in the conditions mentioned above which they accepted for themselves, and the provisions of which they engaged themselves to observe.

Shihāb al-Dīn al-'Askalānī the Shāfi'ite answered their questions saying distinctly "I confirm you in the right to dwell in any country of Islām except the Ḥijāz and to journey through it except holy Mecca, in accordance with these conditions, if you pay the capitulation tax according to established custom." In the ensemble of what is written in the copy of the pact above mentioned are some things that need explanation and specification, e. g., that the meaning of the word "renewing" in a city in which their residence is established, is to be taken in a general sense as comprising both small and large cities; and the meaning of "if any part of them should become ruined" is that if the place of worship should become ruined, it may not be renewed, only that when its wall is damaged, no prohibition shall stand against repairing that wall together with what is below it." The Chief Cadi, the Sheikh al-Islām al-Sa'dī al-Badrī al-Ḥanafī, granted the request asked for in regard to the execution of the document.

Then our Lord the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn invoked the aid of God, and took as witnesses for himself those that had been present at his court and at his decision—he being the one to carry out the judgment and the decision and to render them. On the ninth day of Safar 860 (May it come to an end with goodness and victory!) he proclaimed the judgment of our Lord Shihāb al-Dīn abū 'Abbās Aḥmad al-Burḥī the Shāfi'ite judge, given in the document mentioned above, the date of which is also given above. He proclaimed also the confirmation which is equal to a judgment of the Chief Cadi Shihāb al-Dīn al-'Askalānī al-Shāfi'ī, and given in the copy of the pact mentioned above—a perfectly legal proclamation, complete, accredited, acceptable, demanded, its legal provisions being adequate. This he authorized and ratified and commanded that it should be carried out. He had witnesses countersign it, on the date mentioned above, written by his own hand. Praise be to God first and last!

In it is the addition  Sa'ala-wafīhī su'āl ahl-il-dhimmati fīhī and the correction māni'an al-taḥarrī biman'i ikhdār dhawū to the phrase hā māni'an. In the addition are the words binā'un saḥḥīḥun. All these changes have been made in their proper place. God is sufficient and a pleasant advocate!

Has taken us as witness our Lord and Master, the servant longing for God the most high, the Sheikh, the Imām, the wise, the energetic, the wonderful, the pontiff, the munificent, the learned, the intelligent, the erudite, the devout, the pious, the saintly, ¹⁸⁸ Sa'd al-Ḥanafī, for his own person as far as concerned that part of the aforementioned that has reference to himself, as well as for his judicial substitute our Lord the Sheikh Afḍal al-Dīn Abū al-Faḍl Maḥmūd al-Karmī al-Ḥanafī, as far as concerns that part of the aforementioned having reference to him. I was present at the inquest made of the religious edifices mentioned above, together with those designated above on the various occasions as is explained above. Signed Muḥammad ibn Muḥammad ibn Muḥammad al-Jabarī al-Shāfi'ī.

Has taken us as a witness our Lord the Chief Cadi Sa'd ibn al-'Abbās al-Dairī al-Ḥanafī in respect of his own person in regard to that which has reference to himself above. I witness to it for him and for his substitute our Lord the Sheikh Afdal al-Dīn, in regard to that which has reference to him. I was present at the examination of the churches belonging to the Jacobite Christians which were in Fusṭāṭ (May it be well guarded!) i. e., the last examination—with the exception of the Mu'allakah church¹⁵⁷ and the church of Abū Sarjah¹⁵⁸ and the church St. Barbara,¹⁶⁹ as is explained above. Signed: Muḥammad ibn Muḥammad al-Nabīh. He has told me this in the terms used by a witness.¹⁶⁰

135 These last sections call attention to certain additions made to the document after it had been written. They had also to be attested. The same practice was common in writing Hebrew documents; cf. THE STROPHIC STRUCTURE OF THE BOOK OF MICAH

JOHN MERLIN POWIS SMITH

Questions pertaining to the date and authenticity of the material in the book of Micah lie outside of the scope of this article, except in so far as concerns minor glosses which interfere with the metric or strophic norm of a passage. For full discussion of such matters reference may be made to the author's forthcoming commentary on Micah in the "International Critical Series."

§1. THE SUPERSCRIPTION, 1:1

דבר יהוה אשר היה אל מיכה המרשתי בימי יותם אחז יחזקיה מלכי יהודה אשר חזה על שמרון וירושלם:

§ 2. THE DOOM OF ISRAEL, 1:2-9

1:2 I שמעו עמים כלם הקשיבי ארץ ומלאה ויהי יהוה בכם לעד ארני מהיכל קדשו:

בידתה יהוה יצא ממקמו וירד על-במותי ארץ: הנמסו ההרים תחתיו העמקים יתבקעו

בפשע יעקב כל־זאת וּבְּחַשַּאת בית יהודה מי־פשע יעקב הלוא שמרון ומי־חַשַאת יהודה הלוא ירושלם:

ישמתי שמרון לְשָּׂדֶה למטעי כרם למטעי כרם רהגרתי לַבַּיְא אבניה ויסדיה אגלה:

י על־זאת אספדה ואילילה אלכה שולל וערום אעשה מספד כתנים ואבל כבנות יענה: ס'ר אלושה מַפְּתָהּ גוְשָה עד־שַׁצְרֵי עמי
 עד ירושלם:

This arrangement involves the retention of vss. 2-5a as genuine, nowithstanding Stade, Nowack, Marti, et al., and the excision of vss. 4c, d and 7 as later accretions. Nowack has attempted to improve vs. 4 by interchanging the positions of 4b and 4c; but 4a and 4b belong together, similar cases of later expansion by the addition of a comparison are not wanting (cf. 7:10), and the lines 4c and 4d burden the strophe. Marti has already stated the case against vs. 7; in addition may be urged its variation from the strophic norm of the context, in that it consists of five lines:

ז וכל פסיליה יכתו וכל־אתנניה ישרפו באש וכל עצביה אשים שממה כי מאתנן זונה קבְּצוּ ועד־אתנן זונה ישובו:

In vs. 2c omit אדני as dittograph from the following line, or as Qeri for יהודה; in vs. 3 omit און with $\mathscr{G}$; and in vs. 5b substitute יהודה for לעראל.

§ 3. LAMENTATION OVER ISRAEL'S DOOM, 1:10-16

יז בר הירש אבילה יושבת מרשה עד עללם יאבד כבוד ישראל: 16 קרחי וגזי על בני תענוגיך הרחבי קרחתך כנשר כי-גלו ממך:

The uncertain state of the text of 1:10-16 renders any attempt at reconstruction extremely hazardous. In the foregoing arrangement there is to be seen a gradual transition from the simple trimeter of vs. 10, through the tetrameter of vs. 11, to the pentameter, or Qinah movement of vs. 12, which prevails throughout the rest of the piece. The most marked variation from the Massoretic text is in the omission of vs. 13b; this is shown to be a gloss by the fact that it interrupts the connection of 13a and 13c, where direct address is employed.

In vs. 10b, for בבכא see Halévy, Revue sémitique, XII; אל is omitted as a dittograph from vs. 10a. For vs. 10c see Winckler, Altorientalische Forschungen, I, 103. In vs. 11a is omitted as a dittograph from 11b, and בו is restored before שפיר; שפיר is omitted, with 65, as a gloss on ערידו. In vs. 11b במספר is conjecturally restored to במספר; cf. Assyrian suptiru, 'inclosure' (of a walled city, e. g., Erech). In vs. 11c the verb is pointed as passive, with Graetz; and is resolved into ממשל, and ש being often confused in the old script; the third 2 is dropped as a dittograph. A similar confusion of \supset and \supset has taken place in \supset of vs. 12a, cf. 65 7is; and for the force of 22 here, see Am. 7:2, 5. Dan of vs. 13 is the infin. abs. with the force of an imperative; this furnishes the basis for the second person forms of 13b and 14a. For vs. 15b, see Cheyne, Jewish Quarterly Review, X, 577.

§ 4. THE OPPRESSION OF THE POOR, 2:1-11

- באור השבי און על משכבותם 2:1 באור הבקר יעשוה כי יש־לאל ידם:
 - י רחמדו שדות וגזלו ובתים ונשאו רעשקו גבר וביתו איש ונחלתו:
 - ו ז (לכן כה אמר יהוה) הנני חשב רעה אשר לא־תמישו מִצַּוְארֹתֵיכֶם ולא תלכו רומה כי עת רעה היא:
 - ביום ההוא ישא עליכם משל
 ונהה נהי לאשר
 חלק עבי יַפַּד בַּהֶבֶל וְאֵין נֵשִּׁיב
 לשוֹבִינוּ שַׂנִינוּ יִחְלַּק שַׁדוֹד נִשְׁהוּנוּ:
 - אל הַפִּיף נְטוֹף לאלה סאל הַפִּיר בית יעקב כלמות:
 - י הקצר רוח יהוה אם־אלה מעלליו הלוא דְבָרָיו ייטיבו עם יְשְׂרָאֵל:
- י וְאַהֶּם לְעַבִּי לאויב הָּקוּמוּ עַל־שׁלְמִים s v
 - י נשי עלי תגרשון מִבְּנֵי תַּצְנָנֵיהֶן מעל עללֵיהֶן תקחו הדרי לשלם:
 - יסן פומר ולכו כי לא־זאת המנוחה 10 vi בעבור טָפָאָה תִּחְבַּלוּ חבל נמרץ:

The prevailing movement here is that of the Qinah, except in Strophe II where the announcement of the coming calamity is in short and sharp phrases. The closing strophe containing the final message of dismissal is likewise concise; possibly it should be arranged in four short lines like Strophe II, but vs. 10b seems to show the Qinah movement. Verse 11 is plain prose, and is therefore omitted as a misplaced gloss on vs. 6; its relation to vs. 6 was already recognized by Dathe (1773) and also by Halévy, who transposes it to follow vs. 11. The words introducing the new speaker in Strophe II are no part of the strophe.

In vs. 1, omit ופעלי רע as a gloss, with Wellhausen, Nowack, Oort, and Marti. In vs. 3, על המשפחה הזאת is a gloss (cf. Am. 3:1; Jer. 8:3); so Marti. In vs. 3c the first two letters of are dropped as a dittograph from משם, while the final letter is connected as a preposition with the following word; this emendation removes the difficulty of making DU refer back to the abstract רעה. The reconstruction of vs. 4 is that proposed by Stade (ZAW, VI, 122f.); so also Ruben, Nowack; cf. Marti. The prosaic character of vs. 5 marks it as an interpolation; so Nowack and Marti. Corruption and dittography account for the state of MT in vs. 6a. The first word of vs. 7 is to be read with &; it is a gloss on בית יעקב, which latter originally belonged after שיג as its emphatic object. The proximity of בית יעקב perhaps affected the gender of ישיג, though agreement of a verb with its subject is, of course, not obligatory when the verb stands first. If the position of בית יעקב in MT be correct, the meaning is, "the speaker is the house of Jacob," and the entire phrase is a gloss. In vs. 8a, TR is a gloss on the corrupt שלמהו.

§ 5. THE RETURN OF THE EXILES, 2:12, 13

12 אסף אאסף יעקב כְּלֵּוֹ קבץ אקבץ שארית ישראל יחד אשימנו כצאן בַּצִּרָה כעדר בתוך הַהֹּבֶר: 12 עלה הפרץ לפניהם פרצו שער ויצאו בו ויעבר מלכם לפניהם וייבר מלכם לפניהם

The more important variations from MT in this eight-line strophe are, first, the dropping of the last two words of vs. 12 as a corrupt gloss, and, second, the omission of דיעברן from vs. 13b as a dittograph from the following line.

§ 6. DENUNCIATION OF THE LEADERS AND PROPHETS, 3:1-8

[אבר] 3:1 I

שמערכא ראשי יעקב וקציני בית ישראל הלוא לכם לדעת את-המשפם:

20 שנאי טוב ואהבי רַע

- שר אכלן שאר עבי וערם מעליהם הפשיטו ואת־עצמתיהם פצחו ופרשו פּשָׁאַר בסיר וכבשר בתוך־קלחת:
 - אז יזעקו אל־יהוה ולא יענה אותם ויסתר פניו מהם כאשר הרעו מעלליהם:
 - ז ז [כה אמר יהוה] על־הנביאים המתעים את־עמי הנשכים בשניהם וקראו שלום ואשר לא־יתן על־פיהם וקדשו עליו מלחמה:
 - י 6 לכן לילה לכם מחזון וַחְשֵּׁכָה לכם מקסם ובאה השמש על־הנביאים וקדר עליהם היום:
 - י רבשו החזים וחפרו הקסמים ועמו על-שפם כלם כי אין מענה אלהים
 - ואולם אנכי מלאתי כח ומשפט וגבורה להגיד ליעקב פשעי ולישראל חטאתו:

This piece consists of three strophes dealing with the judges and princes, three devoted to the false prophets, and a closing strophe setting forth the speaker's own qualifications for the prophetic and judicial office. The climax of the doom upon both judges and prophets is the refusal of Yahweh to hear their cry (Strophes III and VI). In this arrangement vs. 2b, c is omitted as a variant of vs. 3; so Wellhausen, Nowack, Marti; Löhr omits all except בול", but supposes these lines were inserted to supply the place of the missing original. In vs. 4 בעו הודא is superfluous in meter and in sense, being a mere repetition of TR at the beginning of the verse. The האמר of vs. 1 and the introductory formula in vs. 5 are extraneous to their respective strophes. In vs. 8 omit ההו ההו הוה או with Wellhausen, Nowack, Marti, et al. Löhr's arrangement of this section and the following, with the omission of vss. 5-8, in eight strophes of three lines each, a tetrameter followed by two trimeters, fails to recognize the symmetrical relations between vss. 1-4 and 5-8 and involves too drastic and arbitrary treatment of the Massoretic text. An inflexible meter of 4+3+3 for each strophe makes too great inroads upon textual integrity. The fact that Löhr's article did not reach me until after my manuscript was sent to the printer prevents more extended discussion here.

§ 7. THE DOOM OF JERUSALEM, 3:9-12

פ שמערינא זאת ראשי בית יעקב וקציני בית ישראל המתעבים משפט ואת כל-הישרה יעקשו:
 ביב ציון בדמים וירושלים בעולה:

11 ראשיה בשחד ישפטו וכהניה במחיר יורו ונביאיה בכסף יקסמו ועל־יהוה ישענו לאמר הלוא יהוה בקרבנו לאדתבוא עלינו רעה: ייון בגללכם ציון שדה תחרש וירושלם עָיִים תדיה והר הבית לבַמַת ישר:

This is the first section in the genuine Micah material to depart from the norm of the four-line strophe. Marti finds that norm here also. But to organize strophes of four lines here is to separate things that belong together; the To of vs. 10 clearly designates the persons already mentioned in vs. 9, and is inseparable from vs. 9. The three groups mentioned in vs. 11 belong together as the constituent elements of the class addressed in Strophe I; chiefs, priests, and prophets form the great triumvirate, from which the prophets may not be separated and considered by themselves.

The text of this portion is well preserved, requiring few emendations and no transpositions or excisions.

§ 8. AN IDEAL OF YAHWEH'S WORLD-DOMINION, 4:1-5

1 ב-1 והיה, באחרית הימים יהיה הר בית־יהוה נכון בראש ההרים ונשא הוא מגבעת ונהרו עליו עמים: 2 והלכו גוים רבים ואמרו

ו לכי ונעלה אל-הרייהוה ואליבית אלהי יעקב ויורנו מדרכיו ונלכה בארחתיו כי מציון תצא תורה ודבר יהוה מירושלם:

שפט בין־עמים רבים רהוכיח לגוים עצמים וכתתו חרבתיהם לאתים

וחניתתיהם למזמרות לארישאו גוי אלרגוי חרב ולארילמדון עוד מלחמה:

וישבו איש תחת גפנו
 ותחת תאנתו ואין מחריד
 כי־פי יהוה צבאות דבר:
 כי כלידועמים ילכו
 איש בשם אלהיו
 ואנחנו נלך בשם־יהוה
 אלהינו לעולם ועד:]

The original material here stops with vs. 3. Practically all interpreters now concede the separation of vs. 5. Marti also eliminates vs. 4c. But in view of the absence of vs. 4 from the parallel passage in Isaiah, and of the further fact that it is composed of stock phrases which add nothing to the description in vss. 1-3, it seems justifiable to assign the whole of vs. 4 to editorial expansion; point of vs. 3b is due to the same cause. The three six-line strophes of vss. 1-3 are logically distinct, and the progress of thought is clear: Strophe I states the fact that the temple of Yahweh is to become the rallying-point of the nations; Strophe II indicates the motive of the nations in coming; Strophe III describes the idyllic peace resulting from the world-wide acceptance of Yahweh and his law.

§ 9. THE DOOM OF EXILE AND A PROMISE OF RESTORATION, 4:6-10

עתה למה תריעי רע
 המלך אין בך
 אם יועצך אבד
 כי-ההזיקך היל כיולדה:

¹This conclusion was reached in entire independence of the discussion by François Ladame, Revue de théologie et de philosophie, 1902, pp. 446 ff., in which the same decision is expressed.

- חולי וגחי בתדציון כיולדה
 כייעתה תצאי מקריה ושכנת בשדה
 ובאת עד בבל שם תנצלי
 שם יגאלך יהוה מכת איביך:
 - יום ההוא נאם־יהוה אספה הצלעה והנדחה אקבצה ואשר הרעתי:
 - י ושמתי את־הצלעה לשארית יהַפַּחֲלָה לגוי עצום ומלך יהוה עליהם בהר ציון מעתה ועד עולם
 - ז אתה מגדל עדר
 עפל בת ציון
 עדיך תאתה הממשלה הראשנה
 ובאה ממלכת בֵּית־יִשׂרָאֵל;

§ 10. THE TRIUMPH OF YAHWEH'S PEOPLE OVER ALL ITS FOES, 4: 11-14

> ו ו ועתה נאספו עליך u ו גרים רבים האמרים תחנם ותחו בציון עינינו: 12 והמה לא־ידעו מחשבות־ידוה ולא הבינו עצחו כרקבצם כעמיר גרנה:

> > ש פומי ודושי בתיציון ב כרקונך אשים ברזל ופרסתיך אשים נחושה והדקות עמים רבים והחרמת ליהוה בצעם וחילם לארון כל־הארץ:

> > > ועתה תגדדי בתיגדוד מצור שמה עלינו בשבם יכו על-הלחי ארשפט ישראל:]

Vs. 14 is added here merely for the sake of completeness. There is general agreement that it has no connection with vss. 11-13, but belongs elsewhere. Its closest connection is with 4:9, and it might possibly be placed at the head of that section as the opening strophe; but after all, it seems somewhat superfluous even there, and had better remain unattached. The two strophes of this section present each a phase of the situation which the prophet is depicting, and both together form a complete representation. The text of the passage is practically perfect.

> § 11. THE MESSIANIC KING, 5: 1-3 5:1 ואתה בית אפרתה הַצַּעִיר באלפי יהודה

להיות מושל בישראל ומוצאתיו מקדם מימי־עולם: יועמד ורעה בעדיהוה בגאון שם־יהוה אלהיו כירעתה יגדל עדאפסי־ארץ:

This eight-lined strophe is secured by omitting vs. 2 as a gloss interrupting the connection of vss. 1 and 3; so also Duhm (on Isa. 17:14), Wellhausen, Nowack, and Marti. In line 1 סול is omitted as a gloss (cf. 6); so also Roorda, Pont, Wellhausen, G. A. Smith, Nowack, Oort, Marti, et al. In line 2 סול ווה is omitted as a dittograph from line 4. ביי ווא is dropped from the beginning of line 8 as a gloss made in view of vs. 2; it is also superfluous metrically. Verse 2 reads:

לכן יתנם עדיעת יולדה ילדה ויתר אחיו ישובון עליבני ישראל:

§ 12. JUDAH'S FUTURE PROTECTORS FROM ASSYRIA, 5:4, 5

והיה זה שלום מֵאַשׁוּר
 כי יבא בארצנו
 וכי ידרך בְּאַדְטְתֵנוּ
 והקמנו עליו שבעה רעים
 ושנה נסיכי אדם:
 ורע את־ארץ אשור בחרב
 ואת־ארץ נמרוד בַּפְּתִידְה
 וְהָאָילוּ מאשור
 כי יבוא בארצנו
 וכי ידרך בגבולנו:
 וכי ידרך בגבולנו:

This ten-lined strophe is generally conceded to have no relationship to its immediate context. Reference to any recent commentary will furnish the facts necessary to substantiate the claim of this passage to logical independence. The only new textual element in this arrangement is in the reading which is strained in line I meeted if verig real with line I as a course penders. For I I I in the sense improved includes a management personal terms are included in members a management personal terms and the increase in the increase and the increase at the mose.

IN THE COURT EMERGENCE AND INTERSTITED MIGHT

The connection of vs. 5 with vss. 5 and 7 is at the best very large, even with the change of text from the precative to the declarative form of the verb. With vs. 9 connection is entirely lacking. The question must present itself as to whether vs. 8 is not a marginal note on vs. 7. The strophic structure supports an affirmative answer.

§ 14. ISRAEL'S PURIFICATION THROUGH CHASTISEMENT, 5: 9-14

י • הדה בים הדא אפרידה הציתי מסך מקיבן האפתי מיכמיך: יו והכרתי ערי ארצך והרסתי כל מבצריך:

> ונתשתי אשיריך מקרבך והשמדתי עריך: 14 ועשיתי באם ובחמה נקם את-הגוים אשר לא שמעו:]

This piece consists of two four-line strophes, with an introductory prose line (vs. 9a), and two additional verses from the hands of redactors (vss. 13, 14). Wellhausen and Nowack have already set forth the grounds for athetizing vs. 14. It seems equally clear that vs. 13 must likewise be set aside; 13b as it stands is a weak repetition of vs. 10, and if the common correcbe made the case is not improved, for it then becomes superfluous after vs. 12; 13a is an editorial insertion of an additional detail in the description. The real climax and natural stopping-point of the piece is at the end of vs. 12; anything additional weakens the effect. Strophe I foretells the destruction of the munitions of war in which Israel puts confidence instead of trusting to Yahweh; Strophe II deals with idolatrous practices which likewise lead Israel away from Yahweh. The assonance of the piece is remarkable, notably in the repetiand the pronominal suffix ק.

§ 15. YAHWEH'S CONTROVERSY WITH ISRAEL, 6:1-5

שמערינא את הַדָּבָר אשר יהוה; אמר קום ריב אל־ההרים ותשמעה הגבעות קולך:

- שטער הרים את-ריב יהוד: וְהַאֲּוִינוּ מסדי ארץ כיריב ליהוה עם־עמו רעם ישראל יתוכה:
- ינני מהדעשיתי לך ומה הלאתיך ענדיבי: ייס כי העלתיך מארץ מצרים ומבית עבדים פריתיך
- ימי מהדיעץ בלק ומהדענה אתו בלעם זכרינא מן־השטים עד־הגלגל למען דעת צדעות יהוה

In vs. 1a ברות is added with $\mathcal{G}$; so also Marti. Verse $4c^*$ is eliminated as an editorial expansion of $4b$; cf. Marti. The transfer of מבר from vs. 5a to 5c renders 5a parallel in structure to the corresponding line of Strophe III, and also renders 5c susceptible of sensible interpretation. Nowack's omission (Kittel's Biblia Hebraica) of ברבער in vs. 5a and ברבער in 5b is adopted for the sake of the meter.

§ 16. THE CONTENT OF TRUE RELIGION, 6:6-8

- במה אקדם יהוה אכף לאלהי מיום האקדמנו בעולות בעגלים בני שנה:
- ז הירצה יהוה באלפי אילים ברבבות נחלי שמן האתן בכורי פשעי פרי בטני חטאת נפשי:

יאשלה לפניך את־משה אהרן ומרים .vis.

הגידילך אדם מהימוב ומהייהוה דורש ממך כי-אםיעשות משפט ואהבת חסד והצנע לכת עם-אלהיך:

This section lends itself readily to strophic analysis; no textual changes, transpositions, or omissions are necessary. The opening of the second strophe is marked by the change of subject, and the beginning of the third by the change from question to answer.

§17. THE SIN OF JERUSALEM AND THE PUNISHMENT TO COME, 6:9-16

- 94.0 קול יהוה לעיר יקרא ממעו מטה ומועד העיר: 124.0 אשר עשיריה מלאו חמס וישביה דברו שקר
- ון יי הַאֶּשֶׁה בית־רשע אַבְּרוֹת ואיפת רזון זעומה: וו הַאֲזַפֵּהְ במאזני רשע ובכיס אבני מרמה:
- 132 וגם־אני הַחָלּוֹתִי הכותך 135, 140 השמם על־חטאותיך וישחך בקרבך 146, d 140, d ואשר תפלט לחרב אתן:
 - 140 IV אתה תאכל ולא תשבע 15 אתה תזרע ולא תקצור אתה תדרך־זית ולא־תסוך שמן ותירוש ולא תשתה־יין:
 - י פון הַשְּׁמֵר חקות עמרי וכל מעשה בית־אחאב למען תתי אתך לשמה וישביה לשרקה Strophes I and II denounce the sins of Jerusalem; Strophes III and IV announce the consequent punishment; and Strophe V summarizes both sin and punishment. This arrangement is essentially that of Marti, though certain elements in it (viz., the elision of vs. 9b as a late gloss, the transposition of vs. 12a, b to follow vs. 9, and the transposition of vs. 14a to precede vs. 15a) had commended themselves to me before seeing Marti's treatment. In vs. 10a the final דשל is dropped as a dittograph. Verse 12c is a gloss on 12b. The transposition of vs. 14a leaves 14b to be joined to vs. 13b, and suggests some meaning for 'cor its original) parallel to TINIT; Marti's conjectural correction to is not felicitous. The glosses, vs. 16c, במעצותם, and 16f, מרכת עמים חשאר, are also omitted, with Marti.

§ 18. THE TOTAL CORRUPTION OF THE PEOPLE, 7:1-6

אבד חסיד מן־הארץ וישר באדם אין כלם לדמים יארבו איש את-אחידו יצודו חרם:

להרע כפיהם היטיבו השר שאל בשלום והגדול דבר הות־נפשו הוא ויעבתוה:

> שובם כחדק ישרם פמסוכה יום פקדתם באה צתה תהיה מבוכתם:

אל תאמינו ברע אל תבטחו באלוף משכבת חיקך שמר פתחי פיך:

סרבן מנבל אב
 בת קמה באמה
 כלה בחמתה
 איבי איש אנשי ביתו:

In this passage vs. 3 has become almost unintelligible according to MT; in 3a להרע is read with Marti and Nowack (in Kittel, Biblia Hebraica); is the reading of אוריים וויים is read with אוריים is omitted as a gloss upon אוריים; the renderings of the versions point in this direction; it is unnecessary to include the preposition in the gloss as do Marti and Nowack, for is a good Hebrew idiom. The original reading of vs. 3d seems beyond recovery; Marti's שוויים is omitted as a euphemistic gloss on וויים וויים is omitted as a euphemistic gloss on וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים וויים ווויים וויים
§ 19. THE DISCOMFITURE OF THE FOE, 7:7-10

ז אל־תשמחי איבתי ליכי נפלתי קמתיכי אשב בחשךידוה אור לי:

ידקה אשא ידורה אשא כי חמאתי לו עד־אשר יריב ריבי ועשה משפטי

יוציאני לאור אראה בצדקתו: 10 ותרא איבתי ותכסה בושה יז האמרה אלי איו יהוה אלהיך עיני תראינה בה עתה תהיה למרמס:

Verse 7 is a three-lined stanza which is omitted here as an interpolation designed to furnish a closer connection between vss. 1-6 and vss. 8-10. Its text runs:

ואני ביהוה אצפה אוחילה לאלהי ישעי ישמעני אלהי:

The dimeter movement is marked in vss. 8-10; the verses might be grouped into two tetrameter strophes, but both metrically and logically the present arrangement seems preferable. The words כמים הוצות are omitted from vs. 10 as a gloss; so Marti and Nowack (in Kittel's Biblia Hebraica).

§ 20. THE IMMINENT RETURN OF THE EXILES AND THE VINDICATION OF YAHWEH, 7:11-13

יום הוא לכנות גדריך היום ההוא ירחקרחק: מני אשור וַשְּרֵי מצור ולמני מצור ועדינהר וים מים והר מֵהָר: והיתה הארץ לשממה עליישביה מפרי מעלליהם:

The general meaning of this eight-lined strophe is quite clear, and it is complete in itself.
